Richmond—Many theatres in Virginia will be forced to close if the ten per cent admission tax being proposed is made law.

Lucien H. Shrader of Amherst is author of the measure, the third within the last five years. The nut of Virginia theatres, due to the sound development, is so high that if the tax is added, profitable operation will be impossible in many instances, it is declared. The money collected on the proposed tax would be used for school purposes under the plan.

The administration, headed by Gov. John Garland Pollard, is declared opposed to any measures which will harrass the amusement business.

Remains Silent

Charles Chaplin says he will make no talkie, at least for the present. He is making a silent picture that has already cost a million, and thinks his silence more eloquent than his voice, asking you to notice that the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth forth His handiwork, silently, not in talkie fashion.

Chaplin said, and may be right: "A good talking picture is inferior to a good stage play, while a good silent picture is superior to a good stage play."—Arthur Brisbane in "The N. Y. American.

Famous Canadian to Rebuild House Burned at Winnipeg

Sunday Show Ordinance is Again Vetoed at Binghamton

Binghamton, N. Y.—Mayor Boyd for the third time has vetoed an ordinance to permit Sunday shows.

Television Seen As Aid to Film Houses

Television in the home will only serve to stimulate attendance at pictures, in the opinion of William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, as expressed in the current issue of "Screenland."

The herd instinct, Paley maintains in this article, is the safeguard for films and the theatre. Radio, he believes, is merely a supplement to the charms of home life, but it will never keep people at their own firesides.

Even when television is perfected on a commercial scale and televised subjects are broadcast into millions of homes, he continues, the picture theatre will gain, rather than lose, in popularity. Television will play a large part in the very theatres that some feel it threatens, he believes.

Film Academy to Invite New Class of Members

Hollywood.—New membership classifications in the Academy of Arts and Sciences are nearing completion as the result of proposed amendments to the constitution. The new classifications will be available to all branches of the society.

The Market Abroad

Multi-Lingual Plan Heartens British

London.—Stimulation of British production is being forecast here as a result of the talker development. This is expected to take the form of multi-lingual pictures, along the lines of the Williams' plan, sponsored by Sir Gordon Craig. This calls for the making of talkers in six languages, using the same sets on all versions. About 200 films could be distributed in Europe each year under this plan, it is figured.

British International To Expand Production

London, Gratification over the reception accorded the 20 pictures produced last year, 12 of them talkers, and hint of an enlarged program for this year, is set forth in letter to stockholders by John Maxwell, chairman of British International Pictures. The company now has eight sound stages, he says. Its subsidiary, Associated British Cinemas, now has a chain of 110 theatres.

Other subsidiaries are: British Cinema, First National Pathe and Wardour Films. Action on the dividend will await close of the financial year, March 31.

Product of British International is distributed in the United States and Canada by Sono Art-World Wide Films, with physical distribution through Educational exchanges.

British Firm Plans Series of Features and Shorts

London—Associated Sound Film Industries is planning seven talker features and one series of talker shorts, in co-operation with Tobis. A number of the subjects are to be made in several languages and some will employ color.

Seat Increase Slow in Germany During Year

Berlin.—Theatre building in Germany lagged during 1929, the number of seats increasing by one per cent as against 11 per cent in 1928. There now are 5,076 theatres in Germany, with capacity of 1,946,613, or one seat for every 30 persons.

B. & K. Reported Taking Over Last Ascher House

Chicago—Ascher Bros. again are without a theatre. Balaban & Katz are reported to have taken over the Diversey, which for some time past was the sole remaining tie between Aschers, one-time Chicago picture power, and the theatre business. The Aschers, pioneers in the chain house movement, reached a peak several years ago when they operated 20 houses here. Units were abandoned from time to time, and with the acquisition by the Fox chain of the Sheridan, Commercial, Portage Park, Mid-West, Terminal and Crown the Ascher name seemed about to pass from Chicago's theatre business. Soon after, however, it was announced they had re-entered the field by acquiring the Diversey from RKO.

"Broadway" Shown in German at Frisco House

San Francisco—A novel program was given at the RKO Orpheum when "Broadway" was shown entirely in German dialogue, with the posters in front of the house designed in German and ad copy in the newspapers voiced in the tongue of the Fatherland.

This is the print at present showing in Berlin and other German cities. The occasion for the showing at the Orpheum was the appearance of the Pacific Saengerbund, a singing society of 200 voices.

Artistry Plus Showmanship

Another theatre is credited to the Fox organization with the recent opening of the Fox in Appleton, Wis. Electrical display makes this house stand out as a credit to good showmanship

ARCHITECTURAL science of the time of Columbus has reached across the seas and joined hands with that of the twentieth century.

Result—the new Fox theatre in Appleton, Wisconsin.

The richness of old Granada has lent itself to the decorative scheme in the theatre with all the vividness of the Moorish trend.

Going into the foyer the patron is greeted with rich tapestries and fabrics against a background of decorative effects that only the Moors knew how to bring out. Floors are laid in strikingly colored tile. Textured walls are done in delicate reds, blues and golds.

Wrought iron balconies in grill work stand out from the walls in the grand foyer. Pendant from these are bright-colored Spanish silks, Moorish shawls and draperies. The floors are thickly carpeted with vivid Oriental rugs. Massive period furniture has been used sparingly giving the foyer a spacious appearance of ease and freedom.

Once in the auditorium the splendor and brilliance of a typical Moorish sky, flooded in sunlight, greets the eye. Stars twinkle overhead out of the softness of a moonlit night.

The auditorium follows the Spanish patio style enclosed by towering walls decorated with creeping vines and still flowers. Hand wrought iron fixtures and grill work are in evidence.

The carpeting is of unique design done in an elaborate color scheme in harmony with the bright colors always associated with Moorish decorative art. Upholstered velour seats arranged and constructed for their beauty and comfort are used.

Rare paintings, rich tapestries and objects of art are seen in the mezzanine. The lounging and rest rooms are examples of combined beauty and restfulness.

The design, plans, furnishings and decorating are the work of the United Studios, Inc., Chicago.

The Fox is one of the chain of 43 Fox Midwesco theatres in Wisconsin. For the presentation of sound pictures the Fox Appleton has been equipped with the best the science of acoustic affords. Here the human voice is heard as a voice not as a reproduction.

Mezzanine Foyer in Fox retains Moorish trend

A MODERN ventilating change of air in the system provides a theatre every six minutes using 60,000 cubic feet of air with every change. The refrigeration plant insures an average temperature of 75 degrees regardless of how the thermometer registers on the outside. Heat is supplied by an oil-burner system consuming 500 gallons of oil daily when burners are running full speed ahead.

¶Assurance of the best possible sound results is given by the special treatment of side walls and ceiling with special acoustical plaster preventing the reverberation of sound.

¶A sub-power station supplies the electrical current used for power and light, including the operation of a 150-h. p. synchronous motor used for the refrigeration plant. The switchboard with remote control is equipped with a pre-set arrangement for varied set-ups in attaining lighting effects. An emergency system, independent of the city system, insures electrical power for the theatre at all times.

¶The Fox has a seating capacity of 2,036 and represents an investment of $350,000. The structure is 72 by 80 feet, of reinforced concrete, steel and brick and is the nearest approach to fireproofing science has perfected.

¶The theatre's interior decoration probably accentuates the Moorish style of harmony to a degree of near-perfection.

¶The Moorish style lends itself, first of all, to marked simplicity. A certain spaciousness is made possible eliminating that sense of "too much" decoration which is found in many buildings which have not been decorated with harmonizing arrangement as an element.

¶The same simple scheme is followed out throughout, even extending to the free, open flat spaces on the decorative ceiling where embossed panelling work has been used effectively.

¶The walls, too, are and example of simplicity itself with the flat surfaces broken only occasionally by decorative plaques of small design.

A Modernistic Trend Followed

A CENTURY Circuit theatre, seating 1,900, the new Sheepshead, at Sheepshead Bay, near Coney Island, New York, brings the circuit's total in the Brooklyn and Long Island district to 26.

In pronounced modernistic design, the Sheepshead has been built in conformity with the strictest laws of artistry.

Bringing a definite refinement to the Sheepshead Bay district, the new theatre stands out as a colorful individual among amusement houses.

Both exterior and interior have been done in accordance with the modernistic trend in theatre construction. The decorative color scheme is in henna, mellow green and silver and gold. The walls are embellished with mural decorations divided between floral designs and birds of plumage.

A Fantastic Curtain

The main stage curtain carries out the general decorative scheme with a hand painted tapestry of a fantastic nature.

A special feature of the Sheepshead is the unique treatment of the orchestra pit with its modernistic steps. Indirect lighting effects are used throughout the house.

The design and decorative scheme are the work of William Rau, of the Rau Studios, Inc. The furnishings were arranged by Teresa Jackson. The construction work was done by A. H. Schwartz, of the Homack Construction Company. Thomas R. Short was architect.

Refinement seems to have been the watchword of all connected with the completion of this palace erected to the presentation of sound pictures.

Lounge Oval-Shaped

The lounge on the mezzanine floor immediately impresses with the refined effect sought. It is oval in shape. This, in itself, is modernistic to the extreme. Mural decorations on the walls of the lounge are done in henna, black, silver and green. Draperies are in henna and green.

"Like a palatial home" is the way one patron described it.

An Appeal to Women

Like all works aspiring to the beautiful, the new Sheepshead has not forgotten its women patrons. The lounge keeps to the modernistic scheme with the French idea accentuated. Delicacy seems to have been the watchword in every touch given this corner devoted to the comforts of the woman patron.

Throughout the theatre, furnishings greet the eye that not only stand out for their simple beauty, but strike the observer as being put where they are to lend quiet and refinement rather than to attract special attention. All invites an assured comfort with emphasis on that comfort always due the senses. One not only is at home, but feels at home.

On entering the theatre one immediately senses the difference, between pretense and an endeavor to please without the blare of trumpets.

An Effective Simplicity

It is at once evident that the designers appreciated the simplicity that must be evident to conform with the modernistic trend.

The view obtained from an end balcony seat looking toward one end of the proscenium arch and onto the side wall, taking in the ceiling with its ornamental chandelier giving off a soft overhead lighting effect is one of the luxury, yet the essence of simplicity.

The sidewall panelings, the cozy warmth of the loge effect, the straight lines of the draperies over the proscenium—all tend to incite relaxation in the patron.

"The modernistic design in theatre interiors seems to meet in every way the undeniably modernity of the sound element in motion pictures," is the way one architect expressed it.

In no part of the theatre is modernism in design followed more closely than in the proscenium arch

A corner beautiful in the new Sheepshead

INTERIOR decoration in the Sheepshead Theatre renders a fine example of what can be accomplished when an architectural design of simplicity is employed in planning the building, inside and out.

This undisputed artistic addition to the architectural beauty of Sheepshead Bay's business district has been modelled after a design that starts and ends with the simplest of decorations.

There is nothing that can defeat the beauty of simple line and that is just what the architects have attained in designing this temple of beauty to the art of the motion picture.

Sidewalks Are Plain

The sidewalls, alone, represent simple plainness. Viewing the interior of the theatre at a diagonal slant from a balcony seat one looks upon one end of the procenium arch with a sidewall as a relief.

The walls are done in simple panellings, laid far apart with a flat surface between that attracts attention solely because of its plainness.

The decorations have been made to serve as subsidiaries to the attraction on the screen.

The fact that the surrounding decorations to any building housing a place of amusement accentuates the simple, tends to draw attention, not only to the screen attraction but, equally, to the house that screens it.

This should be one of the major objectives of the present-day exhibitor—to please the eye from the standpoint of the architectural connoisseur as well as the patron who wagers his all on the presentation on the screen.

The watchword of the Sheepshead Theatre's general scheme is simplicity which always spells beauty.

Both Needs Met

The Sheepshead Theatre has been designed to meet both of these needs. The very fundamental of its architectural design and interior decoration hinges on the simplicity of the Modernistic designing its builders chose for the dominating element of its construction.

The basic idea of the Modernistic style of architecture is just what the Sheepshead has attained—simplicity.

Ceilings Follow Style

Go to the ceilings. There the patron finds the same extended simplicity as is carried out in the general design of the theatre at large from an interior standpoint.

Embossed panellings stand out with all the prominence of blemishes on the facial skin of an otherwise perfect feminine beauty.

Wide, open, flat spaces have been left which leaves the impression that beauty is not dependent upon lavishness.

All Requirements Met

Every detail meets with the requirements of modernistic art and adheres strictly to the formula.

Nothing meets the eye on entering the Sheepshead Theatre that tends to arouse any feeling other than one of restful comfort.

Old Theatre Made Thing of Beauty

NO plastic surgeon ever restored the facial beauty of a woman to greater perfection than architects have remodeled the Pabst theatre in Milwaukee.

It is the work of Alexander H. Bauer, of Dick and Bauer, Inc., architects. Bauer has made of an old-time theatre one of the finest works of architectural beauty in the midwest.

Among other changes made was in the main staircase, changed from a T-shape to a straight run. The entire stair was removed and new steel stair provided to support marble work. The theatre's basement was renovated to provide for a large, common lounge, ladies' room and men's smoker.

The loges on the sides of the auditorium were removed. A new organ screen was built into the proscenium arch. New drapes, carpets and seats were put in as were new heating and ventilating systems. It stands today as a shining example of what can be done with old material as a foundation.

Ballroom of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, N. Y., using only the white light under the Colorama system. As various colors come into play any desired effect of color or design may be had at the will of the operator

A Radical Lighting Innovation Looms

"Colorama" May Be the Revolutionary Force to Point the Way To Hitherto Untouched Phases in Theatre Presentation

AN entirely new idea in interior decorating through the medium of colored light that paints countless designs and colors on walls and ceilings at will, has been developed by F. J. Cadenas, illuminating engineer of the General Electric Company. The first commercial installation of the system has been made by Mr. Cadenas in the ballroom of the Hotel St. George with the co-operation of Winold Reiss, decorator.

The idea, as previously exhibited in model form before architects attending the recent Memphis Exposition of Architecture and Industrial Arts and at various illuminating engineers' meetings, essentially consists of two controllable factors. First, placing colored lights in front of and behind a series of vertically pleated flutes, these lights being reflected on a cove. Second, these colors form designs changeable at will, or other master patterns, due to the cutting off of the light rays by the flutes.

The result is that one operator may decorate a room for a morning wedding, change the scheme for a luncheon, adapt an entirely new conception for an afternoon bridge party, paint college colors on the walls and ceilings for a fraternity dance, and so on ad infinitum. Colors and designs may be changed at will, the glory of a sunrise merging into the dusky grayness of a storm at sea; ghastly green faces appearing and disappearing, changing to floral or other designs as the operator wills, and at an instant's notice. It is like a master organist with the whole gamut of colors as his keyboard, combining his tones and harmonies as the spirit moves.

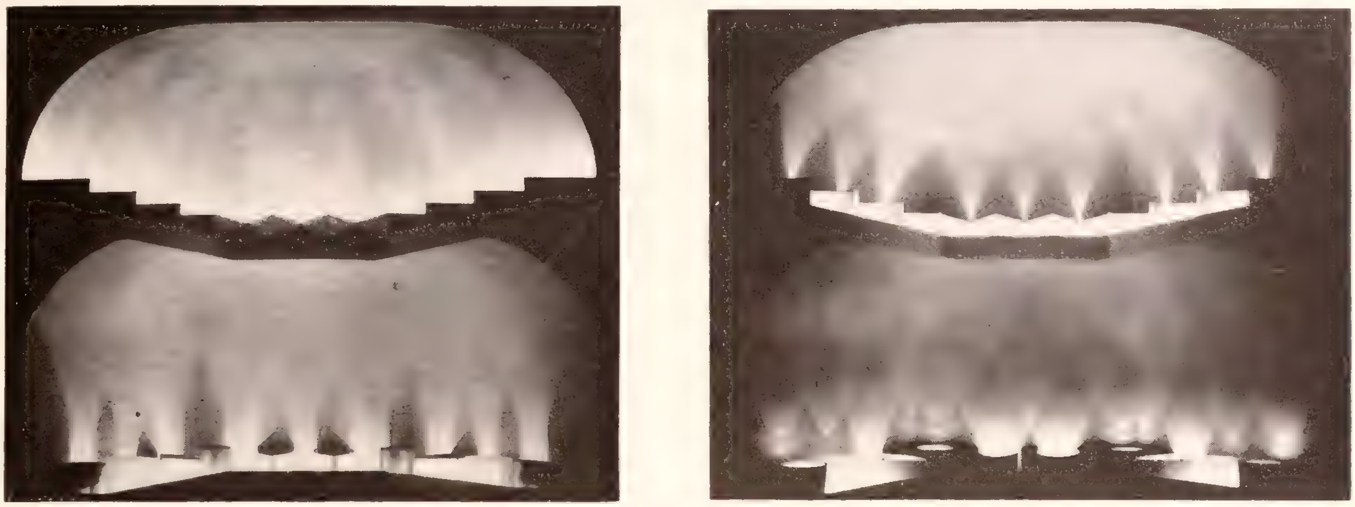
Twenty-eight hundred people attended the opening of the first commercial installation of the system at the ballroom of the St. George Hotel—architects, engineers, bankers, journalists and statesmen. A description of that installation is, essentially, a description of the fundamental principles that permit the system to be adapted to many other locations.

This installation consists essentially of a remote-control switchboard with dimmer plates and a series of light troughs in the room. The troughs contain electric light bulbs covered with color caps arranged in front and in back of vertically pleated flutes which make the shadow and color designs. This equipment permits the use of fixed or moving designs and colors, which may be changed by the control board operator at will, on the walls and ceiling. In addition to controlling the patterns and colors it is also possible to control the intensity of the illumination. The equipment thus serves the dual purpose of illuminaing the room as well as decorating it in a manner suitable for the varying purposes for which the room may be used.

The St. George ballroom has no windows. There are no visible ceiling or wall lighting fixtures. The entire room is finished in flat white paint to provide the "canvas" upon which is "painted" with light various patterns and color combinations. It is estimated that it is possible to secure hundreds of thousands of different combinations of color and light patterns varying from geometrical designs to cloud and other effects. The ballroom has a floor area of 11,000 square feet and a clear ceiling height above the floor of 31 feet. There are two tiers of balconies along the side and back walls.

The lighting system for the walls consists of a series of four separate and parallel coves fitted with vertically-pleated flutes.

This article is reprinted by courtesy of "The American Architect"



Model used in developing the lighting of the St. George Hotel ballroom, showing color gradations and light patterns, which are changeable at the will of the control operator. Above, effect of lights used in back of flutes only. Below, effect of lights used in front of flutes only. Thousands of combinations of pattern and color effects are possible and clear lamps, of various wattages, equipped with color caps, are placed in both the front and back of the flutes.

The lighting system for the ceiling is a series of five inverted troughs, 10 feet wide and 60 feet long, placed symmetrically on 20-foot centers. The troughs are made of No. 20 gauge galvanized iron, in sections of about twenty feet in length. The troughs have saw-tooth openings along the sides through which colored lights and shadows are projected onto the ceiling. In the bottom of the troughs are roundels through which may be projected red, blue, green and white light.

Color effects are obtained by using inside-frosted and clear electric lamps with color caps and aluminum collars. Only clear red, green, blue and white lamps are used, but the color effects which can be obtained from them are unlimited in number. Shades of orange, gray, black, white, yellow, purple and cerise and the tints of red, blue, green, yellow and purple are obtained. The result secured depends both upon the wattage of the lamp employed for each primary color and upon the location of the lamp.

More than 7,000 lamps are installed in the St. George Hotel ballroom, in the flutes and coves, and they range in size from 50 to 1,000 watts. A total of over 630,000 watts is required to operate the various decorating effects so far anticipated. The lighting is controlled from a remote-control board that is approximately 4 by 6 feet in area and contains more than 500 buttons. The switchboard proper is 30 feet long and contains over 200 dimmer plates. If the system were operated by manual control eight men would be required at the switchboard at all times. As designed, one man is able to operate the entire lighting system of the ballroom through the use of the remote-control board.

Over 82 miles of wire is used in the installation. It is stated that over 3000 square feet of steam heating radiation was omitted from the ballroom owing to the heat generated by the lights. The installation in the hotel ballroom cost approximately $150,000. This cost is, of course, offset by the saving in cost of decorating the walls and ceiling in the usual manner.

The following schedule of lamps used in the top wall cove near the ceiling will give some conception of the lighting arrangement in the troughs. This cove contains 172 flutes. Each front flute contains two 100 watt blue, two 60 watt red, two 50 watt green and one 100 watt clear lamps. Back flutes are equipped with one 200 watt blue, one 100 watt red, one 75 watt green and one 100 watt clear lamps. The total lamps and wattages used in this particular cove is as follows:

Squawkies Give Way to Talkies

Growing Knowledge of Acoustics Makes Theatre Reproduction More True Than Ever Before

By S. K. Wolf*

Theatre Acoustics Engineer, Electrical Research Products, Inc.

THE addition of sound to motion pictures has changed the entertainment standards of the public. Unfortunately it also has inflicted upon the unsuspecting public its bi-product for which I can think of no better name than the "squawkie."

This short talk on sound pictures has been prompted by the interest and keen desire on the part of the public to learn more about sound pictures. If you will wait just a minute before tuning me out, I will give you some reasons why you derive a keen enjoyment out of some talking pictures and dislike others, or why talkies please you and squawkies displease you. I will limit my remarks to the sound and operating differences, independent of the story or the picture.

As you realize, it was not so long ago that the squawkies took the upper hand and I remember the advice I received from a friend of mine when I informed him that I was entering the talking movie picture business. He suggested that as an alternative, if I were really interested in making money, would be to stand in front of the theatres and sell ear muffs rather than waste my time trying to improve the talkies. At that time, his suggestion, at least, was more enterprising, but as I think most of you will admit, progress, the inevitable, has blessed the talkie and materially aided it in its fight against the "squawkie."

A Problem in Acoustics

Perhaps the best test of a good talkie is how well we understand the words spoken from the screen and how pleasant the music sounds. The understandability of speech and the pleasantness of music depend largely upon the theatre. I will explain the word "acoustics." It is by definition that branch of physics which treats of the laws and behavior of sound as applied to our sense of hearing.

The acoustics of a theatre may be thought of as its sound producing qualities. In order that the sound producing qualities of a theatre be good, or that speech be understood and music be pleasant to listen to, certain requirements must be met.

Should Avoid Loudness

In talking pictures, the first requirements, that of loudness, is easy to attain, being a mechanical system which may be regulated as simply as the loudness of a radio. However, one of the most serious obstacles to good acoustics is the fact that sound in many theatres is operated too loudly. Even today there are being shown sound pictures of unusual merit and excellent recording that drive patrons out nightly, and would drive more out if it had not have been for the price they paid, because of the deafening and unnatural loudness at which the sound is coming from the screen. I am sure you have all experienced listening to radios being operated so loudly that it grates on your nerves. Any sound picture will be inferior and the acoustics of any theatre will be effectively poorer if the sound is too loud.

If we assume that a talking picture is being shown at the proper loudness, there still remain other acoustic obstacles to be avoided, a very important one being the theatre must not be too "reverberant." The reverberation in a theatre refers to sound that lingers or remains after it has been spoken. For example, if a word is spoken and it can still be heard for some time after the speaker has uttered the word, it will interfere and make it difficult to understand the words that follow.

Three Fundamentals Worth Remembering

Sound reproduction in the theatre will be good when the showman observes these three fundamentals:

> The speech and music must be sufficiently loud, but not too loud.
> Each sound must be heard with its proper loudness so as not to affect the reception of one another.
> Every sound, however rapidly uttered whether by speech or music, should be clear and distinct as well as free from other sounds or noises.

Mr. Wolf, expert in matters acoustical, explains why in this article.

The suddenness with which a word is absorbed or dies away depends upon the amount of absorption in the theatre. Hard plaster walls and ceilings found in many theatres and hard concrete floors do not absorb the words, but reflect them and they remain audible for seconds after they have been spoken. Rugs, velour curtains, upholstered chairs and the clothing of the audience all are highly absorbent and therefore quench the sound soon after it has been spoken. Recently a theatre manager asked why the talkies were more easily understood in the winter time than in the summer time. This may seem to you a ridiculous question; however, I am sure you can answer that question now yourselves, assuming every one has not checked his or her coat.

Difficulties of Absorption

An excellent example of a reverberant place would be your bathroom or a sports arena. You have all no doubt experienced difficulty in understanding announcements made in a certain famous sports arena, particularly when it is only partially filled. This is due to the lack of absorption and highly reflecting surfaces used in its construction. The sound simply bounces from wall to wall like a rubber ball before it dies down so that it can no longer be heard.

There is still another acoustic obstacle which affects the proper reception of talking pictures—the echo. Echoes in theatres are caused by domes and curved surfaces in the ceiling, rear wall, and possibly side walls. By definition an echo is the recurrence of a sound at least one-twentieth of a second after the original has been uttered. The dome and curved surfaces, which are generally made of hard plaster will not only reflect the sound from it, but it will concentrate it in a beam and focus it to certain areas generally in the front of the theatre.

Echoes Make Funny Noises

Perhaps one of the most embarrassing acoustic discoveries in the form of an echo is the one cited by Sir John Herschel, who states that in one of the cathedrals at Sicily, the Confessional was so placed that the whispers of the penitents were reflected by the curved roof and brought to a focus at a distant part of the church. The focus was discovered by accident and for some time the person who discovered it took pleasure in hearing and in bringing his friends to hear utterances intended for the priest alone. One day it is said his own wife occupied the confessional stool and both he and his friends were thus made acquainted with secrets which were the reverse of amusing to one of the parties.

Is There a Good Reason Why I Should Reseat My Theatre ?

LOOK FOR THE ANSWER IN YOUR BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS!

There you will find the figures that justify reseating

RESEARCH has shown that old, unattractive, uncomfortable seating is the most common cause for the downward trend of box office receipts.

Look over your chairs...examine them critically. Ask yourself if they are comfortable enough to rest tired bodies. Sit in them yourself. Be sure they are attractive, inviting, and modern. If not — invest in reseating. It will pay you in extra profit and patronage.

Comfort attracts patrons

Reseating brings comfort . . . and comfort brings patronage. That has been proved time and again where modern, attractive, comfortable "American" chairs have been installed. For comfortable seating ranks equally with fine projection and an entertaining show as an attraction to theatre goers.

Get the facts now!

The facts on "American" reseating service are available to you. Write us. We will be glad to send you all data on the logic of reseating and its value to you. There is no obligation to reseat unless it appears the advisable thing to do. Find out how between curtain and overture . . . without a show being interrupted, your theatre can be completely transformed into a favorite with the theatre going crowd!

WHAT THE THEATRE OWNER WANTS TO KNOW ABOUT ACOUSTICS

The average theatre owner is not interested in an abstract discussion about acoustics. All he wants to know is whether or not his customers can hear comfortably. If they cannot he wants to know the cause and the remedy.

*By JOHN S. PARKINSON

MANY sound film theatres need acoustical treatment. In some cases flaws are apparent but very often these flaws may be remedied by a few simple changes in apparatus or furnishings. The fact remains, of course, that many theatres really do require expert advice and treatment. By making a few simple experiments described below, the theatre owner or manager can determine whether poor acoustics are interfering with satisfactory reproduction in his theatre.

Reverberation

The most common acoustical defect is excessive reverberation. This produces an overlapping of successive syllables and musical sounds with an attendant loss in intelligibility.

Nearly everyone has experienced the effect of excessive reverberation. A familiar case is the sound of one's steps reverberating in a long, bare corridor. The opposite effect is obtained in a library or in the rug department of a large store. The difference is obvious, and will convey a fairly accurate idea of how much good hearing conditions depend on the control of reverberation. In a theatre this effect is most noticeable at the end of a sentence, or after an abrupt pause in the dialogue. The sound continues to be heard for two or three seconds, sometimes apparently in far corners of the house.

To check for reverberation, compare a person's normal voice with the sound of the reproducing system and listen for a "hangover" on each pause, then observe whether the condition varies with the size of the audience and whether it is different in various parts of the house.

The quality of the reproduction may be determined with this comparative test by using a person speaking instead of the electrical apparatus. The speaker should stand as close as possible to the horns and speak with approximately the same loudness. Obviously, if he can make himself understood without exercising any undue effort, the fault must lie in the reproducing apparatus.

If hearing conditions improve as the size of the audience increases the probabilities are that the trouble may be laid to reverberation. A single person seated in a theatre furnishes as much sound absorption as 25 square feet of the average drapery. Large audiences sometimes cure excessive reverberation simply by virtue of the tremendous area of absorptive surface which they furnish. For this reason it is useful to compare the afternoon and evening performances.

Echo

Sometimes echo makes itself noticeable through apparent stuttering or blurring in the words. It is necessary to observe whether the word is actually being heard twice. This effect is best observed at the end of a phrase as in the case of reverberation. A simple test can be made if one person will stand next to the horn and clap his hands sharply while someone else listens on the floor of the house. If a confusion of sound ensues it is probably only reverberation, but if one or more of the following sounds stands out sharply an echo is present.

If the difficulty is caused by echo, only certain seats or rows of seats will be affected. In this respect the reports of patrons are often surprisingly reliable. The writer has seen a number of theatres where the patrons of the house seem to know almost exactly where echoes were noticeable. These areas are generally characterized as "dead spots."

The hand clap test may be made conclusive if the person clapping will gradually increase the rate until a steady putt . . . putt . . . putt . . . putt . . . like a motor boat exhaust results. Every alternate impulse will come from the echo. The technique consists of increasing the rate until the echo comes midway between claps at which point the number of reports suddenly appear to have been doubled.

The Remedies

If you find by these tests that you have an acoustical problem it is advisable to call in an acoustical engineer and have him make a thorough analysis. If the problem is found to be reverberation the solution is generally simple—requiring only the installation of a certain amount of absorbent material. This material may take the form of draperies, carpets, and the like, although it is usually better to use one of the various commercial acoustical materials, which meets fire-resisting requirements. From a standpoint of sound-absorbing efficiency, Johns-Manville sound-absorbing materials, which are especially designed for the purpose, are far cheaper than draperies or other improvised materials.

Problems involving echo and so called "dead spots" generally have a similar solution, but the material must be installed in the proper areas, or there will be no correction. To this end it is important to have a competent engineer check your own analysis, since the determination of echoes is largely a matter of experience.

The point which should be emphasized, however, is that in all cases a brief preliminary survey on the part of the owner or manager is desirable and possible. The simple tests described require no previous experience, and ask no more of the ear than it is equipped to give.

If upon making these tests you find that the acoustics of your theatre are interfering with satisfactory reproduction, or if you are still in doubt, call in a Johns-Manville Acoustical Engineer. He will be glad to tell you without charge how the condition can be corrected and prescribe materials that will do the job right at the lowest expense. Address Johns-Manville, New York, Chicago, Cleveland, San Francisco, Toronto.

Keep An Eye on Those Apertures

They're Important in These Days of Sound—This Article Tells What's Being Done Toward Standardization

By Lester Cowan *

Assistant Secretary, Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences

RECENTLY much concern was aroused among Hollywood studio technicians by the fact that in some theatres the heads and feet of characters, important words in titles, and other vital elements of the picture were being cut off in projection of sound-on-film pictures. Projectionists were inserting in the film gate a solid sliding aperture (Fig. 1) which masked out from the top and bottom of the picture an amount sufficient to restore the normal picture proportions. The smaller aperture reduced the height to three-fourths of the width which had been diminished by the addition of the sound track. The smaller rectangular picture when projected with a one-half inch shorter focal length lens filled the screen with a picture equal in area to the silent picture.

Except in a few cases cinematographers had not been warned of the reduced aperture practice. They did not anticipate it in their photography. The result was that parts of the picture were being cut out which cameramen assumed would reach the screen as usual. Studio technicians in general were at a loss to know what to do; they did not know the extent of the practice or the exact size of the reduced aperture. An immediate coordination of studio practices with existing theatre methods was imperative. To this end a nation-wide survey of theatre chain and production studio practices was launched by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences with the assistance of the Technical Bureau of the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

Summary of Survey Data

Theatre Practices

Replies from theatres reveal four different practices, alike in that each provides for matting out the sound track by a movable masking device, but different in their manner of compensating for the screen area left blank because of reduced picture width due to the addition of the sound track. For the sake of convenience let us refer to these four practices or methods as methods A, B, C and D.

Method A—Combination of Reduced Aperture with Shorter Focal Length Lens.—An aperture is inserted in the film gate which masks out, in addition to the sound track, a portion from the top and bottom of the picture sufficient to reduce the height to about three-fourths of the reduced width. The smaller 3 by 4 picture is enlarged by a one-half inch shorter focal length lens to fill the screen. Recentering is accomplished by auxiliary devices which enable the lens on the machine to be moved from right to left. Unless due allowance has been made in production for this smaller aperture vital portions of the picture will almost certainly be cut out. The estimated cost of installing this method is $200.

Method D—Small Blank Strip on Each Side of the Picture.—Rather than leave a blank strip on the left side of the picture some theatres shift the projection machine in order to centre the picture, so as to divide the blank area between the two sides

As conditions are constantly changing it does not seem possible at this time to give an accurate estimate of the number of theatres employing each of the four methods referred to above. From information received it is reasonable to assume that theatres using methods C and D are almost exclusively the smaller houses with less critical audiences due to lower admission prices. These theatres proceed cautiously before adding new devices which increase their overhead or operating expenses. The installation of a flipper costs only about $50 but to this must be added the labor cost of operating it. In many localities the flipper can be operated only by the employment of an extra stage hand. The alternative—a new set of lenses and aperture plates—would cost approximately $200, a very considerable amount to the small theatre owner. It is likely that many of these small houses will continue to show their sound-on-film pictures with a blank strip either on one side or on both sides of the screen.

Practically all of the better class or de luxe houses fall within classes A or B. At present the theatres in class B probably outnumber those in class A but the tendency is definitely toward the spread of the reduced aperture-shorter focal length lens method.

The following example illustrates the rapidly changing conditions and the tendency. Electrical Research Products, Inc., undertook on behalf of the Academy a complete survey of the aperture situation in all theatres west of Denver using "Erpi" equipment. The current practice in 306 theatres was reported by E. R. P. I. field representatives. A tabulation of the reports made on August 9th gave the following results:

Theatres using method A	35
Theatres using method B	123
Theatres using method C	136
Theatres using method D	12
Total	306

On August 20—eleven days later—a supplementary report gave the following additional information: "Since our last report of August 9th Fox West Coast Theatres has decided to equip all of its theatres with the proportional masks and change of lenses." Publix is also doing this in all of theatres in the western part of the country, except those of the Marcus enterprises recently acquired. These new developments would raise the number of theatres first reported as using method A from 35 to at least 100.

Recentering.—Probably the most difficult problem in connection with the reduced aperture method (A) is to recentre the picture after it has been enlarged. The amount masked out from the top and bottom of the picture in reducing the aperture is calculated to balance the increased magnification so that from the standpoint of height the picture will fit into the screen frame. Magnification extends the left margin of the picture to cover about half of the blank strip. The right margin is extended an equal amount beyond the black border so that the picture must be moved to the left in order to be properly centered. Standard equipment now in use does not provide for this need. Movement of the picture from left to right is not possible due to the stationary base which gives a fixed position to the projection machine.

There are two ways in which recentering may be accomplished, both involving the use of auxiliary devices. The first and most common method of recentering is by moving the lens slightly to the left. Publix theatres use a lever operated, horizontally movable lens mount (Fig. 2) which moves the optical centre of the lens 0.080 in. to the left. This introduces spherical aberration which is sometimes noticeable on the screen but usually not enough to be considered a defect. An "Ilex" lens has been developed with optical corrections permitting sharp definition at two focal lengths, thus simplifying the procedure by eliminating the necessity of actual lens changing. The second method of recentering is by use of a device which makes it possible to move the equipment on the horizontal plane. A lever at the front moves the front end of the machine laterally to preset stops.

The newest development which promises a satisfactory solution to the problem is a shifting device (Fig. 3) developed by the Bell Laboratories for the "Erpi" reproducer set for the specific purpose of centering small aperture pictures on the screen.

The shifting device consists primarily of these two units: a pivot plate for the forward pair of legs, and a plate incorporating a pedal mechanism for the rear pair of legs. Provisions are made for anchoring the foot pads of the reproducer set to these units, which in turn are bolted securely to the floor. By proper adjustment of the stop screws on the foot pedal mechanism a full sized picture is centered by depressing the right hand pedal until further motion is halted by the adjustable stop, and the smaller picture is centered bv depressing the left hand pedal. The locking device, which consists of a quick release screw clamp, maintains either position and assures the picture remaining centered. Briefly, the device permits the operator to quickly center either sized picture at will and maintain that position constantly.

Other Aspects of the Reduced Aperture Method.—Attention has been called to several other aspects of the reduced aperture practice.

1. The shorter focal length lens increases the graininess of the picture on the screen. No theatre reported this as a serious defect.
2. One theatre chain called attention to the fact that the smaller aperture slightly reduces the amount of light that gets to the screen. Due to the fact that the size of the picture is increased, this reduced light must cover a larger screen area. However, there has been no indication that this constitutes a serious problem.
3. The projectionist's problem of keeping his picture in the frame is more difficult and requires painstaking care. Although the cameraman may keep his action within the smaller area he usually fills up the balance of the frame with foreground and background for the benefit of theatres using the standard aperture. This means that the projectionist finds no indication on the picture as to the exact line of its upper and lower limits. More is dependent upon his own judgment than formerly and his responsibilities are greater.

Studio Practices

Now let us turn our attention to the studios to see what, if anything, they are doing to meet these changing conditions in the theatre. Twelve studios reported in the Academy survey. All were making allowance in photography for the sound track either through a definite marking on the camera ground glass or through instructions to camera to centre their pictures to the right so that the addition of the sound track would not affect their composition. Two of the twelve studios, Fox and Paramount, who had been in communication with their own theatre chains, were informed of the new practices and accordingly had markings put on their camera ground glasses delineating a smaller rectangle within which all action was to be photographed. The pictures photographed within these new ground glass markings did not suffer from the reduced aperture practice.

As the ground glass markings shown in Table II indicate, when compared with the dimensions of the reduced projection machine aperture, most of the studios had done nothing to anticipate the new theatre methods.

Table II. Summary of Studio Aperture Practices

Studio	Dimensions of Ground Glass Markings
Paramount	0.623″ × 0.812″
Fox	0.650″ × 0.835″
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer	0.723″ × 0.835″
Columbia	0.725″ × 0.950″
United Artists	0.700″ × 0.920″
Universal—Bell Howell	0.720″ × 0.969″
Mitchell	0.723″ × 0.835″
Sennett	0.720″ × 0.865″
R-K-O—Bell & Howell	0.720″ × 0.855″
Mitchell	0.723″ × 0.835″
Educational	0.723″ × 0.895″
Darmour	0.700″ × 0.840″
Tiffany-Stahl	0.700″ × 0.868″
Pathe	0.723″ × 0.887″

Note: Aperture on Bell & Howell cameras is 0.720″ × 0.969″; on Mitchell cameras, 0.720″ × 0.923″.

It is interesting to note that twelve studios reported twelve different dimensions marked on camera ground glasses. This is partly explained by the fact that some studios have had the sound track width indicated by a line on the ground glass while others simply instructed cameramen to centre their compositions to the right so as to make room for the sound track.

When the cameraman looks into his ground glass he must bear in mind that the picture which he is composing is likely to be projected through apertures of three different sizes:

The picture must look well in all three forms. The practice of most camermen is to favor the reduced Movietone apertures by centering their picture a bit to the right. A properly composed picture will confine the action within the smaller area with a suitable background and foreground for theatres using the Movietone or standard apertures. If any of the three forms suffer it will most likely be the picture for silent or disc release. Successful examples of triple composition have been made proving that it is possible to have the picture look well under all conditions. In this connection a comment made at a recent Academy meeting is interesting.

> "There is a way, I think, whereby we can satisfy both the silent picture exhibitor and the sound picture exhibitor, giving them both an identical composition in the 3 by 4 ratio. The method is just the reverse of what Photophone did when they first began. The method is to take the picture in the camera on a smaller size, masking off the rest of the film, then printing the release for the sound version in the usual manner and printing the release for the silent version on optical printers. Such a printer is being used back in New York. It is made by Bell & Howell. At one time nobody knew how to do optical printing, but with all the skill there is in the business, it could be done."

Conclusion

The facts summarized above were presented at a joint meeting of the Technicians' Branch of the Academy of Motion Picture

Arts and Sciences with the American Society of Cinematographers and the local chapters of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and the American Projection Society, held in the Academy assembly room on August 15. After an extended discussion the meeting decided to refer the survey data to a joint committee composed of representatives of the four organizations. This Joint Committee was constituted as follows: Gerald F. Rackett, John Arnold, E. W. Anderson, Sidney Burton, Albert Feinstein, John F. Seitz, J. F. Westerberg.

At a second joint meeting of these four societies the joint committee reported the recommendations embodied in the following resolution, which was adopted by unanimous vote of the four societies:

> Whereas, investigation has revealed wide variance in theatre projection practices and that there is no effective standard aperture for projection of sound-on-film talking motion pictures:
> Be it resolved: That as a temporary measure this committee recommends that all studios and cinematographers using sound-on-film methods make marks on the camera ground glass equally spaced from the top and bottom in addition to the mat or mark for the sound track; these marks to delineate a rectangle 0.620 by 0.835 inch in size and that all vital portions of the picture be composed within these limits.
> Be it also resolved: That the committee further recommends that theatres which make a practice of reestablishing the full screen proportions from sound-on-film pictures do so by the use an aperture whose size would be 0.600 by 0.800 inch on the basis of projection on the level, the horizontal center of the aperture coinciding with the horizontal center of the S. M. P. E. Standard Aperture.

Copies of this resolution have been sent to executives of all motion picture studios and leading theatre chains. The following Hollywood studios have already reported that markings would be made on the ground glass of all cameras in accordance with the specifications contained in the resolution: Paramount-Famous-Lasky, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Pathe, Universal, R-K-O, Tiffany-Stahl, Mack Sennett, Darmour, and Educational. Present markings on Fox studio cameras approximate the recommended practice. This assures a uniform practice in the studios that anticipates and is in accord with existing practices in the theatres. The aperture dimension recommended to theatres represents a mean of dimensions reported by theatres now using the smaller aperture and may serve as a guide to theatres which may choose to adopt it in the future.

Copies of this resolution have also been sent to the Standards Committee of the S. M. P. E.* and the Projectionists' Advisory Council in the hope that these two important bodies would interest themselves in working out a set of permanent standards to meet the new conditions.

Addenda

The following item, although not a part of this paper, I thought might be an interesting sidelight to some members of the Society.

A supervising projectionist of one of the largest theatre chains in his reply to our inquiry raises a very pertinent question. He says:

"The matting off at the top and bottom of the picture seems essential to members of the profession but the thought occurs to us, 'Does the shape of the projected picture matter to the general public?'" Our curiosity aroused, we put the question of the comparative advantages of the square and rectangular screen among others, to Dr. Walter R. Miles of Stanford University. Dr. Miles is professor of experimental psychology and an outstanding authority in his field. He was passing through Hollywood on his way east to attend international congresses of physiology and psychology. His comments on the proportions of the screen are given below.

According to the view of Dr. Miles, the physical nature of the eye as well as long habit is against the nearly square shape of the sound-on-film picture for the motion picture image as compared with the rectangular shape silent picture. He says:

> "No generation of man is entirely free from former generations. Whether this is accident or intention it is hard to determine. If we make a survey of the tools and household articles that were used in Egypt as compared to those that are used today we find, perhaps to our surprise, considerable uniformity in shapes and sizes. For example, there is an optimal size and weight for the hammer that is used in one hand. There is an optimal size and shape for the hand mirror to be used by a woman. Many illustrations of this come to one's mind.
> "The proportions of the rectangle have been a subject of scientific study since about 1875. At that time it was noted that man, in using the rectangle in nearly all of his buildings, furniture, and conveniences, adopted a ratio which was strikingly different from the perfect square. Although there is no correct exactness in this ratio it tends to be about five to eight, a combination which has been called the golden cut, frequently found in crosses, windows, et cetera. The formula has been: the short side is to the long side as the long one is to the sum of the two. This must not be regarded as a law to be striven for or which will bring punishment if it is transgressed.
> "If we seek for a basis in the physiology of the eyes and in the psychology of perception the following points come to our notice. The eyes have one pair of muscles for moving them in the horizontal but two pairs for moving them in the vertical. Vertical movements are harder to make over a wide visual angle. As man has lived in his natural environment he has usually been forced to perceive more objects arranged in the horizontal than in the vertical. This has apparently established a very deep-seated habit which operates throughout his visual perception. Perhaps we can see the whole thing typified in the opening through which the human eye looks; it is characteristically much wider than it is high.
> "If one thinks over the famous paintings with which he is familiar or visits a gallery he finds most of the canvases with a longer horizontal axis than vertical. They are thus true to nature as man experiences nature. Movement can take place more easily on the horizontal and therefore this axis may well be a longer one than the vertical.
> "One final feature in the psychology of visual perception is that the vertical axis is over-estimated. A true square looks about three units too high.
> "We, therefore, see conformity with man's general experience as well as with the accepted art practice in projecting a picture that is wider than it is tall."

Upon his return from the east Dr. Miles took pains to reassure us that some of the leading physiologists and psychologists of the world with whom he had discussed this very interesting subject had in general confirmed his opinions.

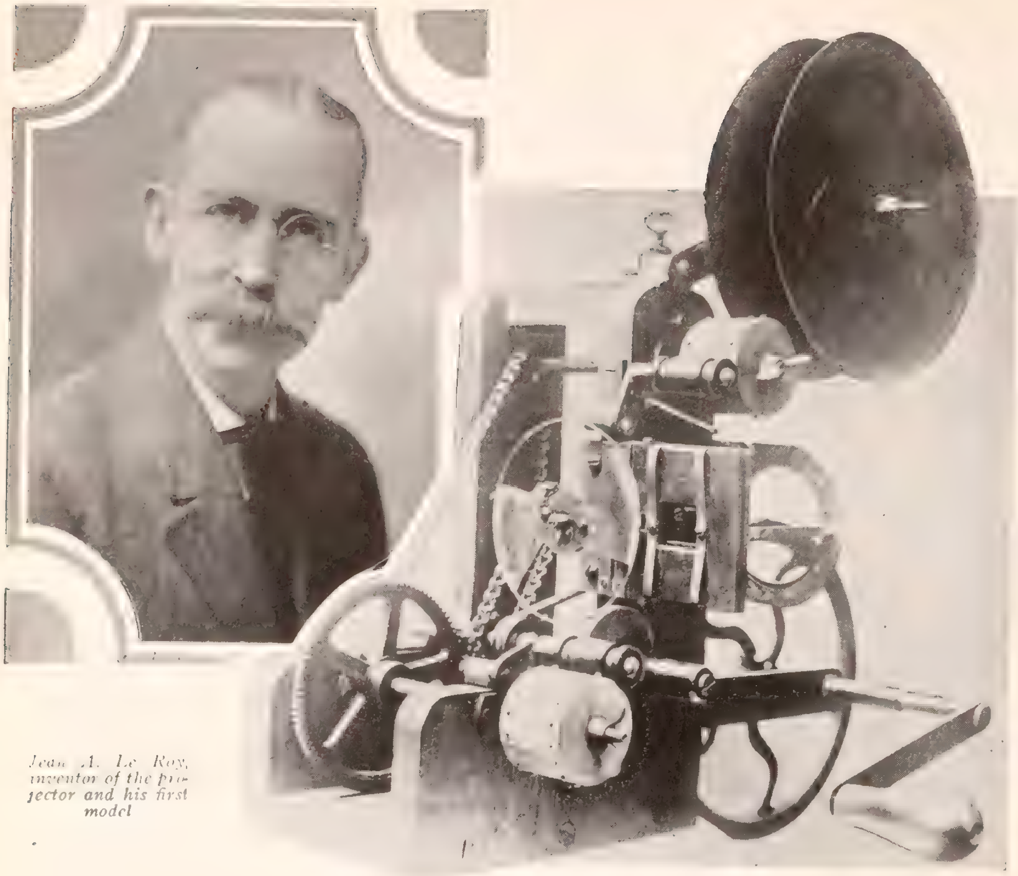
The Projector Has A Birthday



Jean A. Le Roy, inventor of the projector and his first model

JEAN A. LE ROY, a photographer, following experiments begun in 1876, successfully projected motion pictures on the screen for the first time on February 5, 1894.

On the fifth of this month the thirty-sixth anniversary of Le Roy's projection of motion pictures will be celebrated.

The Le Roy projector was called the "Marvelous Cinematograph" by the inventor. From this crude but effective invention has been developed projection as it stands today.

The "Marvelous Cinematograph," on the occasion 36 years ago of its first practical demonstration, was installed in one of the display rooms of Riley Brothers Optical Shop, on Beekman street, New York City. The audience witnessing this first demonstration, consisted of 25 prominent theatrical and amusement magnates. The exhibition was brief, 40 feet of film being run through the projector. Le Roy gave a short talk setting forth the basic principles of his invention, the lights were extinguished and for the first time, motion pictures were thrown on a screen before an audience.

"Peep Show" Films Shown

The pictures projected Le Roy took from the collection of the Kinetoscope "peep show," where, for a nickel, in those days, one could "get an eye full," as the expression went of "The Execution of Mary Queen of Scots," "Washing the Baby," a study in black and white, showing a negro mammy bathing a pickaninny in a tin bathtub, and other subjects.

These fleeting shadows lasted a little more than one minute. Bewilderment and surprise greeted the exhibition. Le Roy's dream of 20 years had come true.

Scientists had insisted "it couldn't be done." Le Roy did it.

Some of the men who stood in that little room, 36 years ago, are living today. A few days ago, one of them dropped in on the inventor, at the latter's home, to congratulate him on the approaching 36th anniversary of the first projection machine.

Prior experimenters and inventors had projected pictures in motion on the screen. These consisted of a series of posed lantern slides, or drawings, to simulate movement, or pictures on paper tape in various attitudes depicting motion. Le Roy for the first time used what is known today as celluloid motion picture film.

A Photographic Expert

Jean Acme Le Roy, who celebrated his 40th birthday, whimsically enough, by disclosing his projector on Feb. 5, 1894, was born near Bedford, Ky., in 1854. In 1872, he came to New York City, and became an apprentice in the photographic studio of Joseph Thwaites, at No. 1 Chamber street.

The Thwaites establishment held high place in photographic circles both before and after the Civil War. Young Le Roy worked with both the old Daguerrotype, Ambrotype, Malinotype, and the tintype process; from the old albumen silver (or sun) prints to the dry plate and bromide printing-out paper, as used today. He became an expert photographer during his seven years' apprenticeship, and remained with Thwaites for many years.

In 1875, Le Roy began experiments to show with animation on a screen what the ground glass of the camera depicted in views of street scenes. The lantern slide, a "still" picture, was used then as a means of education and entertainment. Mechanical slides also were used to depict motion, crudely. Le Roy theorized that some means could be found whereby the apparent, actual, motion could be shown with a lantern. He succeeded in the Autumn of 1876.

The apparatus was crude, bulky and noisy. The picture, a series of posed slides, depicted a boy and girl dancing a waltz. The series comprised 200 slides, and each picture was posed separately. When recombined, and passed through the mechanical carrier attached to the lantern, they produced the illusion of motion.

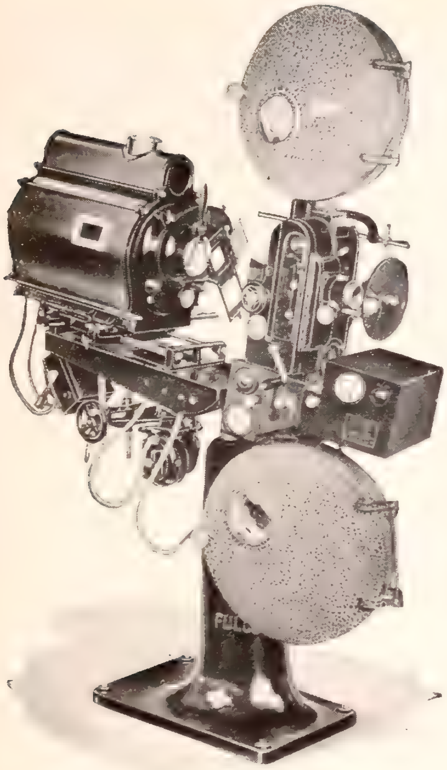
Further experiments, to eliminate the noise, weight and other obstacles, resulted in Le Roy abandoning this line of study, and his research from that time until 1894, 18 years later, was confined to the general theory of the apparatus which he finally called the "Marvellous Cinematograph."

It should be recorded, that in 1893, Le Roy built a projector employing friction rolls, instead of sprockets. A similar method was used by the American Biograph Company, some years later. This projector did not meet with Le Roy's requirements, and he turned to the sprocket wheel and perforated film successfully. The 1894 projector was hand operated, and was used by Le Roy until July 6, 1897.

Fails to File Patents

It was apparent that Le Roy was not familiar with the requirements of the U. S. Patent Laws, which makes it necessary to file an application for a patent within two years of the finished invention. It was two and one-half years, after Feb. 5, 1894, when he was informed by a patent lawyer that the time for filing could be done about it. The Le Roy projector, therefore, went into "the public domain."

Le Roy is also a pioneer exchange man. In 1894 he opened a repair shop and exchange. A skilled mechanic as well as an expert photographer, with a shop at 143 East 13th Street, New York, Le Roy, on Aug. 15, of that year, set up a repair business. He also sold lantern slides, sold and exchanged films for the "peep-box" kinetoscope, and gave exhibitions with his projector for clubs, churches and theatres.



ALL OF THE LIGHT NONE OF THE HEAT

THAT'S THE BIG FACT DEMONSTRATED BY PUBLIX

AT MAJESTIC THEATRE, E. ST. LOUIS, ILL.

EQUIPPED WITH

FULCO PROJECTORS and FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLING SYSTEM

For more than a year under the hardest of daily grinds and a barrage of exceptional heat FULCO PROJECTORS established their superiority by uninterrupted faultless performance, at the same time proving the astonishing effectiveness and efficiency of the FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLING SYSTEM.

The FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLING apparatus delivers a steady stream of MOIST AIR to both surfaces of film at aperture, thus eliminating film heat entirely while preserving film softness and flexibility.

The FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLING system is the most scientific and efficient because it overcomes film heat completely and not partially as with fans and shutters.

The FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLER removes film fire danger because it will not allow film to ignite even while stationary and even though the most powerful lamp is focussed upon it.

Modern tendency is toward larger screens and therefore more light. More light means more heat to be reckoned with. The FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLING system takes away All of the Heat without diminishing light in the slightest degree.

THE FULCO PROJECTOR ALONE OFFERS THE ONLY COMPLETE SOLUTION OF YOUR FILM HEAT PROBLEM, with the added assurance of SAFETY FIRST—LAST—ALWAYS.

Every FULCO MECHANISM is fitted with internal tubes leading from film trap to an external threaded stub, so that FULCO MOIST AIR FILM COOLER may be connected at any time. This piece of apparatus may be installed in basement or any convenient place away from projection room and air from same led to machines through ordinary iron piping.

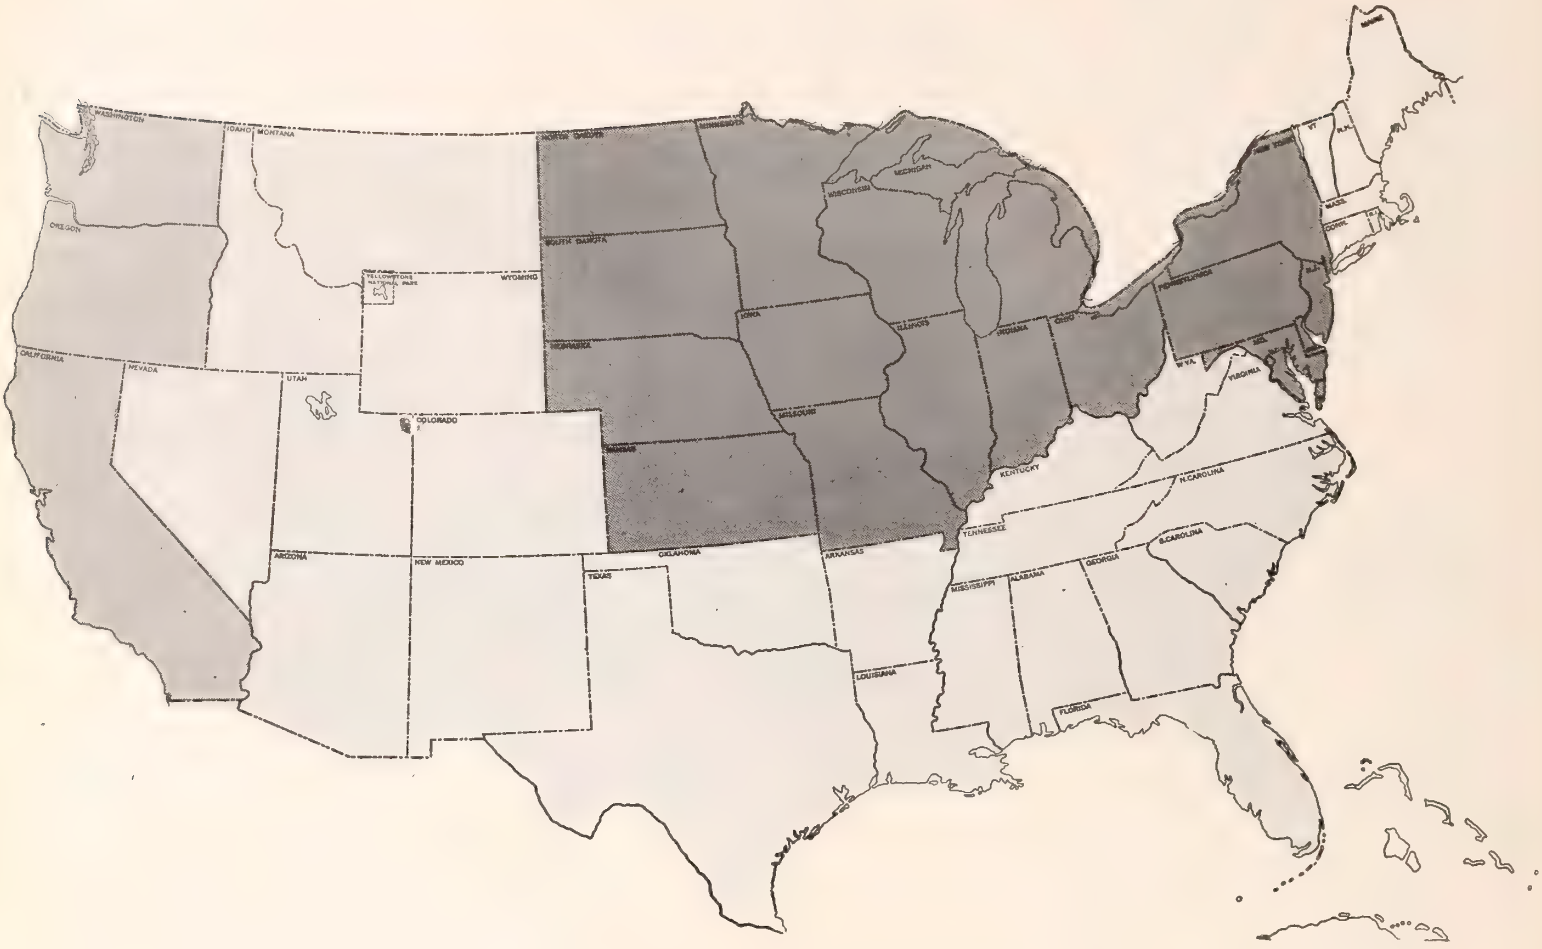
Theatre Building Activity Shifts



ESTIMATED total expenditure for theatre building projects announced during the period of this report—December 15, 1929, to January 15, 1930—reached the high total of $19,674,540, for sixty-one new projects to be carried out in the United States this year.

This is an increase of $580,048 over the figures for the similar period last year, and indicates an activity in new construction and remodeling work that exceeds by a substantial margin many estimates advanced on theories tinged with a pessimism growing out of the memorable market crashes of last November.

Thus, there continues to accumulate from all quarters of America, tangible evidence that actual conditions fail to support theories of a lean first-quarter of the new year.

Eastern Tiers Lead

As shown on the map, the heaviest construction is in the North Atlantic and Middle States sections of the country. The North Atlantic group leads with a total of $8,426,364 as the estimated cost of twenty new projects announced for that territory. Two theatres costing a million or more are included in this number. The total figure for the Middle States is $5,554,092 for seventeen new projects.

The West Coast comes next with eleven new projects announced, and estimated total cost of which is $3,094,092.

Index To Map

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with shading indicating the division of new theatre building reported during the period from December 15, 1929 to January 15, 1930. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; dark, representing greatest value of proposed theatres; medium, second in valuation of new construction; light, showing conservative building; and the very light areas, where investment in new theatre projects was comparatively light. The information was obtained through reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The Western group and the Southwest follow. For the former, five new projects were announced, the cost estimated at $875,000. The total for the Southwest is higher—$1,250,000, for four new projects, due to the fact that a new project of the million or more dollar type was announced for that territory.

Two Sections Very Light

In the New England and the Southeast territories, very light programs were announced, the totals being an estimated expenditure of $150,000, for one new theatre, in New England; and $325,000 for three new projects in the Southeast.

The three leading states are: New York, estimated expenditure $3,551,364; Ohio, estimated expenditure $3,227,728; California, estimated expenditure $2,994,092.

The total number of new seats called for in projects announced for the period is 82,920. Thus the average cost per seat is $237.63. The average cost per theatre for the sixty-one new projects is $322,533. And the average seats per theatre, 1,350.

Remodeling on Increase

Many major remodelling jobs were announced during this overlapping period. Activity along this line continues to increase, both in the amount of work and the amount of money involved in the average remodelling job. This phase of the 1930 theatre activities appears to indicate as large a volume of equipment sales as was realized in 1929, which proved a banner year in theatre equipment production and distribution.

The following tabulation shows estimated expenditures for new projects by territories with comparative figures for the same period last year:

Territory	1930	1929
North Atlantic	$8,426,364	$8,141,000
Middle States	5,554,092	2,898,500
West Coast	3,094,092	4,720,000
Western States	875,000	760,000
South Western	1,250,000	1,385,000
South Eastern	325,000	70,000
New England	150,000	1,120,000
Total	$19,674,548	$19,094,000

Sound Horn Ailments Diagnosed And Treated By Expert Doctors

NOT all the trouble which theatres have in sound reproduction originates in the projection booth. Nor, in fact, with any part of the reproducing device. Much of it—more, perhaps, than is realized—develops in the auditorium or from the manner in which sound waves are directed into the theatre.

This week, in this series of articles based on the work and experience of M-G-M's sound technicians, will be considered difficulties arising in that wide realm between the reproducing horns and the ears of the theatre's customers. The technicians themselves will tell the story, in their own words, changing nothing except names.

Very Bad Reverberation

"Mr. Bolger had been complaining that the sound was very bad in his theatre and asked if I would go out and ascertain what the trouble was. It was acoustical difficulty, this being the worst house in this respect which I have yet visited. It was solid plaster walls and ceiling, wooden seats and cement floors. There is absolutely no treatment in the house whatever, so it is easy to image the quality of sound which he is getting. The reverbation, I would say, lasted from six to eight or nine seconds.

"I outlined in detail the proper method to follow in treating the theatre, first starting with the back walls and proceeding along the sides. The horns are placed side by side on the stage floor in front of the screen and considerably above the heads of the audience. They are not baffled in any way.

"I suggested that they move one horn to each side of the screen, placing each about four feet from the floor and baffling them in the approved manner. I also suggested that the stage floor be covered.

"Mr. Bolger was in the exchange today to see me. The changes which I had suggested in the horns and on the stage had already been made and the sound was reported to be very greatly improved. The acoustical treatment of the theatre is in progress and I am certain it will result in a very great improvement."

Good Quality; Poor Direction

"Having heard from other exhibitors of assistance which had been rendered, Mr. Smith asked me to come to his theatre and listen to his sound. I found that he was getting very good reproduction and that the house has received proper and intelligent acoustical treatment. After listening to the sound for only a few moments, it was very clear that his trouble developed from improper distribution. Examination of the horns developed that they were set in such a manner that the sound waves were crossing. By straightening and deleting them somewhat the results in the auditorium were very much improved. I also suggested that Mr. Smith anchor the horns more solidly as they were now developing considerable vibration."

Improper Acoustics And Their Remedies

EXPERIENCES of M-G-M's sound technicians in aiding exhibitors to alleviate the evils of improper acoustics in the theatre, have been written exclusively for MOTION PICTURE NEWS. This article deals largely with troubles arising from horns.

Specific instances are given, omitting true names, where the proper course has been suggested.

In all cases the theatre manager whose complaint has been answered has profited by the advice given.

Dialogue Indistinguishable

"Mr. Jones wanted to cancel his sound contracts with all companies, abandon use of his equipment and return to a policy of playing silent pictures. He complained that nothing he plays is clear enough to be understood by an audience. I did not have far to seek to find the cause of trouble.

"The theatre is box shaped. It has wooden floors, wooden seats, solid plaster walls and a very low wooden ceiling. Reverberation lasts from five to six seconds or longer. I found the equipment in good shape and explained that his troubles were wholly acoustical, outlining a method of treating the house with inexpensive monk's cloth. The ceiling, however, will be somewhat more difficult as there are several chandeliers and a great deal of wiring. The logical thing to do is to cover it but, as he has no height to spare and as he wished to keep the expense at the minimum, I suggested as a compromise the hanging of strips of cloth from the ceiling at stated intervals across the width of the house.

"I saw Mr. Jones several days after this and he told me that part of the work had been finished and that the results were most gratifying."

"In conversation at the exchange with Mr. Frank he stated he believed there was an echo in this theatre. However, he had not been able to locate it and wanted to know if I would come to the theatre and see what I could discover. I found that he had just installed new equipment and that it was working satisfactorily.

"As Mr. Frank could not offer any suggestions as to the source of the presumed echo, I began at the stage and worked back to the end of the house. What I found was a slight reverberation which manifested itself when I stood in the rear at the side and clapped my hands. The reverberation then appeared on the opposite side. When standing in front of the stage it was so slight that it was hardly noticeable. In this manner I discovered that two pilasters near the rear of the house were the cause of the trouble. I suggested that they be treated. This was done and the difficulty was completely eliminated."

Bad House Conditions

"Mr. Kimble was having what he expressed as 'a lot of trouble' ever since he installed sound equipment. I visited his theatre at his suggestion and believe me, he needed help. The house was awful. I found it was impossible for a person standing at the back of the house when the theatre was empty to understand another person speaking from the stage. There was a very decided echo. The auditorium is large with a high dome-shaped metal ceiling which is broken at intervals by metal ribs banding it all the way across. The walls are high, broken with pilasters and the surface is hard. The back of the house, both upstairs and down, is plaster finished. Prior to my visit, in desperation Mr. Kimble had ordered two thousand square feet of acoustical felt but I felt that by draping the pilasters and ceiling in a manner which I suggested with other cheaper materials it would not be necessary to use more than one-third of the amount of felt which had been ordered. This plan was followed and according to reports made to the exchange the exhibitor is considerably more than satisfied with the results.

Smothered Sound

"Mr. Applejack was worried because he was not getting enough volume and had about decided to put in another stage of amplification.

"Upon investigation I found his main speaker was set behind a silent silver screen and in addition the front of the cone itself was covered with celutex. Naturally, very little sound came through. I suggested that he move the speaker in front of and to one side of the screen and that he take off the celutex. The result was ample volume.

"I also found that the speaker was overloaded and suggested that some of

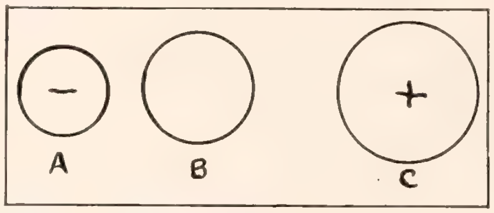
VACUUM TUBE CHARACTERISTICS

EVERY device, no matter what its structure, performs in a definite manner. Whether or not this performance is as determined in the design is a matter of how the device is employed. However, vacuum tubes are designed with a definite function in mind. It is well to say that a vacuum tube possesses the property of amplifying. How this is accomplished is of greater interest. To understand tube characteristics and tube performance, it is necessary to refer to the action of electric charges.

Suppose that we have three charges, A, B and C, as shown. Charge A is negative and is free to move. B is of such structure that A can move right through it, for example, a sieve. C on the other hand is stationary and bears a positive charge. The relation between B and A and C and A, is that C is three times as far from A as B is from A. B at this time has no charge upon it.



Referring to the charge shown, C being of opposite polarity and being positive will attract A. However, if a charge is placed upon B, it too will display an effect upon A. Whether this effect is going to be attracting or repelling depends upon the polarity of the charge upon B. If it is attracting, it is going to aid the force exerted by C. If, however, it is repelling, it is going to counteract some of the force exerted by C. Since the force exerted by a charged body upon another charged body depends upon the distance outlined earlier in this text, the charge required by B in order to counteract the force due to the charge upon C need be only one-ninth that possessed by C, since B is three times closer to A.

The action of these charges represents the action found in the vacuum tube. The fact that the change in charge upon C to counteract the change in charge upon B must be multiplied, signifies that the effect of B upon C with respect to A is that of magnification. The change in charge upon C is the same as if the change in charge upon B introduces a charge upon C. If these charges are based upon similar units, each unit change upon B is the same as if a much larger change is introduced upon C. This action gives rise to the characteristic known as amplification constant of the vacuum tube.

AMPLIFICATION CONSTANT

AS IS evident, the multiplying effect upon the charges is due to the physical relation between the charges. If we consider charge A as the filament, charge B as the grid and charge C as the plate, we have the structure of the regular three element tube.

The positive charge applied to the plate of the tube, assuming zero charge, voltage or bias upon the grid, attracts the electrons emitted from the filament and results in a stream of electrons between the filament and the plate.

The grid being located between the plate and the filament, exerts an influence upon the stream of electrons. If a positive charge is applied to the grid, the attracting power of the plate is increased since another force acting in the same direction is active at the same time. The effect is an increase in plate current. If the charge upon the grid is negative, the grid repels the electrons attracted by the charge upon the plate and the plate current is reduced. The magnitude of attraction or repulsion of the grid depends upon two factors, the charge upon the grid and the separation between the grid and the filament, or the distance between B and C with respect to A.

The effect of the grid is to decrease or increase the rate of flow of the electrons, or the number of electrons that reach the plate in a certain period of time. This of course may also be governed by the charge upon the plate or the plate voltage, since the voltage governs the attracting power of the plate. Under the circumstances, if a negative charge is applied to the grid and the plate current is reduced by a certain value, that same reduction may be accomplished if the charge is removed from the grid but the plate voltage or charge upon the plate is changed. As a numerical illustration, let us assume that the application of a 1 volt negative bias upon the grid causes the reduction of the plate current by .001 ampere or 1 milliampere. Now, if the 1 volt negative bias is removed and the plate voltage is changed say 8 volts so that the plate current is again reduced by 1 milliampere, the effect of the 1 volt bias upon the grid is the same as if the plate voltage were maintained at the normal value and a voltage equivalent to 8 volts were introduced into the plate circuit but in such fashion that it is subtractive from the normal plate voltage.

If the grid bias is changed to 1 volt positive, the attracting power of the plate is increased, so that the current will now increase, and the effect of the positive grid bias is the same as if 8 volts were added to the normal plate voltage. Thus the grid acts as a medium which introduces into the plate circuit of the vacuum tube a voltage governed by the separation between the various elements, in this case the distance between the grid and plate, the diameter of the wires of the grid, the separation between wires and the mesh.

Not an experiment but an established essential to quality sound reproduction

SAF 3 MIXER

Selector of Audible Frequencies

While the results are magical, there is no magic about the SAF 3 MIXER. This marvelous instrument applies to sound reproduction scientific principles employed since the beginning of electrical recording.

SAF 3 MIXER gives the operator in the projection booth the same absolute control over High, Medium Register and Low frequencies which is given to the operator in control of sound recording at the motion picture studio.

And remember, SAF 3 MIXER is ATTACHABLE TO ALL MAKES of sound equipment—sound on film or disc. It makes the best reproducer produce better sound results, because it controls the frequencies which pass from the pick-up into the amplifier.

Speech issues from the speakers clearly, distinctly and naturally—when the operator turns the knob which tunes out the disturbing Lows causing drummy, muffled sound. Music issues richer, more pleasing and faithful to the original when the unwanted Highs, causing shrilly notes, are cut out.

Results are the important thing in sound reproduction—important to the box office. Price, the cost of installation also is important—to the exhibitor who must make the outlay. Both of these important factors are met in the SAF 3 MIXER. It produces results.

Optical Engineer Reviews Steps Leading to Color Picture Film Process

By WILLIAM HOYT PECK
(Optical Engineer)

TO stabilize many of the variables of photography, to get a practical color process for motion pictures, we have carried on research work for many years.

For a long time it was possible to get beautiful specimens but impossible to get sharp, defined pictures and produce them on a quantity basis.

During this early work we discovered that it was necessary to find a law that would satisfy the unusual color characteristics of the eye. After this law was once worked out we were able to stabilize each step of the Colorcraft process as it is today.

Process Simplified

Dr. Michelson, eminent scientist of the Chicago University, has stated that "when a theory not only explains a known phenomena but makes it possible to predict and discover new phenomena, it is a convincing proof of the value of a theory."

After we developed this theory which we will call "The Law of Frequencies," different steps of our process have been simplified which have made it possible to control every step and get a final result of as well defined pictures in color as are obtained in black and white, and with a great deal more depth, even approaching a stereoscopic effect. This process gives an uniformity of prints and quantity production with the same accuracy and speed of the black and white laboratory.

When analyzing color for motion pictures one always must bear in mind that nature is in harmony with itself in all its realms and if our process is scientifically and mathematically correct the resultant pictures will have the same harmony. This law of frequencies starts with sound and it mathematically shows why certain combinations of frequencies create pleasing effects and other combinations of frequencies cause more or less discord.

Radio Waves Listed

Next, the variables of radio waves can be calculated. It is easily understood why one radio frequency penetrates a fog, another frequency carries greater distances at night than it does in the daytime, and some frequencies circle the entire earth.

The next order of frequencies known as "infra-red" have their mathematical advantages and disadvantages which check with one another, some frequencies irritating and others stimulating.

Following we have the frequencies which affect the different nerves of the eye building up color vision on an intensity ratio of the amount of red, green or blue that the eye is able to see in the object. These frequencies, when carried by the optic nerve probably to the aura of the pineal gland of the brain, give the impression which we know as color.

Frequency Groups

There is the "ultra-violet" group of frequencies, the near ultra-violet, the far ultra-violet and extreme ultra-violet. Some of these have unusual healing qualities, others have excessive irritating qualities.

Higher up on our scale of frequencies we locate the X-ray frequencies, some of which break down tissue, others bring on stimulation which builds up tissue and a still higher order of frequencies known as the "gamma" and "alpha" waves of radium which have their distinctive effects.

Undoubtedly there is some limit to this law of frequencies so I have taken the thought wave as this limit and so named it the "Nth" frequency band. Certain mental impressions create antagonism, others create harmony. Some day we will understand the "Nth" band of frequencies and can use them to the extent of reading one's mind.

Method Explained

To properly make colored motion pictures, we found it necessary to calculate a photographic lens that would harmonize with both the eye and the sensitive silver emulsion on which the image must be recorded. After our picture is properly photographed according to our established law of frequencies, it is necessary to make prints controlling densities according to this same law and later select dyes which are in tune with all other steps, if we wish to get a uniform production.

There are many ways to make colored motion pictures.

The first process was known as the Fulse-Green method developed in the early days of motion pictures. This consisted of projecting red and green pictures on the curtain alternately. Due to the persistency of vision of the eye these colors blended and gave the effect of a colored motion picture, but the insistent bombardment caused a tremendous strain to the optic nerve.

Defects Eliminated

The process had many other defects consisting of fringing, showing red and green images on each side of moving objects, and it was necessary to run the projecting machine at a high speed which destroyed the life of the film and ruined the projector.

This process first used a color wheel and was later improved by dyeing the alternate pictures red and green. Another step in color photography consisted of projecting two pictures on the curtain at the same time, one colored red and the other colored green. This gave a very pleasing effect, but it was impossible to keep the pictures in register due to the varying shrinkage of the film and both of the above processes required twice the amount of light to get the desired result on the curtain. Both of the above methods are known as additive color photography.

Variety of Methods

The Lumiere starch grain process is well known for still pictures. The Pagett process is of the same general character. Due to the size of the starch grains or dye sectional units it is impossible to use either process for motion picture work because the starch grains or squares are magnified to sufficient size to be seen on the curtain. These processes also require a great deal more light.

There are many methods of subtractive color photography which obtain a fair result.

The one used a great deal by experimentors is the uranium and iron method of toning when using single or double coated stock. The actual color values are so poor that such a method we would not even consider as being colored photography. It is possible to use a dye with the uranium and shift the color value slightly, but it is impossible to get color reproduction.

A very old method of subtractive color photography which is being used now a great deal in production work is known as the imbibition method which was originally developed by Ives.

Lithographing Process

This is really a lithographing process where a matrix is used to transfer dye, held in a hard and soft gelatine, to a positive transparent base and by the addition of a second or third step other colors are built up on this base. Such a process depends on the stabilization of its steps, no step of which is quantitative and film shrinkage will make pictures indistinct especially where there is any detail.

The Colorcraft finished print consists of a dyed image of specially prepared dyes to exactly match other dominating steps of the process so as to get accurate reproduction. If this film is placed in water the picture will not wash out. We do not think this is true of any other process with the exception of the toning methods which do not give even a fair reproduction of the original. Each step of the process is so stable that the final result is constant. A finished film may be washed for a few minutes or hours and get the same result.

By using negative with photographic lens it will be possible to convert a Bell & Howell camera, a Mitchell camera, an Akely sound camera and many other cameras by the expenditure of a few hundred dollars, so the cameraman can use the same camera for black and white or Colorcraft photography.

Those Theatre Ads Can Be Made To Look A Lot Better—Here's How

Telling Your Story with Plenty of White Space Around Your Copy Is One Way

By Charles E. Lewis

Editor, MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB Section of MOTION PICTURE NEWS

IN approaching this subject, as well as any subject for that matter, it is necessary to keep in mind at all times the fact that all discussions must be by nature, general. It is all very well for Tom, Dick or Harry to tell you how to run your business, but neither one nor the other knows the existing circumstances surrounding your own theatre and town. That is why we start off with this preamble.

But we can generalize on any subject to our heart's content, and if this, that or the other fellow finds useful thought here or there, then we have not shouted in vain. With such a view at the very start, let's try to get down to the present subject and one that is, of course, of tremendous importance to every manager or showman whose theatre must use the daily papers to advertise his wares.

Receiving upwards of a hundred newspapers a week by courtesy of the members and readers of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, we have had a good opportunity to study the way some of the different managers and publicity men have been handling their advertising and layouts. Which must not be misconstrued to mean that we are making a blanket indictment against them or their methods. But we have tried to pick little bits here and there that may help the other boys over the rougher spots when they try to improve their own newspaper layouts.

Value of White Space

The particular point which we will try to bring out at this time is the tremendous value of white space in connection with your newspaper advertising.

Some managers feel that they are wasting money when they fail to make use of every bit of space they pay for.

They are "all wet." And what's more we'll prove to their own satisfaction that using some of that paid space for just "white space" around their ads will more than improve ordinary theatre copy.

Here's Our Contention

We show here two reproductions of the same theatre ad. It's of minor importance which theatre made it up. The point we are trying to drive home is which ad in your opinion is the most effective. They are identical in copy. But one, you will note, covers the full amount of given space while the other is reduced in size and proportion and leaves a wide white margin around the entire copy.

Do you agree with us that the smaller ad with the white space around it is the most effective of the two?

Suppose you try it yourself. Just for the sake of determining which style appeals most to you and to prove what it looks like in fact, instead of fancy, arrange your theatre's next ad in just such a way and see if the finished job doesn't make a decided impression on you. See if it doesn't make your ad stand out from all others on the theatre page of your newspaper.

Don't Scramble Ads

Of course, poorly arranged copy, foolish use of mats and a million other contributing causes can make a theatre ad worthless or not worth the trouble to put together. The old alibi about the newspaper composing room being at fault is rather antique. If you pay a visit or two to said composing room and have a talk with the composer you will soon find that your copy and ideas are being transferred to the printed page just as you want it.

Avoid, by all means, any habit of sending copy typed out to the press. Printers cannot be expected to know just what you want brought out and what you want kept in the background. If you get the habit of making your ad up with pencil and paper in rough form, but a facsimile of what you want it to look like when finished you will soon be surprised to find that your ideas are materializing. If you are, by nature, a good ad writer, you will have the pleasure of watching your ideas take form.

Variety Is Important

Don't get the wrong impression that because I have laid particular stress on the subject of white space around ads, that it is the only important angle in theatre newspaper advertising.

Over a long period of years I have found that variety in advertising is of the utmost importance. Don't let your ads become monotonous to the newspaper reader. Try to inject new angles and layouts each day or change. This especially applies to the advertising on the day before, or day of, program change.

The smart manager who must depend solely upon his own knowledge in his newspaper ads, and who has no advertising or publicity man to take that worry and responsibility off his shoulders, soon learns the ropes and in this respect he is a darn sight better off than his brother manager in the big cities where newspaper advertising for the neighborhood houses is just a slug and a title or not at all.

Theatre Name Slugs

These things have been called most everything from "sig" cuts to slugs, but as the saying goes: a rose under any other name is still a rose. So a slug under whatever name you want to title it is still the cut with the name of your theatre. Here again variety is the spice of your ads. Try to make up a series of different type slugs. Some horizontal, some upright, some triangular in shape and any other forms that will fit into your ad make-up each day.

You will be surprised to learn how cheap these things are and how they can be duplicated for only a few cents when they wear out or are lost. And they will dress up your copy and give you many opportunities to use different styles in your daily advertising that sooner or later will command respect and attention from newspaper readers. Get them to look for your ad each day. It's possible beyond all shadow of doubt. But you must learn the art of getting the most out of your paid space without making it a task to find out what you are showing at your theatre.

Dear Mr. Wright:

We received the No. 9 horn and No. 107 speaker, and tried it last night after rehearsal before playing to the public. Mr. Wright, we want to say that this speaker is the greatest we ever dreamed of.

The writer belongs to the Motion Picture News Round Table Club, and I will certainly recommend these speakers.

So far as we know, there is no speaker on the market anywhere near equal to the Wright-DeCoster. It is simply great, Mr. Wright, and anyone giving it a trial will say the same. Under separate cover we are ordering the second speaker.

Yours very truly,

MAJOR BASE SOCKET

New Type Electric Socket Is Featured

A new type medium base socket designed particularly for signs and troughs is a recent addition to the line of electrical equipment offered by the Major Equipment Company, Chicago.

The new development is called the Major No. 54 B Medium Base Socket, and is built on a moulded Termoplax body. This material, moulded cold, is non-absorptive. It is virtually unbreakable, according to the sponsors. The centers of the mounting screws are the same as other standard makes, making them interchangeable with mogul sockets of other design. Current is carried to the center contact by phosphor bronze strap.

The terminal screws on back are upset to prevent falling out. There is an extra screw holding yoke. There are four No. 8-32 mounting screw inserts. Sockets may be installed with wire channels in metal troughs regardless of how mounting holes are punched. Heavy gilders metal shell, solid machined button head center contact, and phosphor bronze coil spring support for center contact are other features.

RCA Sound Device On World Cruise

For the first time on record, at last tourists on a world cruise will be furnished with sound and talking pictures.

When the Columbus of the North German Lloyd line left New York she carried a complete RCA Photophone portable sound reproducing equipment, set up and ready for operation.

James Fitz Patrick, travelogue producer, is supervising the operation of the portable sound equipment, which, it is said, can be set up and dismantled in half an hour.

Penitentiary Wired For Sound Pictures

Atlanta, Ga.—Talkies now supplant silent picture presentations at the Federal Penitentiary. A new sound system recently was installed there by Warden W. V. Aderhold. The equipment is a Super Mellaphone disc reproducer similar to that which has been in operation since November at the Government penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Electrical Radiator Cabinet On Market

An electrically-equipped cabinet which slips over the radiator, has been patented by J. L. Gordon and is being distributed by the Luna Metal Craft Corporation, of Brooklyn.

The cabinet, according to its inventors, may be used for the auxiliary heating of the home, club, church, hotel, apartment, office or theatre building.

the amplification be shut off and the fader be stepped up. This tended to eliminate the overload.

"Several suggestions also were made for treating the sides and back of the house as well as the front of the projection booth. Moving the speaker out in front of the screen also necessitated treating the floor of the stage. I do not need to add after the foregoing explanation, that Mr. Applejack is not going to buy another amplifier."

"This outfit was surprisingly good due to proper pick-ups and a good installation. However, the horns were placed so low that they were blasting right into the hard seats. I suggested that the horns be raised.

"I also advised that banners be draped across the ceiling in the usual approved manner as there is considerable reverberation in the theatre at present."

Horns Set Too High

"Mr. Foster, I think, was the most appreciative man I have ever met. I found his troubles, which he has been trying to overcome for several months, were due to improper direction of sound waves from his horns and to lack of proper acoustical treatment in certain parts of his auditorium. The horns were too high and I suggested lowering them.

"Mr. Goldberg was not in a pleasing frame of mind. He had been having trouble ever since he installed equipment. First I had to go behind the screen where the horn was located and ask the exhibitor to stand at the back of the theatre to see if he could understand me when I spoke to him. He finally agreed that he could not. Then I asked him to go over to the pilasters and speak into the corner of one where it joined the wall. The amplification and echo of his voice surprised him. I then had him stand back of me while I talked into the corner and the barrelly effect of this condition was admitted. After repeated demonstrations of this sort I succeeded in convincing him that a bad house condition, rather than bad recording or faulty equipment was his trouble.

Not Using Equipment

"Mr. Sanders had installed sound equipment in his theatre some weeks previous to my visit. He was still running silent pictures because he was dissatisfied with the results which he had been getting. As the equipment was new and practically unused, I naturally found it to be in good condition. His troubles, as a matter of fact, originated almost exclusively in the auditorium. Probably ninety per cent. of this difficulty was due to a set of open ceiling ventilators which, although not in use, had not been closed. There was also an echo caused by the hard surface walls at the front of the house. I suggested closing the ceiling ventilators, treating the walls and hanging banners from the ceiling.

"The trouble here was simple and all acoustical. Beginning at the front of the house I suggested that the felt on the floor of the stage be extended to cover the footlights. The horns should be boxed. I also suggested that the aisles be carpeted as they are quite wide and in direct line with the horns.

An Ounce of Precaution

"Mr. Meyers had ordered his sound equipment, but it had not yet arrived. I visited the theatre at his request to advise him whether the house needed acoustical treatment. Friends, it seemed, had advised him that this would not be necessary. How reasonable this advice was may be judged by the fact that the entire ceiling is metal. There is also a metal portion of the ceiling which runs at an angle from the top of a side wall upward.

"I suggested draping the sides, using banners on the ceiling, covering the biased portion of the ceiling with some good sound-proof material, treating the front of the booth and boxing in the stage and horns. The back of the house also should have acoustical treatment.

New Trailer Series

"Screen Master of Ceremonies of Coming Attractions" is title of a series of weekly sound shorts produced and distributed by Advance Trailer Service Corp., New York. These feature stage personalities who give talks, interspersed with gags and songs, selling the theatre and coming attractions. The subject precedes the silent trailer.

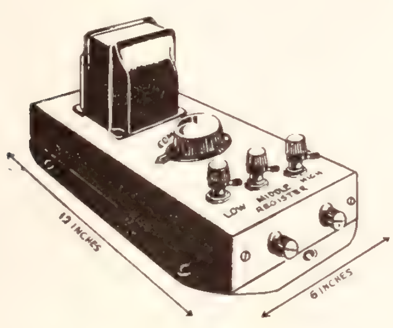
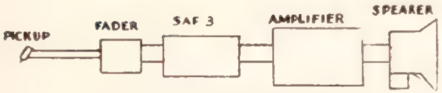
New Sound Device Placed on Market

A selector of audible frequencies, known as the Saf 3 Mixer has been put on the market by Simplimus, Inc., of Boston, manufacturers of the Simplimus reproducer. The frequency selector employs the same principles used in the mixer which plays an important part in recording at the studios.

The device, according to the announcement, is easily installed and attachable to all makes of reproducers of sound-on-film or disc types and gives the operator the same control over the frequencies passing into the amplifier that the recording mixer permits in studio work. The Saf 3 Mixer connects between the pick-up and the amplifier.

It carries three switches, low middle and high register, according to the manufacture, and carries a compensation knob.





SAFE THREE MIXER

In cases where speech is muffled or of "drummy" quality the low frequencies causing the condition are eliminated by throwing the switch marked "Low Register," it is explained. The compensator knob also is turned to the right. The operation, it is said, cuts down the over-accentuated lows.

The opposite condition is the most frequent cause of shrill musical notes in reproduction, in which case, the high frequencies are over-accentuated. In this emergency the switch marked "High" is thrown.

It also is claimed that in cases where theatre resonance to certain frequencies are disturbing the Saf 3 Mixer offers a solution to the problem.

Special Carbon Arc Serves Wide Films

A special carbon arc, claimed by its sponsors to have from 30 to 50 per cent greater brilliancy than the sun affords, now is being marketed by the National Carbon Company, Inc., of Cleveland.

The arc was brought out with particular attention being paid the innovation of wide films and screens. The manufacture of the arc requires from six to eight weeks, the company states.

Beltone Equipment Territory Acquired

St. Paul—Fred H. Stern, head of the Elec-Tro-Fone Corp., which markets a disc reproducer here, has acquired distribution in the Northwest of the Beltone sound-on-film reproducer. The reproducer can be attached to any make projector, it is claimed. Five stages of amplification are needed, including the power stages. Super cells used were developed by R. C. Burt of the Burt Scientific Laboratories, Pasadena. Sound head amplifiers and fader are mounted in one cabinet placed on the floor between the projectors. A six-volt storage battery and 45-volt B battery are contained in the lower part of the cabinet.

RCA Sound Placed In Mexico Theatre

Teatro Rodriguez, in Monterey, Mexico, seating 2,000, recently was wired and equipped with RCA Photophone.

The Rodriguez, owned by A. Rodriguez and Brother, who have been exhibitors for more than twenty years, is said to be one of the three finest theatres in Mexico. This firm also operates a number of houses along the border and in the United States and Mexico. The Rodriguez is the first of the string to install sound.

The Only Screen
for Color Pictures

Clear, realistic pictures, freedom from eye-strain, and natural tone quality is necessary to win and hold your patronage.

To insure projection as good as you had before Sound, to get the best reproduction from your sound outfit, you must have the right kind of a screen.

Vocalite Sound Screen is proven best by scientific test. Many successful installations have proved it to be superior in light, definition, and tone quality.

It is the only screen optically and chemically correct for the projection of Colored Pictures.

Full information will be sent on request, cost no higher than any good screen.

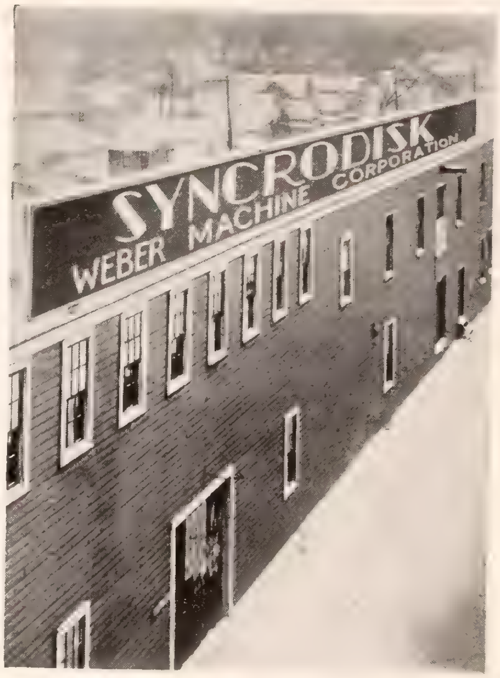
Weber Firm Gets More Factory Space

Increased business during the past two months forces the Weber Machine Corporation, of Rochester, New York, to increase its manufacturing area.

The Weber Company, manufacturers of the Syncrodisk turn-tables and Syncrodisk pick-ups, has constructed an additional factory, known as Factory B, giving the company an additional 15,000 square feet of room. The new factory building is being devoted to assembly, packing and shipment of Syncrodisk turn-tables and the Syncrodisk sound-on-film equipment, details of which are to be announced.



NEW WEBER FACTORY

The main factory and general offices are at 59 Rutter street. The new factory building brings the shipping room virtually alongside the railroad shipping platforms, thus making possible an increase in the speed with which shipments may be effected.

Carl M. Weber, president of the company and inventor of its products, announces that production of the sound-on-film machine is now actually under way and deliveries are being made. The expansion program calls for the employment of about 45 additional workers.

Robert S. MacMahon, sales manager, states actual orders now on hand for sound-on-film equipment, with the price remaining to be fixed, total close to 100.

Describe Vocalite Screen

Complete description and data covering the Vocalite Sound Screens is contained in new catalogue just issued by the Beaded Screen Corporation, Roosevelt, N. Y., manufacturers and distributors of the Vocalite screens, which feature a glass-beaded surface made by a patented process on a silk fabric of special weave and designed to allow for sound permeability.

Proper Acoustics in Small Theatre With Metal Cealing and Walls

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

I have a theatre 22 feet wide and 90 feet long, ceiling 30 foot. The theatre has a balcony. It has steel metal sides and ceiling. I want to install talking pictures in this theatre. Would the steel metal sides and ceiling prevent me from getting proper acoustics in this building?

J. A. E.

Answering J. A. E.:

I know of several small theatres which have tin ceilings and which have installed sound, and the resulting sound reproductions have been very good. The only suggestion I can make is to say that you should experiment with what you have and watch the results. Perhaps you will have some difficulty because of your metal side walls, but I believe that this can be overcome by placing panels of draperies made of fireproof velour, hung loosely in folds. The panels should be 5 feet wide by the height of the room and spaced about 10 feet apart. Your balcony will be of assistance to you in your acoustics, and I believe your metal ceiling will also be of assistance in this respect, but keep in mind that the sound box on the stage should be thoroughly draped so that the sound will have the right direction. As stated before, the best thing to do is to try it out.

Eliminating Second Balcony to Modernize Projection Booth

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

Our theatre has two balconies. On the first balcony at the rear is the projection booth that we have had there for about eight years. This booth is constructed of asbestos and angle iron and occupied a great deal of space. Also, we are limited in the size of the picture because the light strikes the underside of the upper balcony. This second balcony has about 300 seats and is not used very much. In fact, we would just as soon have it removed, but, in doing so, we do not know how to take care of the projection booth and yet maintain a dignified appearance to the theatre.

E. J. M.

Answering E. J. M.:

You do not state whether or not you have or are going to install sound equipment and this answer is based upon the assumption that you will operate sound pictures. The projection booth of today is much different from that of two or three years ago. Today, the stage has moved up into the projection booth. The only things left on the stage are the screen and the horns and the draperies, in the average small town theatre. It is the cycle of development and progress and, therefore, when you do build a new projection booth, that is to be sufficiently larger, it should not be less than 12 feet deep and 20 feet long for the projection room proper. Adjacent thereto, you should have a large battery room and also a large generator room. Of course, the dependencies such as toilet and locker rooms and stairs are in addition. It is very important that all these rooms be well ventilated and fireproof and soundproof, emphasis on the soundproof. It will pay you to make the quarters very large because developments in electrical appliances and inventions are coming fast and there must be plenty of room to accommodate them as they develop. Your operators in the booth must be well taken care of. Do not forget that if they are, they will run your pictures and sound equipment more efficiently and this is highly desirable, since the heart of the show is in your projection booth.

There is no trouble in doing what you suggest in taking out the top balcony. It seems to me that, if you place the projection room floor about 12 feet above the last row of seats in the balcony and suspend the construction from the roof, or take it down and slide columns down through the earth, without interfering too much with the sightlines—your problem will be a small one. You will benefit, of course, by the removal of the present booth which occupies very important seats in the balcony, because the balcony today is one of the best places to listen to a picture. Your local architect can easily take care of this situation and, since he will be able to see the place, he can give you ideas as to redecoration.

More Space Between Seat Rows To Add to Patron's Comfort

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

We have gone "Sound" in our theatre and realize that we must make some changes to meet the situation. There is a 30-foot stage with curved footlights which project ten feet into the auditorium. In front of the footlights is an orchestra pit eight feet wide. On the first floor the seats are 28 inches apart and we would like to improve the appearance of the place and the patrons' comfort by rearranging these seats, which seem to be rather crowded. Can you give us any suggestion that will accomplish this without losing too many seats, because we realize that to make them further apart would be a loss and our standing room is now so small that we can't go into it?

H. H.

Answering H. H.:

Another house gone "talkie" and another exhibitor who looks forward to the comfort of his patrons. That is the right spirit.

The curved footlights you mention went out of existence when the picture business came in. There is no advantage now in having the footlights step out beyond the proscenium arch and, as for your orchestra pit, you of course, will not need any since you have gone "Sound."

I suggest that you place your seats not less than 32 inches back to back and further apart if you want to and can afford it. You can gain 10 feet by flattening the footlights straight with the proscenium arch and you can gain another 8 feet by eliminating the orchestra pit. If you have an organ console, place that on the stage in the wings, or any place in the house, as long as the organist can see the screen. You will gain quite a number of seats, or you may come out even. And you will at the same time give more comfort to your patrons such as you are anxious to do. If you want to, you can go further into the stage with the seats, cutting off some of the stage floor. Of course, this is suggested providing you do not put on shows with actors and scenery, because then your asbestos curtain will have to function.

An Idea of How to Give An Old Opera House New Life

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

I happen to be the operator of a good old opera house in our town. The people are accustomed to it and don't want anything fancy, but I guess they are getting tired of coming to see the old stuff that was done thirty years ago. What we'd like to do is to give the theatre new life. However, we haven't much money to spend on it. We have a good location, a good trade, but rumors have been going around that the people coming back from the large cities kind of miss the nice things they have seen there and we'd like to give them what they like—at least to some degree.

C. R. S.

Answering C. R. S.:

If your seats are good seats, there is no reason why you should make any physical alterations to your theatre. You would be surprised what a few chandeliers, soft lights, draperies, new carpets, new seats, and a brand new set of rest rooms for the men and women, as well as furniture in the lounges, would do to give new life to your theatre. I suppose the theatre is like a great many old opera houses and, if there

Save Money on Tuning

When you permit the temperature of your pipe organ loft to become cold, it throws the pipes out of tune. Makes it impossible to bring out the exquisite tone qualities. Prevents you from doing justice to your work. And it adds far more to your tuning expense in one season than to maintain pipes at the temperature they were tuned.

New Lighting Era Looms in Theatre

contains 11,000 square feet clear floor area and is provided with 48.4 watts per square foot.

From the house distributing board twelve 500,000 circular mill conduits are carried in two feeders to the ballroom dimmer bank room, where they terminate in two 800 ampere circuit breakers. The control board is provided with ammeters so that the operator can keep the load on the ballroom within the 800 ampere capacity of the two feeders. From the circuit breakers sub-feeders are carried to the contactor boards, splitting the four colors—that is, white, blue, green and red—from the contactor board.

Flame proof wires are carried back to a control board located in the control booth in the ballroom directly behind the contactor board. There is a connection strip box with approximately 600 two-wire circuits from which the circuits branch. The circuits consist of No. 8, No. 10 and No. 12 wires grouped to allow a uniform voltage throughout the ballroom. The wires are colored to correspond with the colors of the lamps. Wires from the control board terminate in junction boxes located in the catwalk in the ceiling of the ballroom.

In general the wiring is arranged so that the fourth light of each color is on a separate circuit. These circuits vary from 1,000 to 1,200 watts and are carried to the contactor board, where they are grouped so as to connect with the dimmer bank. The dimmer banks are motor driven by a series of seventeen motors.

Kurtz Is New Head For Nu-Air Sales

K. G. Kurtz, formerly general sales manager of the Bartola Organ Company, and well known in the theatre field, now occupies a similar post with the Arctic Nu-Air Corporation. Kurtz joined Arctic Nu-Air about four months ago as district sales manager, handling several states out of the Chicago office.

He has had a long career in the theatre field, in which he began as a pianist. He became associated with the Bartola Organ Company and headed eventually the sales organization.

Kurtz has established general sales offices in Chicago and will have full charge of district sales offices in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Kansas City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Chicago, and other offices to be opened later by Arctic Nu-Air Corporation.

New Wiring Style Claimed Safeguard

Believing the maze of confusing restrictions and regulations governing the specification and installation of electrical circuits in theatres needed clarifying, the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association has compiled a booklet for the use of architects, engineers, and electrical contractors, outlining a new system which is claimed to safeguard against failures in electrical service.

The compilers claim maximum economy consistent with permanence of investment, reduction of fire hazards, lowest maintenance cost and flexibility and adaptability as the reward of their guidance.

The normal processes of building, the investigators claim, introduce many opportunities for injuring wiring systems before they are actually put to use. Conditions may be created, it is claimed, which ultimately will cause a failure of electrical service months, or even years, after the initial work has been completed.

Radiotone Offers New Rental Terms

An optional rental-purchase agreement now is offered exhibitors by Radiotone Pictures Corporation, whereby the exhibitor may rent talkie equipment with the option of buying it at the end of four months.

At the end of four months' use if the equipment proves satisfactory, the rentals continue for the balance of the year and the exhibitor has sole right to the equipment so rented. If at the end of four months the exhibitor decides he does not want the equipment it is returned to the company, the company says.

Radiotone announces equipment is ready for immediate delivery.

OR

A BUSY BOX OFFICE?

Which Do You Choose

Many a theatre is still four walls surrounding hideous noise. Many a former patron has given up the movies since the talkies began to transform a restful hour to one of horror in the night and shrill, nerve-tearing sounds that resemble nothing human.

Even the mob is getting critical—big houses are getting the razz.

But those who were careful, wise and bought well are starting to reap their reward.

Syncrodisk owners are in this class. You'll find a well nourished box office wherever you find Syncrodisk inside—and that's a pretty fair test.

This year will see a shakedown—eliminations, failures. Syncrodisk offers you protection—box office stability—the assurance that your talkies will never go bad; the certainty that your old patrons will continue to come back—and they'll be bringing others with them.

Remember it doesn't take thousands of dollars to equip your theatre for the Syncrodisk type of talkies.

The light artist's palette

BEHIND the scenes, hidden from the view of the audience, stands the modern light artist's palette—the Westinghouse theater switchboard. With the operation of a single switch the cold gray light of early dawn, the glowing colors of the midday sun and all the splendor of purple twilight flash in a symphony of colors.

Warm, sensuous colors for a tropical love scene, or cold, bleak colors for the tale of the frozen north are mixed in the hidden theater switchboard, the silent partner of good showmanship. As the light artist weaves his magic spell, the audience is unconsciously attuned to the spirit of the production and lives in imagination the scenes before their eyes.

Would you like to know more about this magic lighting that produces such realistic scenes, and transports the audience wholeheartedly into the land of make-believe? Ask the nearest Westinghouse office for complete information.

The Rogue Song

(M-G-M—All Dialogue)

Real Attraction; Tibbett Aces

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

TIP the women off! There's a brand new screen personality headed their way. Lawrence Tibbett, member in good standing of the Metropolitan and a rare operatic combination of good looks and splenderness, looms largely on the horizon of topnotch romantic lovers.

Tibbett has a beautiful voice and a swagger that will set women from coast to coast talking about the latest in screen finds. In "The Rogue Song" he plays a bandit prince who composes songs as he goes. He falls, as does she for him, in love with Catherine Dale Owen. The story, lacking in well-knit situations and often skiddy, deals with their tiffs and final understanding. Laurel and Hardy, dragged in by cuffs, supply the comedy. While they are funny, as always, their antics usually don't belong. The picture is entirely in Technicolor; has been lavishly produced and is a splendid example of musical romance in pictures.

Has enough music; dramatic shorts suggested.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. Story based on operetta by Franz Lehar, A. M. Willner, Robert Bodansky. Directed by Lionel Barrymore Adaptation by Frances Marion and John Colton. Music by Franz Lehar and Herbert Stothart. Edited by Margaret Booth. Photographed by Percy Hilburn. Running time, 1 hour, 45 mins.

Blanket Coverage

FOUR new pictures made their appearance on Broadway this week. Of the four, three were caught by Motion Picture News weeks prior to their debut on the big street. They are "Rogue Song," "Seven Days Leave" and "Their Own Desire."

This week's line-up on Broadway demonstrated that the News was, in most instances, far ahead of its competitors in priority of review coverage.

Also in this issue advance reviews on "New York Night," Norma Talmadge's first talker; "Be Yourself," starring Fannie Brice, and "The Girl Said No," new Haines vehicle. The current main stem line-up and dates when Motion Picture News reviewed the attractions follow:

Be Yourself

(United Artists—All Dialogue)

All Fanny Brice; Average

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

ANY excuse is enough to start Fannie Brice off in another song in "Be Yourself," her first United Artists picture. Those who like to hear Fannie sing will go for it strong. Robert Armstrong, Harry Green and Gertrude Astor are film names which will help put the production across where Miss Brice is little known.

The picture doesn't rate to play any golden theme song on the box office cash register, but nevertheless will manage to hold its own nicely with current program productions. Miss Brice has appeared in one picture, but will require plenty of ballyhoo to acquaint the crowd with the type of character singing she does so well. You'll have to get behind it.

Miss Brice shows in her many song numbers that she isn't afraid of any microphone—scoring several times with her songs and pantomime routines. Armstrong as a lazy prizefighter, and Harry Green in the role of Fannie's younger brother, present characterizations that are standouts. Gertrude Astor is entirely capable as the blonde vamp. Thornton Freeland provided average direction.

Dramatic shorts and scenics can be used to balance the singing and comedy in the feature.

Produced and released by United Artists. From play by Joseph Jackson. Directed by Thornton Freeland. Adapted by Max Marcin and Thornton Freeland. Photographed by Karl Struss and Robert H. Planick. Length, 6900 ft. Running time 1 hr. 15 mins. Release date, Nov. 1, 1930.

The Mask of Love

(Fox—All Dialogue)

Decidedly Interesting

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

THERE is plenty of audience value in "The Mask of Love," which will assure it rating as substantial entertainment for the key city week runs and subsequent bookings.

The story carries along at a good tempo and is enhanced by fine direction and capable characterizations by the players. Elinor Glyn is credited with the original story, which weaves a most interesting drama around the mysterious disappearance of a financier while on an airplane journey over the English Channel. Unlike the general run of Glyn material, romance is secondary to the dramatic movement of the story. The picture should not be mistaken for "hot stuff."

Warner Baxter, featured, gives a fine performance, closely followed by Hedda Hopper and Claude Allister. Catherine Dale Owen is rather negative in the spot opposite Baxter, probably made so by the excellent characterizations of the other members of the cast.

"Mask of Love" is geared to do much better than average business. It should be sold as dramatic, rather than romantic, entertainment.

Comedy shorts needed to fit here for balanced program.

Produced and released by Fox. From original story "Such Men Are Dangerous," by Elinor Glyn. Directed by Kenneth Hawks. Adaptation and dialogue by Ernest Vadja. Running time 1 hour, 10 mins. Release date undetermined.

New York Nights

(United Artists—All Dialogue)

Fair, That's All

(Reviewed by Alvin Meyers)

IN spite of the fact that this is not the type of role usually associated with Norma Talmadge, plus the fact that neither is the story new nor strong, "New York Nights" will prove a fairly strong attraction.

Much of the credit for keeping this moving must be given to Miss Talmadge, who struggles valiantly with a characterization unsuited to her capabilities. Yet she comes through with pretty good colors. The story is concerned with a liquor-loving song writer and his wife's efforts to keep his nose to the grindstone. The developments include a separation and a reconciliation. Through it all, you find the usual underworld baron on the make for the wife. And, yes, there is a theme song as persistent as only a theme song can be.

John Wray, fresh from the stage, is excellent as the heavy, notwithstanding a tendency to overact. Gilbert Roland is almost totally inadequate. Norma is appealing, but the material proved a real stumbling block.

Produced and distributed by United Artists. Directed by Lewis Milestone. Story based on "Tin Pan Alley," stage play by Hugh S. Stange. Scenario by Jules Furthman. Edited by Hal Kern. Photographed by Ray June. Length, 7447 feet. Running time, 1 hr., 12 mins. Release date, Dec. 28, 1929.

Murder on Roof

(Columbia—All Dialogue)

Satisfactory Attraction

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE start was a wow. A mystery story in which you suspected the real criminal, but didn't know how he pulled the crime. After the first reel or so, the picture treatment called for a cabaret background and a love theme. Right then and there the mystery slant hit earth and remained there until the final clinch.

The scene of the crime is a roof cabaret and the reason, possession of a valuable diamond. A down-and-out lawyer is framed, his daughter invades the premises posing as a cabaret performer to verify her suspicions and clear her father. She does, but is almost accused of the owner's death were it not for a drunk, ably played by Raymond Hatton, who divulges his real self as a reporter and proves an eye witness to the second crime.

A good yarn gone wrong. Too bad, but blame the treatment. Why they do it the way they do continues to be one of life's biggest mysteries. Hatton stands out; others average.

Comedies will fit in here.

The Girl Said No

(MGM—All Dialogue)

Satisfactory Programmer

(Reviewed by Alvin Meyers)

SPATTERED with his usual smart aleck antics and the usual sobering up process, this is true to the Haines formula. Two things are noteworthy—the fact that he shows marked ability to carry straight lines and the fact that he is able for the first time in many moons to invoke no little sympathy for his character.

The original title of this was "Fresh From College"—which about tells the story. Of course, there is the job he loses through his bum comedy; the girl he loses the same way; the necessity to change his tactics and the final winning back of both the girl and the job.

Haines will be very well liked; so will Leila Hyams, who is a natural as his lead. Polly Moran and Marie Dressler contribute plenty of laughs, although, wonder of wonders, they do not appear together at any time. The direction, in the hands of Sam Wood, is adroit and keeps the pace well keyed up.

"The Girl Said No" is made in the usual Haines mould. His followers will go for this satisfactory programmer. Not unusual, but pleasing.

Novelties, cartoons and musical shorts advisable.

Love at First Sight

(Chesterfield—All Dialogue)

Good Musical Night Life Stuff

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

WITH the song writer, the Polyanna prima donna, night club and speakeasy atmosphere sprinkled in profusion, this one affords good entertainment accompanied by lots of noise. No one whose name is invaluable to box-office pull is in the cast.

The song writer who turns out a musical comedy hit built around his numbers meets the girl of his dreams in the person of the pretty miss with the prima donna tones.

Edgar Lewis, who was doing some pretty fine work with the megaphone as far back as the "Bar Sinister," shot plenty of action and transferred to the screen a story well told though old and true to the formula that is a sure-fire maker of convenient situations calling for a burst of song.

There are selling points if your audience doesn't insist on million dollar productions. Norman Foster, of stage repute, is featured. Abe Reynolds is easily the star with his fine comedy work.

Romance, comedy and night life sequences should please the most fastidious fan.

Sound cartoons acceptable with this.

Produced by Chesterfield. Story, lyrics and music by Lester, Lee and Charles Levison. Directed by Edgar Lewis; Edited by Russell Shields. Photographed by Dal Clawson. Length 6160 feet. Running time, 1 hr., 12 mins. Release date, Feb. 15.

Fragment of An Empire

(Amkino—Silent)

Propaganda, Not B. O.

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

RUSSIAN propaganda evidenced in no uncertain quantities. Almost entirely devoid of comedy touches. Many sequences verge on the morbid. At times strongly dramatic. A silent product of the Sovkino in Moscow; distributed by its agent in America, Amkino.

Presumably no attention has been given continuity in action or sequence. A conglomerated collection of scenes thrown together in much the same style as the futurist artist builds up his subject.

What story there is timed with any degree of plausible sequence concerns Sergeant Filmonov, who, in the Great War, loses all remembrance of what has transpired, is rehabilitated by the revolutionists and becomes a factor in their reconstruction period.

A Russian actor, Yacov Goodkin, in the role of the young soldier, gives a fine portrayal. Fedor Nikitin as Sergeant Filmonov does some notable character acting.

Frederick Ermler, who directed, apparently was intent on getting Russia's new industrial trend before the public.

The production gives a fine illustration of what Russia is attempting to do to rehabilitate the Empire.

It will go strong in communities where there is a predominance of Russian descent.

Good, strong comedy shorts with this one.

Parade of the West

(Universal—All Dialogue)

Snappy Programmer

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

FEATURE-length sound Westerns present too many mechanical difficulties, so producers pick the rodeo and wild west show as a substitute for hard-riding thrills.

Universal assigned a story of this type to Ken Maynard for "Parade of the West," and Maynard takes full advantage of the opportunity to show what he can do in the arena, offering considerably more action than one would find in the average Western.

It's the same old outdoor show story, but done effectively by Harry J. Brown, who keeps the action moving pretty steadily, except in a few spots. Gladys McConnell supplies the love interest, but she has very little to do. Jackie Hanlon is the chief support. The 12-year-old kid is a knockout. He can do fancy riding as well as any old vet of the saddle. This kid angle is a strong selling point where youngsters supply a large part of your weekly intake. Of course, it's Maynard's show. Comedy relief headed by Otis Harlan, while not sensational, provides some laughs.

Use a two-reel musical revue number and a cartoon.

Produced by Ken Maynard and released by Universal. Story and continuity by Bennett Cohen. Directed by Harry J. Brown. Titled by Leslie Mason. Photographed by Ted McCord. Length, 5,900 ft. Time, 1 hr., 10 mins. Release date, Jan. 19, 1930.

"Vernon's Aunt"

(Universal Talker—2 Reels)

A Bushel of Laughs

CLEVERLY constructed gags provide many laugh-provoking situations concerning the efforts of Vernon Dent and Lou Archer, posing as a pair of nuts in an attempt to discourage a visiting aunt from prolonging her stay. They get the point over very nicely and auntie flees for her life. Rapid-fire comedy material, sure to click. Running time, 20 minutes.

Use a novelty reel.

Summer

(Columbia—"Silly Symphony")

Simply Grand

AND still they come! This young man, named Walt Disney, is helping to supply an entire nation with a constant load of laughs. The "Silly Symphony" series in "Summer" adds another to a long list of delightful bits of cartoon humor. The animation by Ub Iwerks is clever in the extreme. He gets the most ludicrous of situations from his characters which, with the additional nicely timed and properly selected music, make this one reeler exactly what it is. Running time, 8 minutes.

Good comedies will fit in nicely.

"Oh, Darling"

(Jack White-Educ'l—2 Reels)

Funny Situations

HONEYMOONERS, chased by the bride's parents, and a married couple in the room adjoining, the wife a flirt and the husband extremely jealous. That's the theme and it leads to many complications and some laughs. It registers as a good comedy with a fair sprinkling of laughs. In the cast are: Nancy Dover, Norman Peck, Addie McPhail, John Litel, Eva Thatcher, Sidney Bracey and Al Thompson. Sidney Roberts directed, using Western Electric recording. Running time, 15 mins.

Novelty shorts, cartoons or travel, O. K.

"Crimson Courage"

(Universal Silent—2 Reels)

Up to Standard

WHERE they go for a Northwestern M. P. story, in silent form, they'll like this. Ted Carson, directed by Josef Levigard, in the cut and dried "get your man" yarn, this one centers around a clique which is concentrating on a big haul in the office of the Dragon Mine. The M. P. collars the trio after the usual wild chase. Running time, 18 minutes.

Book a strong comedy with this one.

"Getting the Air"

fun, all at the expense of Arthur. The first reel doesn't register, but it's slowness is redeemed, to a great extent, by the wind-up. The kiddies will eat it up. Running time, 16 minutes.

A short musical and a novelty will go great.

"Camera Shy"

(Educ'l—All Talker—2 Reels)

Hamilton Gets Laughs

THIS is a fair Hamilton comedy, with some laughs and funny situations. It has a number of expensive sets, Hamilton has done better, but this has an unusual twist, in that it shows the star on a film lot, trying to get listeners to hear outlined his great starring story, in which he goes through a number of amusing and provoking incidents. Harry Edwards produced with Gilbert Pratt directing and using Western Electric recording. In the cast are Ruth Hiatt, Harry Woods, Natalie Joyce and Will Hays. Running time, 16 mins.

Cartoon short will go well with this.

"Sugar Plum Papa"

(Sennett—Educ'l—2 Reels)

A Wow of a Comedy

THIS is probably the best of the Sennett all-talking comedies. It sure packs a load of punch. The screen needs more good comedies like this one which clicks from a wide variety of angles. It has story, cast, gage and speed, and the laughs come often. Daphne Pollard has been added to the list of Sennett favorites, which includes Marjorie Beebe, Andy Clyde and Harry Gribbon. Others in the cast are: Bud Jamison, Rosemary Theby, Bert Swor. Sennett directed this from story and dialogue by John A. Waldron, Harry McCoy, Hampton Del Ruth and Carl Harbough. Gribbon is the stepson of a wealthy social climber, who tries to marry him to a countess. But the boy has other plans, and half the navy comes in to help him put 'em over. Running time, 17 minutes.

Talk about this one; it rates it. Other shorts don't matter when you play this.

"All Stuck Up"

(Pathe-Talker—2 Reels)

Inexcusable

ALL of the gags in this boresome line-up of slapstick fall as flat as a pancake, save one, and that one gag happens to be objectionable. It concerns the antics of a female impersonator, who is very realistic in his portrayal of a big blonde gal. If this same sequence was injected into anything but a slapstick of this type, we hardly think it would get by. At one particular spot, the impersonator reveals a well-rounded dumbbell which he uses in the bosom of his dress. Distasteful. Generally, the reel is jammed full of hodge-podge which bears all the earmarks of production standards of other days. A Checker Comedy, produced by George Le Maire.

Strong short dramatic material needed to bolster this up.

Stage Door Pests

(Columbia—Victor Gem)

Just Another Sound Act

THIS hits that vast in-between: neither very good nor very bad. Boyce Coombes manages to get over a fair degree of comedy via his impersonation of an English duke, sappy enough to wish himself on the stage and pay his way to do so. He sings several numbers, the best of which is a sneezing song about "colds in the dose." No excitement in this one. Directed by Jasper Ewing Brady. Running time, 10 minutes.

Won't stand on its own. Needs good support in shorts.

Spookeasy

(Columbia—"Krazy Kat")

A Darb

GIVE yourself a good time—not forgetting your audiences—by spotting this in. Now, pronto, at once. For this cartoon affair concerns the adventures of Krazy Kat in the land of spooks. Ben Harrison and Manny Gould did the animation and what a grand job they put over The trees, lightning, church steeple and everything else in sight swings into the rythm of the music in a series of happenings which are as funny as anything done in the field of sound cartoons to date. Don't pass this one up. Running time, 8 minutes.

Can stand as a lone short on any program.

Critics Rave Over Tibbett

Many pictures have played the Main Stem since any one of them was accorded the favorable break given Lawrence Tibbett in "The Rogue Song" (M-G-M) by New York newspaper reviewers. They stand unanimous in proclaiming his first screen performance a success. Consensus of opinion follows:

American— . . . presence of Tibbett dwarfs all the other achievements that M-G-M . . . presents . . . in "The Rogue Song." And these indeed are not a few . . .

Daily News— . . . we have had. (operatic) short subject songs . . . But these can hardly be compared with Tibbett's wholly ingratiating, powerfully vocalized performance.

Graphic— . . . most thrilling vocal performance the audible screen has yet exhibited . . . His (Tibbett's) gorgeous baritone voice gave the talkies a new meaning, and dwarfed the mincing aspirations that have passed for emotion vocally interpreted by his lesser Hollywood contemporaries . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . Tibbett . . . is eminently successful . . .

Journal · . . . vocally and visually compelling.

Post— . . . a singing voice that lends itself admirably to the exigencies of sound reproduction, but it is a pity that a more substantial vehicle for his first effort could not have been found . . .

Sun— . . . the best of the operettas that have tinkled and reverberated from the talking screen . . .

Telegram—The advance reports . . . were entirely justified . . . Mr. Tibbett . . . is the film's most valuable asset . . .

Times— . . . inspiring . . . Tibbett . . . fills his part well . . .

World (Evening)—Musical romance such as it never has been presented on the screen . . . and thus the talking screen may be said to have achieved its ral expression for the first time . . .

World (Morning)— . . . Tibbett sang and played . . . with distinction, with, indeed, a magnificent dramatic effect.

50-50 Break for New German, Russian Films

"Because I Love You," the first dialogue picture made in Germany to reach American screens, highlighted a group of foreign pictures which opened this week at New York art houses. Three German and a Russian vehicle were in the group. They were all given a fair break by New York newspaper critics.

"Because I Love You" brought over by American General Film Co., is compared with early American audibles. "The Kaiser in War and Peace," distributed by Rex Prod., is a newsreel record of the Hohenzollerns, built into a feature. The third German vehicle, "Last Night," was not treated too kindly, general consensus of opinion branding it as a slow-moving vehicle. Amkino's "Fragment of an Empire" was accepted by the critics as "interesting," "morbid" and chock full of propaganda.

Brief opinions of the New York reviewers follow:

"Because I Love you"

American— . . . recommended as a novelty . . . should hold special interest for those who understand the language . . . audience seemed . . . pleased.

Graphic— . . . compares with the early American audible productions.

Journal— . . . much of interest . . . recording is good . . . voices register well . . . it is, however, imitative of Hollywood product, and judged by American film standards, crudely so.

Post— . . . possesses to a high degree the salient characteristics of all the Hollywood products since the advent of talkies . . .

Sun— . . . while it indicates the Germans have not yet attained mechanical perfection of the American sound films it shows them moving steadily in the proper dialogue picture that came . . . from Hollywood. . . .

Telegram— . . . neither better nor worse than the early American sound pictures. . . .

Times— . . . far from a satisfactory example of audible films, but . . . it is one that possesses imagination in its direction . . .

World— . . . immeasurably superior to the first dialogue picture that came . . . from Hollywood

"Kaiser in War and Peace"

American— . . . a museum picture—an historical record . . . a valuable record . . . audience seemed only mildly pleased.

Daily News— . . . the new compilation of events is . . absorbing.

Morning Telegraph— . . . amusing and interesting . . .

Times—A seemingly endless and boring pictorial record . . .

Worla— . . . It represents the most comprehensive record of the Hohenzollerns . . . which I have seen.

"The Last Night"

American - . . . sets are attractive, and . . . acting fair enough . . . final impression is that of tedium. . . .

Daily News— . . . tastefully conceived . . . unfolded in painfully slow pace . . .

Herald-Tribune—This tiresome silent screen effort . . . must have been pulled out of a bag of antiques. . . .

Telegram— . . . a slight, highly artificial little piece that depends essentially upon the acting of its principal players and on the treatment it receives from the director for its effectiveness.

Times—An interesting German silent picture.

World (Morning)— . . . seems pretty heavy and outworn. . . . It is well acted, but . . . a trifle too well acted.

"Fragment of an Empire"

American - . . . one of the most satisfactory pictures yet to emerge from Soviet Russia . . . should prove a magnet to those who find interest in the usually depressing, propaganda-loaded product emanating from the steppes . . .

Daily News— . . . extremely interesting . . . starkly grim and brightly optimistic.

Graphic— . . . a superfluity of allegorical shots, sometimes vividly impressing, but often excessively boring and confusing.

Herald-Tribune— . . . mature and stimulating . . . even though . . . often tinged too strongly with propaganda and . . . weighted down with a kind of Russian garrulousness. . . .

Telegraph— . . . generally satisfactory film entertainment for those who fancy this type . . . For the average moviegoer there is nothing of note.

Telegram— . . frank piece of Bolshevik propaganda . . . when you disregard the propaganda, it is a simple and effective film . . .

Times— . . . In certain respects this film is a trifle sketchy, but it is nevertheless impressive and imaginative. It is grim, sometimes unnecessarily morbid. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . moves at a snail's pace . . . M. Nitikin has the whole show.

World (Morning)—Excellent characterizations . . . It might very well be trimmed and joined with a better general result.

"7 Days" Placed In "10 Best" Class

It's still a little early, but, nevertheless, several New York newspaper reviewers rate "Seven Days Leave" (Paramount) as "one of the ten best pictures of 1930." "The Mirror" and "Morning World" disagreed with the favorable opinion held generally, the latter claiming it is "not much," while "The Mirror" believes the Barrie story was developed along lines "so dreary and pointless, it's incredible Paramount made it."

Excerpts from the reviews follow:

American— . . . between their tears and laughter the audience applauded louder and longer than it has for many a Friday morning . . . one of the best . . . of 1930. . . .

Daily Mirror— . . . so dreary and pointless, it's incredible that Paramount made it. . . .

Daily News— . . . an all-around cracker jack picture which wasn't meant for the box-office, but ought to have no difficulty in piling in customers. . . . sure to be one of 1930's best.

Graphic—A remarkably fine film drama. . . . shouldn't be missed.

Herald-Tribune— . . . a tender, charming and genuinely poignant picture heroically devoid of cinema clinches . . .

Journal— . . . one of the few genuinely beautiful pictures yet produced.

Sun— . . . probably the third most ambitious effort attempted by the talkies.

Telegram— . . . your interest never lags for an instant. . . .

Telegraph— . . . I suggest that you see the picture. . . . In fact, I urge you to.

World (Evening)— . . . you'll doubtless love the touches here and there in the story which can be traceable only to Director Wallace.

World (Morning)—Barrie, but not much. . . .

"An outstanding attraction," Motion Picture News stated in its review, which appeared in the issue dated Nov. 13, under the former title, "Medals."

New Time Cuts Jump for F. & M. Idea Units

Oklahoma City—Two more theatres in Oklahoma have arranged to play Fanchon and Marco "Ideas." They are at the Orpheum here, starting Feb. 24, and the Coleman at Miami, Okla., starting Feb. 19. Oklahoma City will be a four day date, playing the "Ideas" Monday to Thursday, with Miami playing them two days, Wednesday and Thursday.

Miami and Oklahoma City, with Tulsa already playing Fanchon and Marco shows, serve to ease the jump of "Ideas," on their return trip to Los Angeles after playing Atlanta.

Von Stroheim Acting

Hollywood—Acting apparently has the spotlight for Eric von Stroheim these days over both directing and writing. He has signed with Warners to assume the starring spot in "Three Faces East," from the play by Anthony Paul Kelly. Oliver H. P. Garrett is writing the adaptation. A silent version of the property was produced in 1926.

Ad Tips—Stressed Cecil DeMille as the producer, and gave picture an important place in film history for that reason; also advertised it extensively as DeMille's first talking picture. It appealed to those who like lots of melodrama of all ages.—Isadore Lidman, Mgr., Allen, Cleveland.

Box Office Check-Up And Ad. Tips

Ad Tips—Conrad Nagel, a Des Moines boy, was played up. A suprprise letter in which a rubber band contrivance made a loud report as the letter was opened, played up the dynamite idea. Weather did not handicap the business which held up thru week against opposition.—George Watson, Mgr., The Des Moines, Des-Moines.

Footlights and Fools (F.N.)

OTTAWA—Centre, (1,200), 6 days, 15c-50c. Other attractions: "Lucky in Love," Fox silent news, negro comedy. Weather, fair and cold. Opposition: "The Kiss," "Saturday Night Kid," "This Is Heaven," "Romance of Rio Grande," "Shannons of Broadway." Rating, 90%.

Ad Tips—Used large painted signs over the marquee bearing the name of Colleen Moore, who has always been a favorite at the Centre, and the name of this film with cutouts suggesting the story. Brought out the point that Colleen was now to be seen in the role of a French stage star, surrounded by chorines, and that she sings a number of songs beautifully. Called it a "love story as thrilling as Lilac Time" and there is some exceptionally good acting in it. The feature pleases all classes and ages.—Don Stapleton, Mgr., Centre, Ottawa.

Forward Pass (F. N.)

DES MOINES.—Strand (1,100), 3 days, 20c-30c. Other attractions, Columbia act, "In a Talkie Studio"; Universal cartoon, "Ozzie at the Circus," Kinograms. Opposition, "Sacred Flame," "Dynamite," "So This Is College," "Sky Hawk," "South Sea Rose," "Sally." Weather, snow, cold. Rating, 90%.

Four Feathers (Par.)

OKLAHOMA CITY—Rialto (700), 15c-25c, 4 days. Other attractions, Pathe News. Weather, very cold, sleet and snow. Opposition, Al Jolson in person, "Laughing Lady," "It's a Great Life," "Sunny Side Up," "Cock-Eyed World," "Sally' (2nd week). Rating, 100%.

General Crack (W.B.)

SEATTLE—Music Box (950), 50c-75c, first week. Other attractions: One Vitaphone short. Weather, fair and cold. Opposition: "Sally," "Lost Zeppelin," "Lone Star Ranger," "Kibitzer," "Talk of Hollywood," "Hallelujah." Rating, 150%.

Girl From Havana (Fox)

MILWAUKEE—Merrill (1,298), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions, comedy, newsreel. Weather, cold and clear. Opposition, "Harmony at Home," "Hot for Paris," "Condemned," "Lost Zeppelin," "Peacock Alley," "Sally." Rating, 95%.

TROY, N. Y.—Proctor's (2,000), 25c-60c, 4 days. Other attractions, vaudeville acts. Weather, cold but pleasant. Opposition, "The Trespasser," "Applause." Rating, 100%.

Ad Tips—Played this up pretty heavy not only through the newspapers but also lobby decoration. featuring it as a gorgeous singing, talking and dancing spectacle with Mary Eaton, Eddie Cantor and Rudy Vallee. Audience appeal, general.—Joseph Wallace, Mgr., Proctor's Grand, Albany, N. Y.

Ad Tips—Gave this considerable newspaper space as a pageant of youth and one in which Ziegfeld himself shows the famous Broadway stars. Also ran cuts of the stars in newspaper advertising. Audience appeal, general.—Jacob Golden, Mgr., Proctor's, Troy, N. Y.

Grand Parade (Pathe)

BALTIMORE—Auditorium (1,600), 6 days starting with Sunday midnight show, as the world premier of this picture, 35c-$1.50, four reserved seat shows daily. Other attractions, "Sportlights" (Pathe), an all-talking comedy, Aesop's fable, "Song Hits from Grand Parade." Weather, cloudy, cold, snow, to clear and cold. Opposition (screen), "Painted Angel," "Nix On Dames," "Disraeli," "Meistersinger," "Show of Shows," "Sunny Side Up," "Hell's Heroes," "Love's Parade," "Dynamite." Stage: Otis Skinner in "Papa Juan," "Robin Hood," "Parisian Flappers," concert artists and operas at Lyric. Rating, 50%.

Ad Tips—Exploit this as an all-talking, singing, dancing spectacle picture that "will live with the public forever." Play up names of Helen Twelvetrees and Fred Scott as the principals. Play heavily upon the title. Use words: The first minstrel musical super production to reach the talking screen. Hear the tuneful song hits "Molly," "Alone in the Rain," and "Moaning for You." Plenty of chances for tie-ups with music dealers, radio, phonograph record shops. Use banners plentifully, stretching one across the street in front of theatre if possible. Audience appeal is quite strong for all who remember minstrels and enjoy that type of performance. Others will enjoy it for its good music, fine dancing and spectacle.—Fred C. Schanberger, Jr., Mgr., Auditorium, Baltimore.

Half Way to Heaven (Para.)

VANCOUVER—New Orpheum (2,871), 25c-$1.00, 6 days. Other attractions, five vaudeville acts, Calvin Winter and his music, Ivy Evans at the Wurlitzer, Pathe News. Weather, cold and clear. Opposition, "Painted Angel," "Bulldog Drummond," "Lucky Star," Maurice Colbourne Players, British Guild Players. Rating, 95%.

Hallelujah (M-G-M)

SEATTLE—Fox (2,450), 25c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions, Mickey Mouse cartoon, Fox Movietone News, Henri LeBel organ solo, Vic Meyers Band with Owen Sweeten as guest conductor. Weather, cold and clear. Opposition, "Sally," "Lone Star Ranger," "General Crack," "Talks of Hollywood," "Lost Zeppelin," "Kibitzer." Rating, 85%.

Harmony At Home (Fox)

MILWAUKEE—Wisconsin (3,275), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions, Fanchon & Marco's "Accordion" Idea, Fox Movietone News Reel. Weather, clear and cold. Opposition, "Hot for Paris," "Condemned," "Sally," "Girl From Havana," "Peacock Alley," "Lost Zeppelin." Rating, 110%.

Weather cloudy, cold, snow, to clear and cold. Opposition (screen), "Grand Parade," "Painted Angel," "Nix On Dames," "Disraeli," "Meistersinger," "Show of Shows," "Sunny Side Up," "Love Parade," "Dynamite." Stage: Otis Skinner in "Papa Juan," "Robin Hood," "Parisian Flappers," concert artists and operas at Lyric. Rating, 90%.

BUFFALO—Lafayette (3,000), 7 days, 60c. Other attractions: Vaudeville, comedy skit, song with organ, Fox Movietone News and Fox News. Weather, cold. Opposition: "Love Parade," "Love Racket," "Navy Blues," "Condemned." Rating, 110%.

Hit the Deck (RKO)

LOS ANGELES—Orpheum (2,750), 7 days, 35c to 75c. Other attractions, Pathe Sound News and "Good Medicine." Opposition, "Anna Christie," "New York Nights," "Show of Shows," "Love Parade," "Hollywood Revue," "Dance Hall." Weather, fine. Gross, $13,800.

Box Office Check-Up And Ad. Tips

Kibitzer, The (Para.)

SEATTLE—Metropolitan (1,100), 25c-65c, 7 days. Added attractions, "Deep Sea Melodies," "The Plasterers," Paramount Sound News. Weather, fair and cold. Opposition, "Sally," "Hallelujah," "Lost Zeppelin," "General Crack," "Lone Star Ranger," "Talk of Hollywood." Rating, 90%.

TROY, N. Y.—Troy Theatre (2,000), 35c-50c, 3 days. Other attractions, one Vitaphone act, sound "Sportlight," Paramount Sound News. Weather, cold but pleasant. Opposition, "Darkened Rooms," "Song of Kentucky." Rating, 90%.

Ad Tips—Play this up as the picture made from "the smashing Broadway stage success," with every minute a laugh, and don't forget to mention Mary Brian. Audience appeal, general.—Benjamin Stern, Mgr., Troy Theatre, N. Y.

Kiss, The (M-G-M)

OTTAWA—B. F. Keith's (2,596), 6 days, 15c-60c. Other attractions: Five RKO vaudeville acts, "The Talkies," Pathe News, orchestra overture, Canadian scenic. Weather, fair and cold. Opposition: "Saturday Night Kid," "Footlights and Fools," "Romance of Rio Grande," "This Is Heaven," "Shannons of Broadway." Rating, 92%.

Ad Tips—Although this was not a dialogue picture, the women were attracted by the title and the story, while the men flocked to see Garbo as usual. The atmosphere is distinctly French and this was emphasized in order to attract the large local French population. The story resembles "Madame X" and "The Trial of Mary Dugan" combined, but Greta proves to be a wonderful tragedienne. Details of feature and program were broadcast from the stage of the theatre Monday night and large pictures of Garbo were used outside.—J. M. Franklin, Mgr., B. F. Keith's, Ottawa.

Laughing Lady (Para.)

DALLAS—Palace (2,350), 7 days, 25c-35c-60c. Other attractions, Publix presentation, "Farm Yard Frolics" and Jimmie Ellard and his stage band, Johnny Winters in organ novelty, Paramount Sound News. Weather, cold. Opposition, "This Thing Called Love," "Chasing Rainbows," "Locked Door," "Love Comes Along." Rating, 100%.

HOUSTON—Kirby (1,654), 7 days, 25c-50c. Other attractions, "He Loved the Ladies," with Taylor Holmes, sound novelty song, and Paramount Sound News. Weather, bitter cold with lowest temperature in 52 years. Opposition, "Lilies of Field," "South Sea Rose" and "Their Own Desire." Rating, 85%.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Criterion (2,000), 7 days, 25c-50c. Other attractions, Paramount Sound News, Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards in singing and dancing; "The Plasterers." Weather, 10° below zero, sleet and snow. Opposition, Al Jolson in person, "It's a Great Life," "Sunny Side Up," "Cock-Eyed World," "Sally." Rating, 125%.

OMAHA—Paramount (2.900), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions, Publix "Creole Nights" unit, Paramount News, orchestra and organ. Weather, cold. Opposition, "Condemned," "Vagabond Lover," "Song of Kentucky," "Three Live Ghosts." Rating, 150%.

PROVIDENCE—Strand (2,200), 15c-50c. 7 days. Other attractions, "Dangerous Females," "At the Gate," song cartoon. Weather, fair, warm. Opposition, "Hot for Paris," "Bishop Murder Case," "Sunny Side Up." Rating, 90%.

A. featurette), Frank Siegrist and his syncopators, organ selections, "Marriage Vows" (comedy), Paramount News. Weather, rain. Opposition: "Hot for Paris," "Sunny Side Up," "Love Parade," Broadway," "Song of Love," "South Sea Rose," "Show of Shows," "Sally." Rating, 100%.

Ad Tips—Play up Ruth Chatterton in adult drama. She laughed at life; she laughed when society branded her an outcast; she laughed at love"—was advertising keynote. Also bill Clive Brook for suave performance. Appeal is to adults.—Holden Swager, Mgr., Kirby, Houston.

Ad Tip—Stress in publicity Ruth Chatterton's fame on the speaking stage. Picture should be played up as smart, sophisticated comedy with appeal for young and old.—Ed Reed, Mgr., Strand, Providence.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

The Mailing List

FROM time to time we have dwelt upon the value and importance of an adequate mailing list for every conceivable type of theatre, regardless of its size or where located.

The reason for this insistence is not just because we are believers in such lists, but because experience and investigation have proven beyond all shadow of doubt that a good, live mailing list is a most valuable asset in advertising a theatre's program or special attractions.

The chief reason why such lists fall into the discard or lose favor is not because they become ineffective or worthless, but because the manager permits his list to contain too much "dead wood" and names that mean nothing, when all the time he should be keeping it alive and increased with new names.

Only a short time ago we told you in one of the Showman sections of the News how hundreds of names were being compiled at the News Reel Theatre here in New York because they were constantly plugging this one angle. Unquestionably, their fine list is accountable for much of the continued interest in this unsual theatre.

Another angle of great importance in dealing with mailing lists in theatres is to refrain from flooding them with too much or worthless material. If they do not look forward with interest for your letters or programs then you can certainly expect the envelope to go direct from the mail box to the waste basket.

Months ago we set forth the results of a personal investigation into the tremendous interest of the smaller town and city patron in the theatre program received through the mail. At that time we told how we watched the arrival of the mailman and that the patron lost no time in looking through the program or announcement as soon as it put in its appearance.

If every theatre manager were to look into this one angle with the same degree of interest as we did, they would soon be as enthusiastic about it as we are.

Granted that the local paper will convey your current or coming attractions to all those reading the paper. But what could be more impressive than the arrival of an announcement pertaining to some unusual attraction due at your theatre in a short time and setting forth, showmanlike and briefly, the outstanding points of that attraction?

If the piece of mailing matter has been properly made up it is bound to create in the minds of those receiving it a desire to either to see the attraction or know more about it.

NOTICE

In an effort to keep pace with the tremendous amount of material being received from our members and readers, we have increased the number of Club pages in this issue to NINETEEN (19).

We can recall no precedent in trade paper history where so large a portion of its contents was devoted to the interests of managers and exhibitors.

Again, it gives you the opportunity of selling institutional matter to your regular patrons as well as telling them about added feature on your program.

There are so many desirable angles to this particular phase of showmanship that we could devote many more pages to it than just the little we have had to say, but after all, the wide-awake manager will surely grasp the significance of the suggestion and if he has not already built up an impressive mailing list he certainly should make a start right away.

Meet "The Firing Line"

Through the courtesy of Tom Olsen, Publicity Director for the Upstate Fox Metropolitan Houses, we have just had the opportunity of looking through the first copy of "The Firing Line," a weekly news letter turned out by Tom and assisted by Agnes Degni.

Our first reaction to this "peppy" circuit organ is that it's great and we are certain it will gain increasing popularity with each succeeding issue and also be of marvelous aid to the boys on the firing line at the various houses under the direction of District Supervisor E. M. Hart and Tom Olsen.

There was much of interest in this news letter that will surely find its way onto the Club pages and if it will help at all, we offer our heartiest congratulations to the sponsors of "The Firing Line" and thank them for their thoughtfulness in putting us on the mailing list.

An Inexpensive Sign Was Good for Jack Shields

Jack Shields gets in touch with your Chairman to remind him that we made a mutual acquaintance and friendship at the time I was looking over Eva Tanguay in Ansonia, and so, extreme apologies are in order, Jack. I hope you accept mine.

You see, I was under the impression that you only recently came to Ansonia from one of the other towns, and it was another one of the Hoffman managers that I met on my trip to Ansonia. At any rate, apropos of the visit about Eva Tanguay, I want you to know that I did book her, and that I lost plenty of dough on her. However, it wasn't Eva's fault, nor was it mine. Middletown didn't know what it was all about so far as Eva was all concerned, so we tried the best we could, anyhow.

Now, to get back to real business, we want you to see a nifty gag that Jack pulled in connection with "HOLLYWOOD REVUE," that was not only the talk of the town, but was really the talk of New England, when it came to advertising the theatre and an attraction. He erected a flashing sign on this attraction that was built of beaver board and lighted with two of the stage plug lights from back stage. The entire thing set him back about $20, but to us on the photo it certainly looks like a $300 gag, and I wouldn't be surprised if other people figured it cost just that much as well.

No need to go into too much of a song and dance over this one Shields has pulled, because it is self-explanatory by reason of looking at the sign itself, but we certainly hate to pass up the chance to tell him that it was a marvelous gag, and that we appreciate his thoughtfulness in sending it on to us.

If any of you other fellows are interested in anything along these lines, drop us a line and we'll send you all the dope complete, and we don't mind telling you that it is worth while writing for because it is not only inexpensive, but, as the photo shows, even in the small reproduction on the cut, it was well worth the expense.

Earl M. Willey Says:

"I am enclosing my application in the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB. I need the 100% information in the CLUB pages to help run my theatre, not counting the valuable news and information between the covers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

Monty Salmon's Exploit Stuff is Going Over Big

Using a flock of good stunts, the newspaper contest was undoubtedly the highlight in Monty Salmon's campaign on "Fight," playing at the Rialto Theatre, in Macon, Ga.

The Macon "Telegraph" co-operated on the newspaper stunt as well as merchants subscribing to ads on the co-operative page. An aeroplane was cut into about 24 pieces and placed in the different ads on the co-op page. These pieces were to be cut out and when finished, the letters FLIGHT were written across the front of the plane.

The "Telegraph" contributed three cash awards amounting to $25.00 and the theatre kicked in with passes for the next 50 winners.

Over 400 answers were submitted on the plane contest. And so many beautiful planes were sent in—colored, mounted, placed in attractive frames, flying in the clouds, etc.—that a number of them were used to make displays in each of the store windows that had co-operated on the stunt.

An aviator was engaged to fly over Miller Field doing some fancy flying and at different intervals dropping large circus heralds on which appeared effective sales copy about the picture, cast, theatre and play dates.

Friday before play date, the aviator flew his plane over a field where a football game was in progress. The flight was timed so as not to interfere with the progress of the game—arriving at the scene between the halves. Heralds were again dropped and the vast assemblage scrambled to get one of these notices. Although Macon is not such a small city, it is still country enough to get excited over a stunt of this kind.

Salmon was fortunate in getting the J. C. Penny Co. to lend the theatre a number of toy aeroplanes and zeppelins and one mechanical plane which were placed on the mezzanine floor. These toys were suspended at various angles and the mechanical plane was connected with the light in the centre of the room and would fly around in a circle.

Salmon also obtained an aeroplane motor from a German plane that had been brought down in the war as well as the wings and propeller. The motor was placed in the lobby near the sidewalk with a small card on it giving the history. This display attracted crowds at all hours of the day.

Great stuff, Monty, and just what we would expect of a man of your experiences as demonstrated in the past on the pages of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. Suppose you follow it up with some more of your interesting activities and see that we get all the dope and photos.

Nat Silver's "Parcel Gag" Is Worth Duplicating

Manager Nat Silver of the Merrimack Square Theatre, Lowell, Mass., is responsible for the idea of all three local Publix houses establishing check rooms where parcels might be checked gratis.

The stunt which is purely one of goodwill is not new to the industry but is apparently new to the people of Lowell.

People did not necessarily have to be a patron of any of the three Publix theatres, but everybody was welcome to take advantage of this newest Publix service. All that was necessary was to go to the doorman and ask him for the Publix Parcel Checking and your parcels would be taken care of.

Silver augmented this idea by providing each shopper with a special reinforced bag which has a big Publix seal and the slogan "Attend a Publix Theatre."

The stunt not only provided a convenience for the shoppers taking advantage of this service but made many new friends for the theatre as well as insuring the already Publix patrons that this was only another instance of trying to serve them as a Public servant.

The stunt also caused a lot of favorable talk—and the Publix shopping bags being carried through the streets also served to give the Publix houses further advertising.

We have already told you about Nat and some of the things he has engineered with the Publix theatres he has been running, so his name is by no means new on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages. We would, however, like to encourage him to contribute a little more frequently, and to shoot along a photo or two, not only of his activities, but of himself so that we can better illustrate what he is doing out in his part of the world.

Student Appeal Plugged Imperial for Borenstein

Joseph S. Borenstein reached 3,500 students by making a direct appeal to 35 teachers in advertising "Taming of the Shrew" playing at the Imperial Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I.

Specially written letters about the educational value of the picture as well as enclosing five tickets each for the teachers' disposal were sent to the 35 English teachers in the Junior and Senior High Schools.

Part of the letter which is rather convincing follows: "The educational values to the students are obvious. At the same time, they are learning as they are being entertained, which is a pleasant and novel way of absorbing knowledge. Even if the students have studied this choice bit of literature or are going to have it as a part of their curriculum in the distant future, it will be worth their while to see and hear this twentieth century reproduction of the fifteenth century masterpiece."

Inasmuch as each teacher has approximately 50 students under her supervision, this message about the picture reached in the neighborhood of 3,500 students, who in turn imparted the message to their parents and friends.

Read Stopped 'Em With His Bath Tub Display

Manager John P. Read, Rialto Theatre, Colorado Springs, built a unique display to feature the fact that Winnie Lightner sings the burlesque song number, "Singin' In The Bathtub" in "Show of Shows." The display consisted of a real tub, a small one, placed in the lobby of the Rialto Theatre. Above the tub was arranged a real shower-ring and curtain. Inside the shower-curtain stood a life-size cut-out of Winnie Lightner, visible from the shoulders up. In front of the Lightner cut-out was a large card with copy as follows:

> "Winnie Lightner says, 'Singin' in the shower is like singin' in the rain, but you haven't heard anything until you hear my comedy song hit 'Singin' in the Bathtub' in Show of Shows."

The display was further captioned with a large card announcing "Singin' In The Bathtub" as the comedy hit of "Show of Shows," and reminding people that Winnie Lightner was the star comedienne of "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

From point of CLUB activities, Johnny Read has not been near as active as his brother Publix managers, but perhaps that is because he is of a retiring and shy nature. At any rate, we will figure it that way until future activities disprove that theory. Let's hear some more, Read, and be sure to send on your own photo.

WORTHWHILE PUBLICITY!

We have passed along every conceivable kind of newspaper cooperative tieup imaginable, even where the theatre has been successful in crashing the local paper for free feature stories but this is the first time that it has been our privilege or pleasure to show a full page story in the form of a Sunday feature dealing with the personalities and activities as well as equipment of a theatre.

In this case, this fine piece of work was engineered by the folks who are responsible for the destiny of the Rialto Theatre in Casper, Wyo., a house which is under the managing directorship of E. J. Schulte, with C. H. Chidley as house manager.

We are certainly grateful to Mr. Chidley for forwarding this page, and while it may not show up as clearly as we had hoped it would, because of the reduction of size, it will nevertheless give you an idea of how a local paper with the proper ecouragement can feature the inside workings and various personalities connected with a local theatre and combine it all into a most interesting story that is bound to attract public attention and interest.

Here's hoping we hear a whole lot more about the Rialto Theatre, Inc., in Casper, Wyo., because everything they send is a real newsy and interesting item for the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages.

"Free Space" Featured This One From Perrin

C. T. Perrin of the Rex Theatre, Greeley, Colo., tied in on a stunt that added immensely to the gross receipts of "Romance of the Rio Grande."

Perrin found out that the local Chrysler Sales Co. was having an auction sale on Saturday (Dec. 21) and obtained exclusive permission to distribute free chances on two cars that were to be given away.

The free chances were given away to patrons entering theatre all week previous to the Saturday auction. This stunt was not only advertised in the newspaper but also on the screen for a week previous.

The backs of the "retained end" of the tickets carried the ads of the theatre attractions.

The stunt certainly had a tendency to stimulate business as was evidenced by the excellent box-office receipts.

Then, too, he got more space than he bargained for when the "Greeley Tribune" and the Sterling Theatre sponsored a color drawing contest for "Glorifying the American Girl."

In announcing the contest, the "Tribune" stated this new contest was one which calls on skill and good judgment of colors, and it invites everyone who can tell colors and who has a box of crayons or an old paint box to participate. That eliminates a few, but for the majority of people it's an easy way to make a bid for $5 in cash within the five days.

Contestants were asked to color the picture shown in the newspaper with crayons or water colors or anything else that will make a color—as nearly as possible as you expect to see it in the picture which will be shown at the Sterling Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

To the ones presenting the best colored picture, the "Tribune" awarded the following prizes: 1st prize—$5 in cash; 2nd prize—theatre party of six persons to the Sterling; 3rd prize—theatre party of four persons; 4th prize—two passes to the Sterling; 5th prize—two passes.

The newspaper not only gave the coloring contest an unprecedented amount of valuable space at no cost to the theatre but Perrin was also especially pleased with the unusually large number of answers submitted.

Metcalf's News Tie-Up Built Up Interest in B. O.

Talk about your crashing double trucks in the newspapers in connection with a merchant's and newspaper tieup on big attractions, leads us to suspect that our friend Metcalfe at the Lincoln Theatre in Massillon, Ohio, is deserving of a vote of thanks for passing along the suggestion for a special double truck about the theatre itself.

We hope that the reduction of this double truck to a small 2½-inch cut will not do it an injustice, but most of the cooperative ads stand out so well that it is hardly necessary to go into a more detailed explanation.

Lots of luck, Albert, and keep up this great work, because it is going to get you somewhere in this great big show business of ours.

HAVE YOU A CLUB PIN?

Chalk Up Another One For Mgr. Walter B. Rose

Walter B. Rose of the Strand Theatre, Brockton, Mass., won another mythical medal when he finally won over an anti-cooperative merchant in a tie-up that not only proved beneficial to both parties concerned but especially to the theatre during the four weeks in December.

The merchant in this instance is the proprietor of the Brockton Public Market. The "Market" puts on a Food Show and serves tea and coffee to patrons at the matinees. This tie-up was used during the four weeks in December.

In addition to the luncheon service, the "Market" permitted window cards of all kinds to be placed in one of its best windows.

Both the "Market" and the theatre were advertising this tie-up in their regular newspaper ads as well as through other mediums.

This tie-up was very unusual as the Market owner was very prejudiced against theatres and heretofore he would not even allow a window card of any description to go into his window; in fact, he would not be connected with a theatre in any way whatsoever.

Rose states that it took a lot of sales talk to swing the stunt, but having captured the "enemy" makes one feel as happy as a lark.

Now that the Market owner has finally succumbed to theatre tie-ups, it will be an easy matter to promote another stunt whenever it is deemed necessary.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Assistant Managers as Members!

(Reprinted by request)

In order that we may dispel a wrong impression, we want all assistant theatre managers to know they are eligible for membership in the Round Table Club, PROVIDING their manager certifies as to the position they hold.

Many assistant managers have important duties in their respective theatres, such as publicity and exploitation directors, treasurers, etc. We therefore feel that their activities are many times just as important to the Club pages as the managers.

The reason we make this one provision is that it is difficult for us to know whether an applicant who calls himself an assistant manager is really just that. We can check up on the managers, but the managers must help us check up on the assistants and we would rather they expressed their willingness before their assistants joined the Club.

J. B. Hardy's Wide Experience a Real Asset

It has taken us a little longer than usual to show you a picture of J. B. Hardy, but it is only because that modest gentleman needed a whole lot of persuasion before he would comply with our oft repeated request to send us one.

At any rate, we have succeeded, and we take particular delight in introducing the many members and readers of the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages to energetic and livewire manager of Loew's Mall Theatre, in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Hardy has always been an enthusiastic booster for the ROUND TABLE CLUB and has followed our activities practically since the inception of the CLUB and has followed our pages with much interest and has also contributed to its success by reason of acquainting us of his various activities from time to time. Those of you other members and managers who have been following this department, already know about him from previous stories.

He has been in the show business for almost 18 years, having served as manager for at least ten years of that period. His association included connections with the Kunsky outfit in Detroit with Gardner and Kopler in Toledo, and various other theatres in and around the middle west.

We are certain that "J. B." is headed for great things in the show business, and it is only a question of time before we will be able to announce the fact that he has been promoted to bigger things in the show business. At any rate he carries with him at all times, our best wishes for his success that hard work in the business so well deserves.

Thank you for your photo, Mr. Hardy, and convey our kindest regards to our many friends and boosters out around Cleveland.

Tod Browning is Creating Interest Up in Boston

Latest word from Harry (Tod) Browning finds him now located as Managing Director of the big Publix De-Luxe Metropolitan Theatre in Boston, and hot on the heels of this announcement comes one of his usual livewire stunts. This time consisting of a tieup with the Postal Telegraph Company whereby this well-known outfit has opened a branch office right in the lobby of the Metropolitan Theatre.

In addition, Harry arranged for the Governor of Massachusetts to send a message through this branch office and all in all it gave him considerable publicity, including a corking good picture and a two-column story in the Boston Evening American issue of December 24th.

You can readily see from the picture how effective the stunt was for publicity purposes, as the photo shows the branch office, Governor and Mrs. Allen of Mass.

This may be a good lead for some of you other fellows to keep in mind in arranging your advance exploitation, that possibly there is some tieup that can be successfully engineered with your local telegraph office that may mean some more free newspaper space, as well as increased business through such a tieup. At any rate it is worth keeping in mind and having handy for future use.

Nice work, "Tod," but just in line with what we have always claimed you could do, so while it may be news to your bosses, it is not a bit surprising to us.

What's going to be your next one, and how soon can we look forward to getting it?

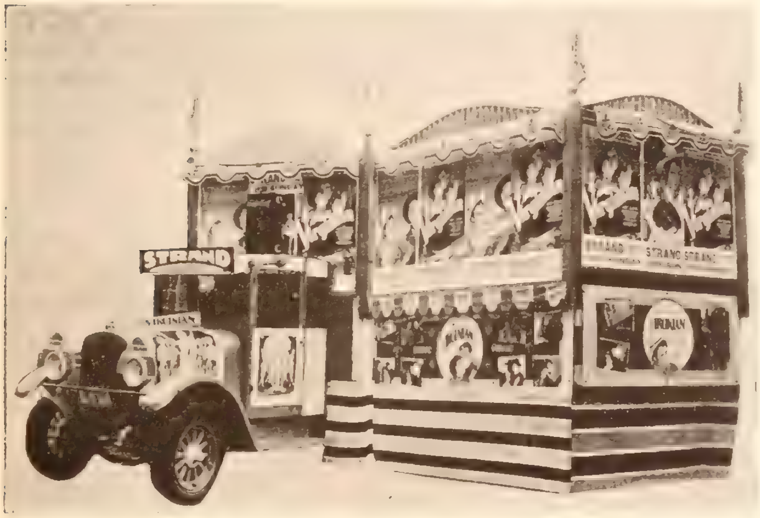
Johnny Scanlon is Hot on the Trail Of Biz. Up in Lynn

It didn't take Johnny Scanlon long to get moving, once he had both feet set on the ground up in Lynn, Mass., and the latest letter from him is ample evidence that he has started the theatre clicking at the box office for Warner Brothers in that peppy little theatrical town.

The cut with this story shows a most unusual street ballyhoo employed by Johnny in connection with the attraction "The Virginian" and contained several loud speakers run from batteries. This is one of the gags that generally gets the cash customers talking and keys up a lot of interest in the attraction being run at the theatre.



Another one of Scanlon's activities since taking over the Warner houses in Lynn was to engineer kiddie shows by the use of special kiddie tickets which admitted a certain number of them free every Saturday, and created the interest in the younger element for the Strand Theatre that Johnny hoped to accomplish when he worked out the details of the stunt.

While this is by no means new, it was sufficiently novel in his town to create the added business that he hoped to secure, and from latest reports, everything indicates that it is going over big. Unquestionably, before very long Saturday business at the Strand will be the better by several hundreds of dollars besides the tremendous number of kiddies who will be going about the street shouting the praises of the theatre and the shows.

Harping back to something that took place a little while back we want you to see a most attractive ad that Johnny worked out in connection with their New Year's Eve show and no doubt you will all agree that it is a fine piece of work. It was five columns wide and was at the top of the theatrical page, although the exact ad itself covered a space of only about five inches. This was particularly fine work, and we want to compliment Scanlon on the showmanship he is injecting into the town and the theatre.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS JR. LORETTA YOUNG

Lane Chandler and

Of course to better appreciate the ad itself, you would have to see it on the page, as the inch of white space on the top and the bottom made it even more outstanding than it appears in the reproduction on the cut with this story, but if you take any ad and place it on the theatrical pages with a little white above and below it, or even all around it, you will know immeditely how effective this type of advertising is and how well it pays to spend the extra money for the space involved.

Knowing how many of Johnny's brother members have been using his stunts to good advantage, we were equally delighted to learn that he himself made use of the BIGGEST PASS TO THE BIGGEST SHOW stunt which was printed only recently in the NEWS, and which he used to good advantage at the Strand in Lynn.

Glad to hear from you again, Johnny, keep up the fine work, but by all means keep us posted on what you are doing.

The Organist Again!

Our recent little squib about organs and organists brought a more rapid reaction than we ever anticipated, but it pleased us just the same.

It seems that we planted a fertile idea in the minds of lots of showmen who have expensive and worth-while instruments in their organ lofts but had discontinued using them when they went "all sound."

In our opinion there is no sense to such an arrangement at all.

The instrument cost your theatre plenty of "jack." Why not make that "jack" pay the house some dividends?

How?

Just as we said before. Get yourself an organist who knows his business. Start featuring him, but make sure that his specialty is of the kind that will have some audience appeal. By audience appeal we mean the right kind of slides and songs. If he knows his "onions" he'll soon have 'em waiting for his turn on the program and besides:

IT PRESENTS A MOST WELCOME RELIEF AFTER "MUSIC VIA THE HORNS" FOR THE ENTIRE SHOW.

We've been investigating this angle directly and indirectly, and our conclusions are based upon facts, not imagination. Just ask any manager whose theatre is featuring a good organist what he thinks of this feature of his program and you will soon learn what we have found out. It's just what the cash customers want.

Don't "horn" them to death with music via the sound equipment.

Another point worthy of your notice is that the present layout of pictures call for a majority of "all talking" subjects which eliminates too much of the music. I've seen dozens of shows where the entire screen entertainment was talking, and so little music, that even an old phonograph record would have been welcomed with open arms.

Whether the argument is in particular or in general matters very little. We won't back down from what we have said time and again to our many members and readers.

"IF YOU HAVE AN ORGAN IN YOUR THEATRE. . . GET AN ORGANIST AND USE IT."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

HURRAH FOR N. Y. !!!

Just to prove that exploitation has not died the death of a dog in New York, the Rialto Theatre, 42nd Street and Broadway (Publix) has started a prize door key campaign involving ten well known shops on Broadway, who are offering gifts for the advertising they get out of the stunt.

If you are at all interested in the "DOOR KEY" gag in connection with "The Locked Door," you are at liberty to drop us a line and we will tell you as much as we know about it, or else we will find out what there is to the whole story.

Smeltzer Tries a New Racket Out on The Pacific Coast

William G. Smeltzer, who was formerly identified with The Riviera Theatre of the Golden State Circuit out in San Francisco, Cal., has temporarily abandoned the theatre business and has taken up the task of running a country hotel and inn at Los Gatos, Cal.

Backed up with his past experiences in the theatre and catering to the public, he should certainly be in a fine position to continue to cater and entertain them in his new enterprise. However, do not despair because Bill tells us there is a possibility that he may slip back into the show game by acquiring a theatre not far from his new venture.

At any rate, regardless of what he eventually decides to do, he carries with him the wholehearted well wishes of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB for success in whatever undertaking he finds himself engaged in. Let's hear some more, Bill, and we want you to feel that once a CLUB member, you will always be a CLUB member.

Cliff-Work & Frank Percy Put Over a Nifty on 'Broadway'

Manager Cliff Work of the RKO Orpheum Theatre and Publicity Director Frank Percy had all San Francisco interested in the family quarrels of a couple who would fight about "BROADWAY" in public. The troupers visited the busiest restaurants and street cars, arguing loudly over what moving picture to see. The "husband" would end the discussion by remarking in a loud and stern voice, "We'll see BROADWAY, as I wouldn't miss that picture for anything." As 80% of the street cars in San Francisco run up Market Street past the Orpheum before branching off to various parts of the city, the couple would get off in front of the theatre, making the stunt one hundred per cent. more realistic.

The other high spots of Work's campaign included the petition stunt for changing Market Street to Broadway; a cooperative page ad with O'Connor and Moffat, one of the leading department stores of the city, tying up radio with "Broadway"; a want ad contest to find hidden lines about "Broadway"; and dance orchestra song tie-ups.

Weiss-Perlberg Inc. Offer Another Of Peppy Activities

Chalk off another for Weiss, Perlberg, Inc., in connection with their campaign on "It's a Great Life." We offer it below for whatever value or interest it holds for your particular theatre and you may be able to find something here or there in the layout that you can convert to your own use.

They tied in a group of merchants and a newspaper in a stunt that resulted in lots of publicity for "It's a Great Life" playing at the Publix-Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla.

The merchants co-operated on a page tie-up on the picture; all of the ads making some reference to the title of the picture, as well as showing a part of a picture from the screen production.

To assure the page greater reader interest, a contest was also offered to as many contestants wishing to take part. The details of the contest follows: "In each of the advertising spaces below you will find part of a picture, which when pasted together, describes one of the scenes from IT'S A GREAT LIFE with the Duncan Sisters now showing at the Florida Theatre.

Clip these parts from each advertisement and paste down neatly on a sheet of paper bearing your name and address. Then, tell in 50 words, written on one side of the paper only, which of the ads on this page impressed you most and why.

To each of the first 20 correct solutions of the cut-up picture accompanied by the best letters as described above the Florida Theatre will award 1 pair of tickets and the Cary Cab Co. will also award each winner 1 strip of complimentry cab tickets good in any Cary Cab any time. Mickler & Sanderlin will award each winner the cleaning of one suit or plain dress free. In case of a tie between contestants equal awards will be made."

Candy Tie-Up Was B. O. Booster for Smith in Dallas

F. F. Smith effected a unique tie-up with Martha Washington Candies that resulted in exceptionally fine publicity for "Show of Shows" playing at the Melba Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

The Martha Washington Candies two stores had all their three-pound boxes wrapped with a special paper on which appeared, "Martha Washington Candies present a special 'SHOW OF SHOWS' box honoring the all-talking musical extravaganza—THE SHOW OF SHOWS—77 Stars. . . . Chorus of 500—at the Melba Theatre, play dates."

These special candy boxes were on display on the counters for a week in advance and current with the playing of the picture. And on Sunday to Wednesday inclusive during run of picture, both stores had a window display featuring these three-pound boxes with a neatly-lettered sign in the centre of the display carrying similar copy as that appearing on the candy box wrappers.

Smith also used a popularity contest in connection with the 'Show of Shows.' The Postal Telegraph Co. put a Simplex machine in the lobby with a board on which appeared telegrams from all the stars in the picture. The idea of this stunt was for the patrons to vote for his or her popular screen idol and the star receiving the largest number of votes, 50 names were picked at random (from the patrons voting for the winning screen idol) and given one ticket each. This stunt also served an excellent purpose in advertising the picture.

All of which constitutes a doggone nice assortment of ideas to build up business in connection with an attraction that really has Box Office merit by virtue of its title alone.

Many of us are inclined to take things too matter of fact and assume that all we have to do is advertise the title of a big picture and the customers will break down the doors. F. F. Smith on the contrary took the proper attitude that like every other picture, additional business could be attracted to the theatre and went out after it in as big a way as the producers went about putting over the picture itself. Good stuff, and we want you to know that we appreciate the opportunity of broadcasting the glad tidings to the rest of the ROUND TABLE CLUB members and readers. Let's hear some more from you.

The Talking News Reel

Since we are entitled to our own humble opinion, I certainly want to express mine on the subject of Sound News Reels.

Like the rest of us, I have been seeing plenty of the sound news reels ever since they made their appearance. Until recently, practically every house has been running them, but a few nights ago it was my privilege to listen to Universal's Talking News Reel, and the audience's, as well as my own, reaction was such that, at the conclusion, there was a round of applause.

As far as your Chairman is concerned his vote goes 100% for Graham MacNamee and Universal's Talking News Reel. If you haven't heard it, "listen in" the first chance you get and see if you don't agree with us.

Parking Ordinance Handed Wood A Brand New Angle

G. L. Wood capitalized on a new parking ordinance to exploit Harold Lloyd in "Welcome Danger" playing at the Plaza Theatre, Paris, Tex.

1,000 cards bearing copy on both sides were effectively distributed throughout the town and especially placed on parked automobiles. One side of the card read, "You must obey the new parking and traffic Laws or you will Welcome Danger." The other side read, "See Harold Lloyd in his first all-talking picture 'WELCOME DANGER' at the Plaza Jan. 6-7-8."

Inasmuch as the new parking ordinance took effect on the opening day of "Welcome Danger" at the Plaza, it made the stunt all the more effective.

This is one we have often told you about and Wood really deserves a lot of credit for putting it over so effectively. You may recall that we gave you something quite similar to this only a short time ago and many of the boys had found it interesting and profitable enough to copy.

Let's hear some more from you "G. L." and see if we can't influence you sufficiently to send us one of your own photographs shortly.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A GOOD USHER?

We are in receipt of a most interesting article entitled "What Constitutes a Good Usher" which was accidentally not signed. This was received from the Famous Players Canadian office in Vancouver, B. C. and the dictating initials were I. W. A., which we have assumed to mean Ivan W. Ackery. If, by any chance, we are crediting the wrong party, we would gladly rectify the error upon proper notification.

However, do not let this detract from the value of this fine little article which contains many points of real importance to managers who are compelled to worry about the various help they are engaging and the duties that the help must execute in the regular routine of operating the theatre.

"CHICK."

First: The Manager of a Theatre in engaging an Usher will seek the personality of the applicant, her attitude in applying for the position will give a good idea of her ability. She will present smartness with neatness in appearance which will indicate intelligence.

Second: Having made the selection, the Manager will then explain her duties, impressing upon her that at all times she must assume a quiet, polite manner to all who enter the Theatre. "To ask how many seats required" and to lead them to the best seats available. If any particular seat is preferred, they should be given them with a look of pleasure that you have done your best. An Usher who studies her patrons will be looked for on other occasions. Should she have to disturb others sitting in the aisle seats, she should excuse herself with "Thank you" in a pleasant voice.

A flash light will be provided so that she can show the way carefully. In the case of elderly people, helping them by taking the arm lightly and assisting them carefully is much appreciated and adds to the courtesy of the Usher.

She must at all times show the same attention to all patrons whether they are hard to please or not. Great care should be taken in choosing the uniform and great insistence should be used in demanding that at all times she must appear neat with smartness.

She must always be on the alert to do what she can to help any patron in directing to rest rooms or cloak rooms—this is service—and should be strictly observed.

Should any questions be asked in connection with "Theatre" the Usher should be well posted so as to give a positive answer to all enquiries concerning starting and ending of "Feature Pictures." She should not voice her like or dislike to any patron.

In case of argument or trouble she should immediately call the Head Usher, or Manager to settle the dispute but patrons should always be given the benefit.

She should be instructed in the assurance that the position she holds is an important part in the Theatre and that Service is the watchword in building up business.

In other words, "What constitutes a good usher" can be summed up in "Give of your very best and it will come back to you."

THANK YOU.

("This can also apply to Boy Ushers.")

George A. Smith Offers His Foreign Angle Idea

From far off Johannesburg, South Africa, we find out something more about the activities of George A. Smith, Chief Projectionist in charge of the exploitation and advertising of that particular theatre on the African Theatres, Ltd.

As you will note from these three photographs, which really are just little snapshots, and that we are hoping will show up fairly well in the cut, the one on the left was designed for use with "MIDNIGHT LOVERS" as a window display of an aeroplane over a house. He used mighty beautiful lighting effects to get the most out of this, and from the snapshot we would venture the opinion that what he started out to do he more than succeeded in. On "CRAZY MAZIE," a title which at this moment is unknown to us, he fixed up a very attractive front for his theatre and as the picture will show, he more than did justice to the attraction itself.

In the third on the right, we will show you George E. Smith, himself, and although it is but a rough snapshot, it will have to answer the purpose until something better arrives.

In giving this little brief story to you about George, we want you to know that he has been in the show business upwards of twenty years and understands practically every phase of it. In his position as projectionist, he is likewise assistant manager and has accomplished some mighty fine things in connection with his job, as well as with the attractions that are running at the Palladium Theatre down there in Johannesburg.

Having just installed talking equipment of the latest type, they are now about to embark on a more elaborate plan of presentation, which means that we should hear mighty interesting and valuable things from this theatre and Mr. Smith himself.

Thank you for your very kind letter, Mr. Smith, and we are going to comply by sending you what you have requested, and we will look forward to hearing from you again real soon. In the meantime, be sure to convey our kindest regards to all the boys in South Africa who are members and boosters of the CLUB, and to Mr. J. H. Stodel, himself.

Two Corking Stunts Featured Shay's Fine Exploit

H. Paul Shay used two excellent stunts to help advertise the 18th Birthday Anniversary of the Colonial Theatre, Haverhill, Mass., that had the people not only interested in the stunts but helped to sell the Anniversary programs as well. The pictures—playing a split week—were, "Halfway to Heaven" and "Evidence."

Shay secured the entire window of the local Western Union office and fitted it up himself in appropriate anniversary style with a huge candle in the centre. The candle was four feet high and 1½ inches in diameter.

A card alongside the candle asked people to estimate the length of time it would take the candle to burn. For those estimating the nearest correct time, prizes in the form of passes would be given.

The Western Union window was used four days in advance and throughout entire Anniversary Week, and always attracted the attention of passers-by.

Shay figuring Anniversary Week only came around once a year he could well afford to spend a little extra money so he put a lobby entertainment that proved a real attention-getter. For the first half of the week he employed a man who sang and played a guitar. And during the last half week he changed the program and substituted two banjo players.

The lobby entertainment lasted 1½ hours in the afternoon and the same length of time in the evening.

In addition to the above, Shay had his lobby and theatre front decorated in appropriate garb which plainly emphasized there was something unusual occurring at the Publix-Colonial.

THANK YOU PARAMOUNT!!!

Our hats are off to Russell Holman and the Paramount Company.

Why?

You may well ask!

But maybe you already know?

It's because of their new type of advertising which made its appearance in last week's issue of the News and contained such marvelous sales copy for the house manager and theatre publicity men to sell "The Street Of Chance" and "Road House Nights."

If only all the film companies in the business would get wise and give us this kind of stuff! What a pleasure it would be to open up our copy of the News each week and read how we can sell the picture.

After all: that's what we are in business for.

Right?

You're durn tootin'.

Shulman and Forster Continue to Pep Up Syracuse

Invariably, when we get a letter from the Fox Eckel Theatre in Syracuse, N. Y., we find that Morris Shulman, the manager and Paul Forster, the featured organist and assistant manager are always engineering something new in the line of business getting tactics.

In this latest of their communications, you will note how attractively they have fixed up the front of the theatre on "Sunnyside Up," including a special sign which has been erected alongside the regular upright sign, with the title of the picture illuminated in regular electric letters.

In addition, you will notice the fine type of street ballyhoo which they employed to help exploit this attraction, and undoubtedly it attracted all of the attention that they hoped it would when it was worked out before they went through with the idea itself.

On the attraction "Hot for Paris" we don't know just how they managed it, but you will notice above the marquee an impression of steam or smoke arising from under the Fox sign, which lends itself to the title of the picture, and unquestionably attracted a lot of attention. We would certainly appreciate hearing from Mr. Shulman and Mr. Forster as to how they worked out this detail of their marquee ballyhoo for this stunt, as we are certain that many of our other members and readers would appreciate the tip so that they in turn could work it with the same profitable results that the Eckel Theatre succeeded in engineering on this attraction.

We are certainly grateful to both of these enthusiastic CLUB members for their continued activities, and want them to know that every one of their letters are received with a great deal of interest at CLUB headquarters. Our best regards to both of you gentlemen, and remember us to Mr. Hart and Mr. Olsen the next time they are in your town.

Radio Tie-Up Afforded Rogan Many Opportunities

Manager Roy Rogan, of the Rialto Theatre, at Joliet, Ill., arranged a tie-up with the local dealers for Majestic radio which netted him even more publicity than that which is usually attached to a radio drawing.

Rogan persuaded the radio store to use the titles and play dates of all his December attractions in their large pre-Christmas newspaper advertising campaign. In return, he granted them the privilege of displaying several radio sets on the mezzanine lounge of the theatre.

Usage of the Majestic dealer's large ballyhoo truck, equipped with an amplifying device and microphone, was also included in the agreement. The truck toured the city and in addition to telling the people of Joliet about the big forthcoming radio drawing, the operator also told of current and coming December attractions at the Rialto Theatre.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Truck Ballyhoo Created Biz. for McKenna in Fla.

Manager McKenna effected a neat tie-up with the Mack truck agency and a brick manufacturer to ballyhoo George Bancroft in "The Mighty," playing at the Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla.

The five-ton Mack truck was loaded with a number of bricks and then proceeded to drive around the town. Of course, signs and banners on the truck read, "The Mighty Mack carries a limitless load" as well as copy about the picture, star and play dates together with an announcement that passes would be given to see the picture to the persons nearest estimating the number of bricks in the truck.

Although some difficulty was experienced with the police department in granting permission for the truck to be on Main St., as an ordinance prevents large trucks to use this street, let alone parking, it was, however, overcome and the stunt created an unusual amount of attention.

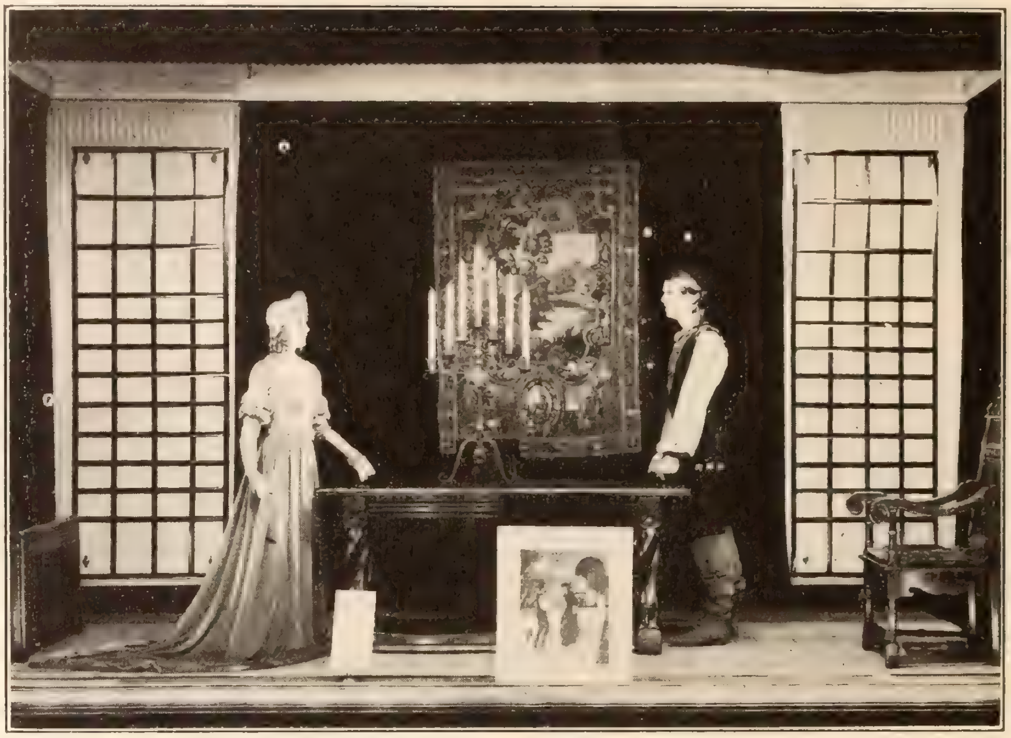
McKenna says he is not exaggerating when he informs us that there were as many as fifty to seventy-five people around the truck at all times.

When the truck was not doing duty on the streets of the city, it was parked in front of the theare where it also was the center of attention.

The stunt proved of invaluable assistance in publicizing the picture, as it played to capacity business.

Which is just typical of our friend John McKenna and naturally the type of stuff that we have learned to expect from this aggressive manager. Let's hear some more, Mac, and pass our best regards on to Wally Allen and the rest of the many CLUB boosters down in Florida.

—A DISPLAY WITH A "PUNCH"—



We wouldn't hesitate one minute to caption this "A Work of Art," and that is what the majority of our members and readers will say when they study this gorgeous window-display arranged by M. J. Cohen, Director of Publicity for the Vitaphone Theatre in Oakland, Cal.

This marvelous window-setting was fixed up in one of the leading department stores on the main thoroughfare to help advertising Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks in the "Taming of the Shrew," and I doubt whether any one of our many followers will question our statement that it is one of the most effective and attractive ever reproduced.

The cutout figures have been carefully draped with clothing, and the effect is so very realistic that we thought for a moment that they were posed for by real figures.

We are very grateful to Mr. Cohen for this fine piece of work, and we would gladly give all the space necessary to further set forth the fine publicity and exploitation activities for which he is responsible.

Here's a Team We Wish Plenty of Real Good Luck

Having nothing but an invitation to go by, we can only say that Harold Blumenthal and Richard Ettelson very kindly sent me an invitation to the official opening of their Rex Theatre in East Rutherford, N. J.

We trust that before many weeks go by we will find out a whole lot more about this partnership and the theatre they are operating, but in the meantime we want to wish Harold all the luck he deserves, because he is a hard working showman and knows the business from A to Z.

How about it, Harold; will you be as efficient in sending us your exploitation and advertising campaigns as you were in the past? We have every reason to believe that you will be, and we know that the ROUND TABLE CLUB columns will be an aid to you in the operation of your beautiful new house.

"Spooks" Spelt Patronage For Remley on This One

M. E. Remley of the Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., reports that much of the success of his recent engagement of "Three Live Ghosts" was due to a street ballyhoo he used for the attraction.

In describing the stunt, Remley reports that he had three men dressed as "live ghosts." They wore a robe of white, with headgear and capes also in white. To enhance the effect the house artist used his air brush on the outfits to give them definition and character in a faint way. Each of the trio wore a placard on his back, each of which comprised a part of the title of the picture and the theatre names and play date. They traveled around in trio formation and, according to Remley, attracted a great deal of attention and caused considerable comment.

The "ghosts" haunted the business section of the town and also visited the schools, which action resulted in the attraction playing to large and varied audiences during the three-day run.

Here's another he did, on an economical and highly effective bit of exploitation for his engagement of "WELCOME DANGER" in arranging a sidewalk ballyhoo display of buttons, supposedly from the clothes of those inside who were laughing so hard at the picture that the buttons flew off their clothes.

During the run of the picture, Remley placed a six-quart glass jar, partially filled with a miscellaneous assortment of buttons out in front of his theatre. Every few minutes, while crowds were passing by and waiting in front of the theatre, the theatre porter would add a few more to the collection. Ushers had "planted" stray buttons in the auditorium and during the performance these would be picked up in full view of those seated nearby.

The result was that Majestic patrons were searching their clothes for missing buttons, and much word-of-mouth comment was occasioned by the ever growing collection out in front. Remley adds that never in his career as a manager has he used a stunt so inexpensive and yet so effective, for as he puts it, the stunt "brought more comment, more laughs, more publicity and curiosity on the part of those who saw it" than any other stunt.

Newspaper Co-operation An Art with Frank Boucher

Continuing his already well known march of progress in the line of showmanship and publicity activity, Frank Boucher, City Manager for the Stanley Crandall Theatres in Hagerstown, Md., succeeded in planting the serialization of "General Crack" in the Daily Mail, one of the leading papers in Hagerstown.

In addition the tear sheet we have before us clearly shows that he succeeded in grabbing many other valuable readers for the attractions playing in his different theatres, and in this respect he deserves more than a pat on the back from his friends in the ROUND TABLE CLUB.

Glad to hear from you again, Frank; we were beginning to get worried about you, but we know that you won't forget the ROUND TABLE CLUB and that we won't forget you. Let's hear some more from you, and the next time you are around New York run in and say hello, so that we will have the opportunity of a few minutes' chat between us.

Webster Has Many Fine Suggestions to Pass Along

J. H. Webster, manager of the Elizabeth Theatre in Elizabeth City, N. C., used a mighty nice angle, when all of the patrons who entered the theatre Christmas night received a card attractively gotton out containing the greetings of the theatre's staff.

Once more we depart from our determination to stop showing full and half-page cooperative tie-ups, because there have been so many going on, but in this case, considering the size of the city and the conditions under which Mr. Webster was compelled to work, we must certainly hand it to him for the mighty fine half page that he engineered on "THE COCK EYED WORLD."

Another instance that we would like to call our members' and readers' attention to is the "Hang Me Up" monthly calendar of the attractions that are playing at the Carolina Theatre, and which is the last word in simplicity. No doubt, this piece of printing matter cost them very few pennies to turn out, but is nevertheless effective to those loyal patrons of the theatre who always like to know what is playing without going to the trouble of hunting for loose programs or phoning the theatre. If you want to try something along these lines, we suggest that you try his idea, which consists of a series of boxes enclosing the various attractions, how long they are going to run and exactly when they will be shown.

"HELLO, EDDIE"

Eddie Hitchcock, who when first mentioned on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages was actively engaged in exploitation and publicity work in Seattle, Wash., and then more recently in connection with a wonderful stunt at the Fox Palace Theatre in Springfield, Mass., has just been appointed Director of Publicity for the Paramount Theatre in New York City which means that there is going to be a whole lot of new stuff engineered at that theatre in the near future.

Hitchcock has been actively engaged in theatre press agent work for over 8 years and has supervised opening campaigns of practically all of the recently built theatres on the Pacific Coast. He has had plenty of newspaper experience, having been a former newspaper man himself, and was previously engaged by Publix at the Paramount Theatre in Los Angeles, the Portland Theatre in Portland, Ore., and the Seattle Theatre in Seattle, Wash.

More recently he has been in charge of Horace Heidt's Californian Orchestra, which he has had on tour with Eddie Peabody, and which only recently finished a six weeks' engagement at the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre.

Although he was scheduled to sail for Europe in connection with his work as press agent for Horace Heidt's Californians, his new job, we hope will keep him here in the United States and in New York where we can get the opportunity of making his personal acquaintance.

The MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB takes this opportunity of congratulating Eddie, and we hope that he finds his new task a pleasant one and that he will remain in our midst for a long and successful period. And don't forget your promise, Eddie, to come in and make our acquaintance, and by all means have luncheon the first opportunity you have to take a few minutes for yourself.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Monty MacLevy is Earning a Rep for Himself

If, when passing comment upon any of our members, we make mention of the fact that they are going to succeed in the show business, and we then find they are really making marked progress by being appointed to large and important theatres, we can certainly be excused if we take the liberty of shouting "WE TOLD YOU SO."

Such is the case with Monty MacLevy, whose acquaintance we first met while he managed a small theatre in a little town of L. I. Today he is one of the most useful and progressive managers on the Fox Metropolitan Chain, now in charge of the large Cross Bay Theatre in Ozone Park, L. I.

As this photograph will clearly show, he arranged a most impressive ballyhoo and exploitation layout for the picture "Salute" by tying in with the Junior Naval Militia in his section of the city and the Junior Militia kept a squad of boys on duty all the time the theatre was opened conducting a most energetic campaign for recruits.

This naturally not only built up interest in the youngsters' organization, and the fine work they were doing, but also in the picture and the theatre itself.

Among Monty's other activities in his march to keep the Cross Bay Theatre before the public at all times, has been a tie-up with the local Chamber of Commerce, whereby this group distributed some $1,000 in prizes at his theatre. You can readily understand the tremendous box office receipts that this stunt attracted to the Cross Bay Theatre by reason of the number of people who were anxious to cut in on the $1,000 which was being distributed.

In addition he also arranged with a merchants association for a Christmas Business campaign, whereby $500 was awarded at the Theatre by this same merchants association.

All of these things mean interest and good will for the theatre and increased receipts for the box office, and perhaps that is the answer to Monty's popularity in his own H. O. and the reason why there are many other Circuits around the city who would gladly avail themselves of Monty MacLevy's services if the opportunity presented itself for them to do so.

TALKIES TO STAY?

A manager from Australia writes to ask whether we would comment or pass an opinion on whether the talkies are in to stay.

The only answer we can give him at this time is to try and find some good silent pictures that are now being produced, except silent versions of big talkies.

Yes, they are here to stay and then some.

Chas. Maxfield Put Over A Peach of a Broadcast

Charles Maxfield, supervising manager of the Colonial and Lenox Theatres in Hartford, Conn., has again copped first honors in theatre activities out his way by arranging a broadcasting program over their local radio station WTIC.

We were fortunate enough to tune in on this station on one of their Tuesday broadcasts and we are here to assure you that it was a mighty fine program that we heard.

Good work, Max, keep it up and by all means let us know what you are doing as you go along selling the houses up your way.

W. P. Neel, Jr. says:

"I have been watching the ROUND TABLE CLUB with a great deal of interest; I sincerely believe it is the finest thing possible for those interested in the theatre of today. It is stuff like yours that puts the old 'pep and go-get'em' into all of us."

Assistant Manager and Publicity Director,

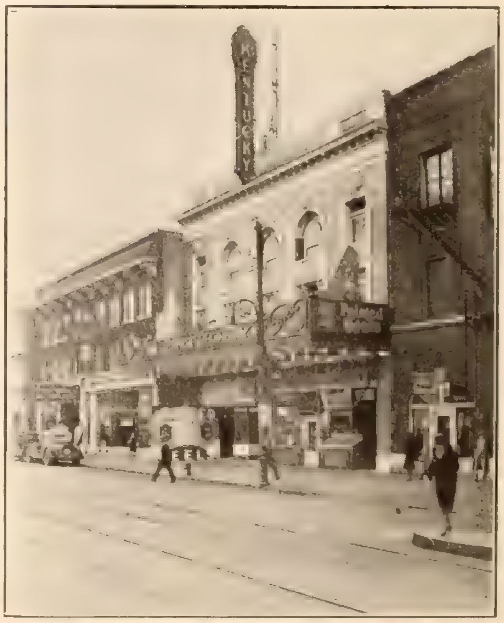
'Plane Display Built Up Real Interest for Grove

H. D. Grove again used an excellent lobby stunt that attracted huge crowds in connecting with the advertising of "Flight," playing at the Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Ill

A girl dressed in an aviation costume demonstrated the use of a wind tunnel and a model plan in the lobby for four days in advance. This equipment is used to train pilots on the ground and proved an excellent means of getting a good opening on the picture—"Flight."

Cards were also distributed on which appeared copy, "Jack Holt says: Obey the Rock Island Traffic rules. It will make driving safer on the slippery streets. See and Hear FLIGHT—the first all-talking picture of the Air."



Lobby and marquee display arranged by Earle Hall Payne for "Pointed Heels" when the Paramount comedy was shown at the Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky. On the ends of the marquee huge beaver board slippers were erected. These slippers were covered with colored flitter and made a great flash both in the day time and at night. The centerpiece combined a cut-out of a dancer with an electric sign.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Never Lay Down on Job" Is Johnny McManus' Motto

It is all too bad that we don't hear from this man often as it is always good and interesting to follow the activity of a real old-time showman who knows the business from every angle. Before going very far into this story we want to thank Johnny McManus for his belated, but nevertheless welcome, Happy New Year Greeting which he sent to us just a little bit after the first of the year. Never mind the tardiness, Mr. McManus; we are grateful for the thought just the same and we hope that you find the time in your busy existence to keep in touch with us often during the coming year.

There were two mighty interesting photographs in Mr. McManus' letter, one dealing with the atmospheric front and costumes of the different employees of the theatre when they were running William Haines in "Navy Blues." This one is certainly worthy of more than passing attention and we suggest that if you haven't used this angle before you give it a little thought before all of your competitors beat you to it.

The second photograph dealt with the presentation of a monkey from the St. Louis Zoo and was one of the interesting publicity angles that McManus used in order to publicize the theatre and its activity in St. Louis. One of our chief reasons for publishing the photograph was not because the monkey took so nice a picture, but because it gave us the opportunity of showing you what Johnny McManus looks like. And for your information he is the third gentleman from the left standing back of the Mayor in the photograph.

Thanks for these contributions, Johnny, as well as for the many interesting things which you have described in your letter. We are certain that everything is clicking nicely for you and that the future will hold many interesting promotions for you in the show business. Let's hear some more from you before we get around to write the rest of the information contained in your letter so that we can really credit you with a fine piece of story.

"SPECIALTY NITES"

The subject of gift or specialty night has always been a point of interesting argument between managers whenever they meet. The latest one to express himself on the subject is "Chuck" Copperman, manager of the Ohio Theatre in Warren Ohio for the Robbins Enterprises, and his views are certainly worthy of more than passing attention.

"Chuck" believes the use of two for one tickets, double features, novelties that have some sort of a cash value, groceries, and hardware store material being given out is all wet and ought to be discontinued by the better theatres.

We don't know, because we have not got the necessary figures to state with any degree of definiteness, whether such is the case or not. He feels that the number of managers who are using this type of business stimulants are in the minority, and in this we are rather inclined to agree he is probably right.

Without exactly quoting from his letter, we can express his opinion to you by saying that he feels there is no excuse for the boys relying on such tactics for business getting, since there are so many exploitation angles that will bring the desired effects in a more theatrical and showmanlike way.

We heartily agree with his one expression whereby we all resort to good, clean exploitation to get the customers in, and we hope that many of our members will give his feelings a whole lot of consideration, because it materially affects the operation of their theatres not only at the present time, but also in the future.

Thank you Mr. Copperman and be assured that we appreciate your frank expression of opinion on any subject dealing with the show business which you are so capable of putting into words.

Advertising and Publicity Are Easy for Archibald

"Publicity charged with Dynamite" is what we would call this tear page which we received from R. E. Archibald, manager of the Fox Orpheum Theatre in Pocatello, Idaho.

You will note that, in addition to a most attractive ad for the Orpheum Theatre, there is a head line about the attraction and many other interesting readers and cuts all dealing with the attraction itself.

If every one of us was successful in gleaning this type of publicity through our local papers, we would certainly find a marvelous reaction at the box office, and in this respect we are certain that Mr. Archibald is more than satisfied and unquestionably his superiors feel the same.

We are very grateful to R. E. for remembering us in this respect and we feel that his future activities will be of tremendous interest on the CLUB pages.

In recounting this bit of information to you we would want you to know that in this same town there is an opposition theatre spending far more in advertising than the Fox Theatre, and while their ad has appeared in another portion of the paper, they received very little or no publicity whatsoever, which is of great credit to Archibald for his keen sense of showmanship in grabbing off everything available that would benefit his theatre.

HOUSE PROGRAMS

Few real showmen will argue the value of a good house program in any kind of a theatre in these days when every effort is being made to create and hold patron interest in the house.

In practically every successful theatre we ever visited, house organs played a most important part in their institutional advertising material. Through an efficient house program the manager is not only able to broadcast the current and coming attractions, but he can also institute a series of "chats" pertaining to the theatre and the many services they are constantly trying to render to the patron.

In addition, teaser campaigns can be started on important or unusual attractions that are bound to build up interest and whet the appetite for the production when it is finally announced with the play dates.

Many wide-awake managers have also made use of their theatre house organs to build up the mailing list by selecting names at random each week from the list and inviting them to attend a performance as guest of the theatre.

There are so many desirable angles that we would soon cover several pages in an attempt to set them forth in detail, but to those of you who have never given this showmanship slant the proper trial, then get after it now and see if you don't become as enthusiastic a booster of the house program as we have always been.

"Chick"

Kiddie Angle Important Is A. J. Vineyard's Dope

After having shown sound pictures for over a year, A. J. Vineyard, manager of Fays Neighborhood Theatre in Dallas, Texas, found that interest was lagging in this newer type of entertainment, so he undertook to discontinue sound pictures for a period of three weeks, during which time he presented only silent pictures, with the result that when he went back to sound pictures business increased so noticeably that he wanted the other members and managers know about it.

Another angle that Mr. Vineyard has found mighty profitable is one that the ROUND TABLE CLUB has been continually harping on for the past year and a half and that is the subject of Kiddie trade. Here is an angle that can produce between $200 and $500 a week in extra found money for any theatre at little or no extra expense whatsoever, and yet it is continually being neglected by showmen who really should be hauled over the coals for their negligence in treating this matter too lightly.

We won't attempt to go into too many of Mr. Vineyard's activities, because his letter was rather brief, but we do want you to know that merchants' tie-ups and plenty of publicity on pictures that are worth while consists of his chief diet. And those of us who know the value of advertising and good showmanship will agree that he has the right dope.

Thank you for your well wishes, Mr. Vineyard, and the same to you, and here's hoping that we hear from you at regular and frequent intervals throughout the New Year.

Here's the Way McIlheran Boosted the B. O. in Texas

Playing up to the kids, when he has a new serial to start, is one of the reasons for the marked success A. McIlheran, manager of the Gem Theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas, always enjoys with his serials.

After just completing one series on Tarzan, McIlheran started another one, and this time invited all the children from the Day Nursery to be his guests at the Gem. He had them march in a body to the theatre, carrying a large banner which read: "We are on our way to the Gem Theatre to see Tarzan the Tiger." This parade was through the downtown section, and needless to say he had all the kids in the town interested.

The newspaper gave the party a nice writeup and carried a picture of the happy kids.

With the Club pages continuously shouting the value of Kiddie Business, this one arrives at one of the real opportune moments, and if other managers throughout the country would try to follow the example of such showmen like McIlheran, and others, they would soon find that the b. o. is building up most satisfactorily in this direction.

Wodetsky Was Another to Entertain Poor Youngsters

With all of the attending excitement surrounding the various Christmas and good-will shows which were being run by our many members and readers, we would hate to lose sight of the fine show engineered by J. T. Wodetsky at the Regent Theatre in Detroit when he played host to over 2,000 kiddies at a special performance in that theatre.

Almost 1,000 of the youngsters were from the Salvation Army and the balance made up of the various other welfare organizations, but all tied in together it meant creating a lot of marvelous goodwill for both Mr. Wodetsky and the theatre he is running.

FRED PERRY says:

"I consider membership in the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB one of the most valuable of the various fraternal connections whose privileges I enjoy."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Billy" Stillman Blossoms Forth As a Real Manager

Why should WE develop a swell head and shout, "WE TOLD YOU SO?"

But the ROUND TABLE CLUB is right proud because we hit the nail on the head only a few weeks ago when we told you about "Billy" Stillman, an enterprising young showman, who was recently assistant to Charles Brennan at the Rialto Theatre over in Jersey for Stanley-Warner-Fabian outfit.

Now we find "Billy" a real honest-to-God House Manager on his own hook, and we are going to sit back and watch his future activities in order that we can keep our other members and readers posted by publishing them on these pages.

We have Stillman's promise for a little story about his past that should make interesting reading, but we want to take this means of reminding him that we must have his own photograph at the same time we get the story.

Don't forget, Billy, that we're keeping our eyes on you and going to see what you can accomplish at the Central Theatre over at Newark, N. J. Regards to the rest of the gang and lets get together and say hello at the first opportunity that presents itself.

Merchant Tie-Ups Were Sure Effective for Brodie

Manager Brodie put over a co-operative page with the help of ten merchants that resulted in lots of publicity for "Glorifying the American Girl," playing at the Publix-Paramount Theatre, Haverhill, Mass.

Each merchant's ad contained a line about the picture such as, "It Glorifies every Haverhill girl," "Gorgeous Jewels that will Glorify any American girl," "Good milk glorifies the beauty of American Girls," etc.

Brodie estimates that he got 32 inches of free space in addition to the top of the page which was devoted to title of picture, name of stars, theatre and play date.

The theatre's regular ad occupied the centre of the co-operative page and not only carried photos of the principal characters but also forceful sales copy, name of theatre, stars and play dates.

The co-operative page appeared on Sunday just prior to Monday's opening and had a decided effect in popularizing the picture.

So you are at it again, Brodie, apparently from this latest description of your activities? Well, it is fine stuff and we know that your H. O. is just as enthusiastic about it as we are. Let's hear some more from you, and don't keep silent too long, or we will be compelled to shoot you night letters to remind you that you are accountable to the CLUB for your many interesting and profitable activities.

—Another Modern Movie Fable—

Once upon a time, as all fables, true or untrue, must start, there was a Young Lad who managed a combination house in the Sticks. It was the Only theatre in town. The only Opposition was the Corner Grocery and a Drug Store, not to Mention the circus which came once a year. And was not Really opposition, because the theatre always Closed down on circus day anyway. That was this manager's idea of keeping the red off the books. There being no opposition, the theatre Prospered and the Manager became a small town Big Shot. Especially in his Own estimation.

Then came rumors of Another theatre being built in town. The manager, who was doing Very well, what with getting his groceries free and so forth. passes not costing him anything, saw the Scribbling on the Fence and decided to accept an offer in another town, further east.

He was a Lucky Guy and got a good house. Even He couldn't run it down until two or three years later and then he again took Another job.

The New Manager had a Tough Time rebuilding what the Wise Guy had pulled down, and everybody said the other guy was Not a good manager because the business did not hop up in a Week. In the Meantime, the Smart Aleck connected with a Big Chain and saw New Opportunities. He specialized in "Kick Backs," making all tradesmen who wanted to do business with the theatre "See" him first, and waxed fairly wealthy. Until one of the Heads of the Chain got Wise. He changed his job again. But Not his methods.

He realized that Presentations were going to be The thing, so he signed a lot of budding actors for "peanuts" to act as masters of ceremony and charged the house plenty. It worked great. For a While. Then Another executive smelled a mice. He changed jobs again. His Big Front got him a job as General Manager of a Small but Flourishing chain. He instituted weekly Pep Meetings among the managers. But he wouldn't listen to their ideas. That is, not in Meeting. He got them in private and then offered their ideas as his Own Original Thoughts. He was Very popular with the house managers. He changed All the Supply Dealers, Sign Painters and Printers for the circuit. Of course, they Charged more than the old dealers, and their work was Not quite as Good, but they "Kicked Back" to the new G. M. That was all He wanted.

He fired all the old cashiers who had five or more years service in and did the same to all the doormen. And then he let out all the managers who Really had the good of the firm at heart and put in a lot of His friends who hadn't been able to hold jobs elsewhere. They were so Punk that even He couldn't hold most of them. He increased operating expenses and made a Big Flash in his eight cylinder roadster and his robin's egg blue shirts, with ties to match, and the bosses thought he was the Last Word. He installed Intricate Systems that nobody could understand, not even He. The bosses, being Just bosses, thought that was fine. They couldn't tell, exactly, whether the houses were making money or not, but the G. M. looked prosperous.

He was Always busy. If you wanted him in One town, he was sure to be busy in Another. He was Too busy to keep appointments. But One day One of the bosses drove to His house to get something or other and found the Big Shot in Bed at noon! That made him Suspicious. A week later he checked up on the B. S. and Again found him in the hay! Too much was Plenty, even for the gullible boss. He looked up the B. S.'s record!

When the B. S.'s contract expires (very soon) an ad, reading as follows, may be seen in these pages:

AT LIBERTY: Experienced Manager, District Manager and General Manager. What there is to know, I know. No references, but I can get money out of any theatre. Salary no object, but must have complete control.

And, as P. T. Barnum or Will Shakespeare said, "there's always New suckers willing to take up the story where the last one left off."

MORAL: MORE POWER TO HIM.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Read This One From Roy Slentz—Than Try It

Roy Slentz promoted a co-operative page for "Hollywood Revue," playing at the Colorado Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., that offered nine separate contests.

Each of the nine merchants' ads on the co-operative page showed a picture of one of the stars appearing in "Hollywood Revue." The idea of the contest was to identify the stars, bring your answers to the respective merchants and then hope you won a prize or two.

Rule No. 1 of the contest stated, "To the person submitting the correct name of the star appearing in the ad in the most original and novel manner, each merchant will award the prizes in the manner indicated in his ad."

Rule No. 2—Each contestant must submit the identification in person at the store.

Rule No. 3—Each ad appearing on this page contains a separate contest. There are nine ads appearing on this page; therefore, 9 separate contests and all containing three to four prizes.

Rule No. 4—Each contestant may compete for prizes offered by each merchant.

Rule No. 5—No contestant may submit more than one identification in one contest, but may submit nine identifications—one for each merchant.

The merchants not only contributed the prizes but were also the sole judges in choosing the respective winners—thus relieving the theatre manager of a tiresome and irksome job of going over the hundreds of answers that were submitted.

The merchants also had co-operative window displays and on the day following the close of contest posted the names of the winners in their windows as well as identifying the stars appearing in their respective ads.

If we keep on telling you so much about Roy Slentz, you are apt to think that he is a particular favorite of the Chairman of the ROUND TABLE CLUB, but as a true statement of facts, we take these activities as we receive them, and if Roy Slentz' stuff appears more frequently than anyone's else, it is chiefly because he is displaying his real CLUB spirit by seeing that we keep posted on what he is doing with the real co-operative thought taht it might help his brother managers and showmen. Thank you kindly, Roy, and keep up the great work you are doing out there in Pueblo.

Madeline Woods P. D. Put This One Over in Big Way

Publix-Great States theatres in Illinois has effectively used a novel "ticket herald" for "Hollywood Revue," devised by Madeline Woods, Publicity Director of the Great States Division.

The herald is in the make-up of a reserved seat ticket, slightly larger than standard size, and contains copy to the effect that the "Hollywood Revue" is a $6.60 Broadway stage show on the screen.

Used in the smaller cities, the herald had tremendous value as an advertising piece, for it gave picture theatre patrons an idea that the "Hollywood Revue" was a revue, and that it contained entertainment of the same kind that Broadway would pay $6.60 to see. Because it stressed this "economy" angle, the herald strongly impressed those amusement seekers who seldom paid over sixty cents to see a show.

To which we say: "Good for Madeline." Maybe she will continue to tell us all the other high-powered exploitation and advertising stuff she is constantly engineering for the division she heads. How about it, Miss Woods? And your own picture belongs right here with a proper introductory article about your past activities in the show business. Oak?

Get the "Low Down" on J. W. Reynolds of Oregon

It is always interesting for the Round Table Club pages to learn something about their many members and readers and this time we have been able to dig up a little dope about J. W. Reynolds, Manager of the Heilig Theatre in Eugene, Ore., for the World Attraction Corporation.

"J. W." spent some three years in the University of Oregon and while there took care of an orchestra. He also took a trip to the Orient in charge of this musical organization and when finished went to work in a theatre.

Although he has only been in the business between four and five years, he at least started in the right way, with a broom in his hand so that he knows the theatre from the ground floor up.

His acivities out in Eugene, Ore., have attracted a whole lot of attention among the showmen and the theatrical industry in general in the Northwest and only recently his New Year's Eve program was something that gave them plenty to talk about by reason of the tie-up with three of the largest stores in the town. He has had a little experience in staging revues and has personally directed two girl shows and one male revue which he staged successfully as part of his New Year program.

There are many other interesting features to this showman's activities that we are certain he will be delighted to pass on to his brother members and managers and we will look forward with a great deal of interest to hearing from him again and trust that at the same time his own photograph will be included so that a more intimate introduction can be accorded him in the next story we print about him. Thank you, Mr. Reynolds, and don't forget we are looking forward to hearing from you again very soon.

R. E. REMLEY manages the Publix Theatre in East St. Louis, Ill., and inasmuch as the Publix managers are all a pretty peppy crowd, we know that his future activities will make mighty interesting reading on the pages of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. We hope that Mr. Remley will accommodate with one of his own photographs, so that we can give him a more intimate introduction in the near future.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

RUSSELL W. VOLZ manages the Clifton Theatre in Cincinnati, O. You may recall that we have had something to say about him previous to this announcement, but, at any rate, all new members must pass through this page, so that the entire membership of the CLUB can see and read about who is entering the organization, and Russell is no exception. We would now like to get one of his photographs to give him a more intimate article on one of the other CLUB pages. How about it, Russell?

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

MAURICE SUGARMAN manages the St. George Theatre in Framingham, Mass., and adds another livewire showman from that part of the country to the rolls of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. We would appreciate knowing some of Mr. Sugarman's experiences in the show business up to the present time, together with one of his own photographs, so that we can let the world at large know a good deal more about this new ROUND TABLE CLUB member.

C. D. RICE manages the Ritz Theatre up in Tulsa, Okla., and adds another member to the roll of the ROUND TABLE CLUB from that section where we are anxious to enroll some live wire members. Let's hope that "C. D." makes an active member, and keeps us posted on everything going on out there.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

J. B. ANDERSON newly appointed Director of Publicity and Advertising for RKO's State and Rivoli Theatres in New Brunswick, N. J., is another from that well-known Circuit to join our ranks, and the rate they are going, it won't be long before we have them all in 100%. Since "J. B." has expressed his interest in the CLUB we expect big things from him in the line of contributions.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

E. M. BLINDERMAN manages the Apollo Theatre in the East Side section of New York City and we know of no portion of the United States where more interesting exploitation is being staged than down on the East Side. We wonder whether Blinderman will show his real CLUB spirit by keeping us posted on what is going on down his way, with possibly a photo or two to describe what he is telling us about. Thanks in advance, Blinderman.

DARNELL H. DARR manages the Palace Theatre, in Jackson, Tenn., and we shall look forward with extreme pleasure to hearing about this new member's activities down in that theatre and town. How about one of your own photos, so that we can make up a little more intimate introduction for you? Let's have it by return mail.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

ROBERT B. HAMILTON, manager of the Palace Theatre in Norwich, Conn., has already been written of on these pages, but since all members must enter by this portal, we take this opportunity of introducing him to our many members and readers. "R. B." is working our old stamping ground and it feels good to get the regards of all our old friends up there. We know what a live wire you are, Hamilton, so come on and live up to the "rep" you have established.

Wear Your Club Pin! ! !

ELWYN W. SEYMOUR manages the Regent Theatre in Battle Creek, Mich., and you may recall that an intimate friend of his doing newspaper work out there in Battle Creek gave Seymour a marvelous send-off in the form of an unsolicited letter about him. We were so impressed with the letter, that we published a portion of the story, and now that we have Seymour himself in the CLUB, we will look forward to hearing a whole lot about his fine activities out there in Battle Creek.

BENEFIT OF COLOR
PENALTY OF COST

COLOR is the order of the day. Sonochrome brings it without the penalty of added cost. Sixteen delicate tints and a warm neutral tone are available at the same price as ordinary black-and-white. This, plus the fact that it gives really faithful sound-on-film, accounts for the success of this series of Eastman tinted positive films.

"THE VAGABOND KING" IS THE HIGH SPOT OF THE YEAR!

YOU knew Paramount would make the greatest all-color production of all times! Here it is: "The Vagabond King." The world's finest romantic male singing star, Dennis King. Who leaped to undying fame in the stage presentations of "Rose Marie," "Vagabond King" and Ziegfeld's "The Three Musketeers." With Jeanette MacDonald, beautiful soprano star. And a great cast. In the greatest of all song romances. Flashing with action and adventure. Sparkling with song hits like the famous "Song of the Vagabonds," "Huguette Waltz," "Only a Rose," [redacted] and others. 100% in gorgeous Technicolor.

THE ROGUE SONG BEGINS A NEW ERA!

IT is fitting that the producer of this industry's landmarks, the "Big Parades", "Broadway Melodies", "Hollywood Revues", should once again pioneer into new fields. "The Rogue Song" will be imitated, as each of the new strides of M-G-M are imitated, but this glorious new phase of the Talkies begun by M-G-M will long await a production to equal its first brilliant operetta. The Opera world offers no other personality to compare with Lawrence Tibbett. The production resources of this industry can never again achieve the beauty, the thrill, the romantic surge of this mighty entertainment, destined to be heard 'round the world!

Vol. XLI NEW YORK CITY, FEBRUARY 8, 1930 No. 6

THE FIGURES TELL THEIR STORY

YOU will find elsewhere in this edition what constitutes an amazing commentary on the magnitude of theatre business on the nation's most important thoroughfare. Don't overlook this. It is rich in informative data.

Twenty Broadway theatres, in 1929, rolled up the formidable gross of $25,698,739. A handful of de luxe theatres, they are after all but merely a handful, persuading the public of New York by dint of merit in performance to part with an average of almost $500,000 each week in fifty-two for motion picture entertainment.

What has happened in New York has, in a broad sense, happened all over the nation. In different ratio, of course. But the figures tell the story of the hold that films maintain on the public better than words.

It is significant to point out, however, that on Broadway, at least, 1929 grosses outstripped 1928's. There can be but one reason for that: sound and the rejuvenation in quality which it imparted to the decadent silent picture.

The Dollar Flood

The whole history of sound from the day this industry reversed itself to make way for its impetuous conquest has been a modern day miracle.

The silent picture is completely and irrevocably out of the ring. What Broadway and its thousands of counterparts, large and small, did in 1929 supply an answer that beggars refutation.

And, despite the rejuvenation which box-offices at large are experiencing, the process of changes is merely getting under way. Note for instance what happened in New York last year:

Grosses and No Arguments

At the Rialto, twelve pictures grossed $1,733,558. At the Rivoli, thirteen pictures rolled up $1,667,011. Impressive figures. "The Wolf of Wall Street," holding forth for six weeks at the former house, finished its short run with a total a few thousands short of $225,000. Later in the year, "The Trespasser" knocked 'em off for $67,800, in one week. And still later "The Taming of the Shrew" chalked up $55,600 in one week at the Rivoli.

All of which means plenty. The semi-extended run policy, and by that is meant holding pictures in specific theatres for four to six weeks, is finally opening the eyes of producer and distributor to the real drawing power of good attractions.

The Fewer Pictures Tendency

The conviction, therefore, is rapidly growing that it is better to shelve a dud than to push it against a resisting tide of public disinterest. Producers have pretty nearly convinced themselves via the performance at the box-office that after all there is something to that industry wheeze about making 'em fewer and better.

As big chains get bigger and as the major line companies demonstrate to their complete satisfaction that their outlets, plus their studios, make them self-sufficient without need for outside deals, the fewer pictures policy will swing into definite line. It may be for the 1930-1931 season. Or it may not. At the minute the trend is toward the change-over almost immediately.

When it happens, as it must, you will find production trimmed to fit the needs of the theatre more closely than prevails at the present time. Houses that formerly ran pictures one day, now find themselves in the two and three day category. Week stands have slipped into two and three weeks.

All over the nation, pictures today are getting playing time commensurate with their appeal to the public. Sound, fortunately enough, has hastened a situation which had to come.

Happier Times in Hollywood

Concessions for the actor in exchange for a pledge to refuse "to support or countenance a strike or any radical action by any group of actors that might be injurious to the motion picture industry so long as the letter and the spirit of this agreement is observed." Yesterday's big piece of business on the Coast.

Thus sounds the deathknell of Equity in Hollywood. Yet while the organization faces defeat of its Equity-shop plan, the considerable reforms on behalf of the player must be attributed to its persistent efforts. Hollywood, the land of sham and heartaches, now takes on the guise of a happier place for the lowly performer. A victory for the underdog.

An Insider's Outlook

ENGROSSING. Fascinating. A page torn out of a real drama of business and humans. Which is one way of describing the inside story of the entire Fox embroglio, as seen through the eyes of Bill Fox himself.

Today, every word of Fox's own story, as told in a voluminous affidavit now on file in the Federal Court in New York is divulged for this industry via the columns of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Here is an inside yarn of big business, cross purposes and, so it is alleged, financial machinations.

That Wesco Slant

Fox, for instance, would have you believe that ulterior motives, not clearly defined, motivated the actions of John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart as trustees. Otterson and Stuart declared yesterday they would have no statements to make. And so the issue remains clouded in doubt. It is a fact, however, that the inside has been boiling like a maelstrom for weeks past.

Fox makes the extremely interesting assertion that Adolph Zukor and the Warners were in cahoots on a deal for Wesco; that they were in agreement to divide the spoils, share and share alike. To this, Paramount laconically says, "No statement." And Harry Warner's office yesterday reported him out of the city.

The conclusions which might be made from the Fox claim, always assuming it is correct, are many. For instance, it would be far from wild to conjecture whether or not Adolph and Harry were hobnobbing again in business topics of mutual interest. Don't forget, the sensational manner in which the Warners have forged to the front since sound kissed this business with its troublesome touch has aroused the keenest of admiration and envy in a number of quarters.

Do You Remember?

It wasn't so long ago when the Warners and the Zukor forces were talking merger as seriously as they knew how. Then one day Abel C. Thomas, attorney for the Warners, whispered in Harry's ear that the folks down Washington way might be moved to ask questions of an embarrassing nature if a coalition of Paramount and Warners became actual fact.

The Paramount plan to increase its stock to 15,000,000 shares was then suddenly dropped after the Street had declared it in and, before the surprise which that move entailed had subsided, it became known that confabs with the Warners looking for the consolidation which everyone anticipated had turned completely cold. That, however, is that.

A. T. and T.

One of the extremely interesting slants on the Fox disclosures concerns the plans of American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Fox declares in what you might construe as being significant if you are minded that way, that A. T. and T., via "Erpi" was ready to use Fox as a stepping stone to phases of this business other than equipment. Purely an interpretation and yet is it very far-fetched if Fox's statement that "Erpi" aided in financing the purchase of Loew stock is correct?

April

Popularly described as the "foolishest" month, but this time potentially important in its history-making possibilities.

Fox Film and Loew's , Inc., hold their annual stockholders' meeting somewhere between the opening and closing of the year's fourth month. Something is in the cards, but the deck is too well shuffled to figure out exactly what—as yet.

Merely as an advance tip, you are urged to keep your eyes peeled for developments. Even fireworks. Directorates may undergo some changes. That, in itself, means nothing. You must remember, however, that when directors are shunted about it means something.

Fox Hurls Accusations of Intrigues, Broken Pacts at Otterson and Stuart

Fox Receivership Believed Averted

Receivership for the Fox companies has been averted, with the banking groups working out refinancing plans, and whipping into shape proposals which will settle difficulties to the satisfaction of all creditors, it is believed in film and financial circles.

This is reflected in the steady recovery of Fox Film stock to about $40 a share, a level at which it has been hovering during the past week.

Lehman Brothers, as previously reported, are said to be seeking to acquire control, working presumably for RKO, but the deal still is in a preliminary state. An offer of $12,500,000 to Fox to retire is reported to have been made and promptly refused. The Lehmans would take over all obligations under the reported proposition.

A number of other reported plans under terms of which the bankers would provide the millions necessary to meet current obligations and operating expenses, are said to have been made. One of these is said to call for sale of part of the Fox holdings.

However, it is pointed out, these propositions are separate from the refinancing plan, which is declared not to hinge upon them. The efforts of the Lehmans and Bancamerica-Blair and Co., are described as a friendly effort to extricate the Fox organizations from their present difficulties.

A pivotal factor in the entire complex situation is Loew's, Inc. The financial condition of this organization, plus its reputation as a producer and a theatre operating company, is responsible for a number of offers to purchase the important block of stock which Fox controls. When the annual meeting of Loew's, Inc. is held in April, several surprise moves concerning the personnel of its directorate are anticipated.

Affidavit Purports to Tell Inside Story of Gigantic Moves That Centered Industry's Eyes on "Lone Eagle"

Sensational charges of intrigue and broken agreements and a drama of big business unique in American annals are contained in the affidavit of William Fox filed in Federal Court in answer to the action of Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser for a receivership in equity for the Fox Film Corp.

Fox's affidavit lays bare the inside story of the now-famous Loew deal, the Gaumont purchase, the sale of his First National holdings to Warners, the trusteeship agreement and why he repudiated it.

The affidavit sheds light on many hitherto undisclosed and puzzling events in recent film history, and tells a story of financial machinations unprecedented in the industry.

Carrying out of his trusteeship agreement with John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart would have resulted in his removal from the presidency of his company, and a shakeup of its structure which he could not countenance, Fox asserts in explaining his refusal to carry out the agreement he says the co-trustees breached.

Otterson and Stuart had ulterior motives when they formulated the trusteeship plan, the affidavit charges.

A. T. and T., through its subsidiary,Electrical Research Products, hoped to gain a strong foothold in exhibition, through Fox, it is intimated.

Says Zukor and Warner Planned Wesco Split

The affidavit also alleges that:

Warners and Adolph Zukor had an agreement to split Wesco if either was successful in closing proposed deals for the circuit with Fox.

Warners paid Fox $10,200,000 for his holdings in First National, amounting to slightly more than 29 per cent.

Fox does not control Loew's, owning, through Fox Theatres, only 41 per cent of that company, for which $73,000,000 was paid.

Fox, from the outset, planned consolidation of Fox Theatres, Fox Film and Loew's, despite statement at the time that entity of the companies would be retained.

Three companies were bidding for the 400,000 shares for which Fox paid $50,000,000, one of which had made an offer of $56,000,000.

Electrical Research loaned Fox $15,000,000 to help finance the Loew deal, in exchange for which Fox relinquished unnamed patent claims.

Fox paid $20,000,000 for a large interest in Gaumont British to protect his film business in England, as well as to aid Electrical Research to avoid any patent entanglement that might check sales of Western Electric equipment in England.

Stood Squarely Behind Leo and Sheehan

Fox, insisted in his trusteeship agreement, two of his chief lieutenants, Jack Leo and Winfield R. Sheehan, be retained in their present capacities as vice-presidents and directors.

Harry Stuart, Fox was told, "professing the greatest interest in my personal welfare" suggested he had better leave the country for six months because the trustees intended to do so many drastic things during that period "that it would be impossible for me to suffer the humiliation that would be heaped upon me during that time."

When Fox tried to arrange refinancing after repudiating the trusteeship agreement, he was blocked by bankers, who refused to listen even to an outline of the facts.

Efforts to secure statements from Adolph Zukor proved unavailing. "No comment," was all Paramount would say. Harry M. Warner was out of the city Thursday and both Otterson and Stuart declined to talk.

Exhibitors Want Arbitration But Distributors Find Their Hands Tied

Distributors Ready to Establish System, But Feel No One Can Make Collective Deal for Exhibitor—Survey Shows Reaction

Exhibitors in all sections of the country are sold on the idea that some form of voluntary arbitration is essential, and distributors stand ready and eager to give it to them, but for the time being, at least, their hands are tied.

Many plans for arbitration are being submitted to Film Boards of Trade and to home offices by exhibitors, managers and salesmen, but so far none has been evolved which will function effectively and legally.

The big difficulty of the situation, as distributors see it, brought about by the decision of Judge Thacher ruling compulsory arbitration is illegal, is that no one can negotiate for the collective exhibitor.

Meanwhile, there is a diverse reaction to the situation in various sections of the country, in some quarters distributors and exhibitors getting along without difficulty, despite the lack of arbitration. In others, a return to the chaos of pre-arbitration days is feared, with a number of crooked trade practices returning.

All of these facts are brought out in a national survey made by Motion Picture News which discloses an almost unanimity of opinion among exhibitors that arbitration in some form is needed.

There is a confidence expressed by exhibitors and distributors that a form of arbitration will be evolved which will withstand Dept. of Justice scrutiny and be within the boundary of the Thacher decree.

More Confabs?

Discussions as to possible future sessions of the 5-5-5 conferences are expected to be held within the next few days following return to New York from Europe of S. R. Kent, who sponsored the joint exhibitor meetings. Distributors are said to feel that the Thacher decree makes further conferences useless.

Portland Exchanges Wait for Arbitration Orders

Portland, Ore.—All matters on arbitration should be left to the home offices of the various companies, exchangemen here believe. They are anxiously awaiting orders in the matter.

New Contract Held Problem Solution

Seattle — Solution of the problem caused by the Thacher decision will come in the form of a new contract and arbitration plan, it is believed here. Until something in that regard is forthcoming, nothing is expected to be done to change the situation.

Arbitration here stopped three months ago when the Pacific Northwest exhibitor unit joined Allied States Ass'n.

Frisco Film Row Is Mum on Arbitration Decision

San Francisco.—No opinions are expressed here on the Thacher decision, while its effects are being studied. The Film Board, exhibitor association and individual local managers, do not wish to be quoted on the subject.

Cincinnati Elated By Thacher Edict

Cincinnati—Exhibitors of this territory hail the Thacher decree as presaging a new era in their relations with distributors. There seems little doubt, however, that arbitration in some form will be continued.

Andrew G. Hettesheimer, vice president of the Greater Cincinnati exhibitors' association, member of the local arbitration board and one of the board of directors of the Ohio unit, says:

"I personally am an advocate of fair methods of arbitration, which I consider vitally essential to the exhibitors' best interests, because, without arbitration he would necessarily need to revert to court action to iron out his difficulties. This would mean delay which would be disastrous to the exhibitor, who must have speedy action. The Thacher decision looks like a welcome rift in the ominous clouds of unrest which have been hanging over the industry for the past several months, and paves the way for wonderful opportunities for constructive action at the forthcoming conference. However, unless a fair contract is drawn up, or less voluntary arbitration is amicably conducted, I am afraid that the old deposit system may play an important part in future relations between the distributor and the exhibitor. We have reached the turning point."

John A. Schwalm, president, Jewel Photoplay Co., Hamilton, O., and member of the executive board of the Ohio unit commented as follows:

"Fair-minded exhibitors should be, and I believe very generally are, very jubilant over the Thacher decree. I, for one, am especially so, because it appears that the exhibitors are at last about to get a break. Let us hope that the industry will now get down to brass tacks and that future negotiations will be conducted on a fair and business-like basis, the same as obtains in other major enterprises. There is a heap of responsible work to be done at the conference and I see no reason why all questions should not be satisfactorily adjusted at that time."

Comparatively few cases have been arbitrated here, but those which have come up for arbitration have been disposed of.

Return of Fines and Deposits Held Studied by Exhibitors

Minneapolis—Demand for return of moneys involved in arbitration decision, either as fines or deposits is being considered by some exhibitor leaders, "Greater Amusements," Northwest regional, reports. This is based on a provision of the Thacher arbitration decree, the publication asserts.

A study of this point of the decree now is being made, it is asserted, with a view to instituting action. If the courts should uphold the point, exhibitors would be forced to return moneys received from distributors as a result of decisions. W. A. Steffes, exhibitor unit head, and chairman of Allied's committee at the 5-5-5 conferences, declines comment, pending study of the situation.

The point is based on the following paragraph of the decree:

7. From retaining any sum or sums heretofore received in accordance with the provisions of said paragraph "Eighteenth" of said "Standard Exhibition Contract" dated May 1, 1928, and/or said Rule IV, entitled "Enforcement of Decisions of Board of Arbitration" of said "Rules of Arbitration" dated May 1, 1928, from any exhibitor of motion pictures in the United States, as security for the performance of any contract licensing the exhibition of a motion picture.

L. A. Happy

Los Angeles.—No trouble in securing playdates here has been encountered due to the close co-operation existing between exhibitors and exchanges. The unusual situation existing made little arbitration necessary when the system was functioning, so there is hardly any change in the situation.

Voluntary Arbitration System Fair to All Favored, NEWS Survey Shows

Industry's Future Declared at Stake

Milwaukee — Future of the industry is at stake as a result of the Thacher decision, in the opinion of Henry A. Staab, secretary of the Wisconsin exhibitor unit. He is "happy to hear there is to be a new order of things," he declares, pointing out that the industry can't get anywhere by "salve and promises."

Wisconsin exhibitors are waiting for the next move of distributors. There has not been any arbitration here in some time, as the exhibitor association is a unit of Allied States Ass'n.

Rocky Mountain Zone in Favor of Arbitration

Denver—Arbitration is almost universally favored throughout this territory, but exhibitors believe that the board should be empowered to act on the merits of any controversy and not be confined strictly to terms of the contract involved. Thomas Sullivan, business manager of the Rocky Mountain exhibitor unit, which is affiliated with Allied, states he is heartily in favor of such a plan.

Arbitration has functioned in the Denver territory continuously for several years up to a few weeks before the decree was entered; in fact, it was only discontinued at the time Judge Thacher gave his opinion. The existence of the arbitration board in the Denver territory weathered the invasion of Allied during the exhibitors convention last June.

Oklahoma Sees Voluntary Plan or Suits the Solution

Oklahoma City—Voluntary arbitration or settlement of disputes through the courts is seen by exhibitors and exchangemen here as the solution to the situation caused by the Thacher decision outlawing the industry's arbitration system.

Voluntary Arbitration Is Favored in Capital Zone

Washington.—Voluntary arbitration under a system equitable to all parties is favored by exhibitors of this territory.

Decision Unpopular

Salt Lake City.—Discontinuance of arbitration has not found favor here, for exhibitors had been well pleased with the way the system had been working. In line with this viewpoint, they went on record prior to the issuing of the decree favoring the continuance of the existing or some similar system.

Need Stressed

Arbitration in the industry is necessary and desirable, but it must be a fair system under a contract which is equitable in the belief of Joseph M. Seider, president of the New Jersey exhibitor unit. Exhibitors, he says, want a uniform contract, but object to the present form. If arbitration is resumed, he says, New Jersey exhibitors will insist upon representation on any proposed board, continuing their six-year fight against the arbitration of cases involving members by either the New York or Philadelphia boards.

St. Louis Favors Equitable System

St. Louis — Some form of voluntary arbitration assuring a fair deal to all is favored by exhibitors of this territory. Although, in some instances, exhibitors felt the board's decision was unfair to them, on the whole the board had given satisfaction.

A system of voluntary arbitration is favored because exhibitors feel they cannot afford to rush into court to iron out the minor differences with distributors formerly handled by the arbitration board. The time and money saved by arbitration are big factors in its favor, exhibitors feel.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the eastern Missouri and southern Illinois unit, states his organization has not discussed the arbitration situation nor has he decided in his own mind what is best to do. He favors some form of voluntary arbitration fair to all elements.

Officials of the Film Board have not taken any action and are awaiting further information from New York. It is probable that any plan for contracts and arbitration worked out in New York will be adopted by the local board.

Decision Elates W. Pa. Exhibitors

Pittsburgh—Exhibitors here are elated over the Thacher decision and "anxiously awaiting the day for adoption of a just and equitable contract and system of arbitration," declares Fred J. Herrington, secretary of the western Pennsylvania and West Virginia exhibitor unit. Showmen here, he says, recognize that the Thacher decree is "all that could be expected, especially to those who knew the hardship that the contract with the so-called arbitration set-up was working upon the exhibitor."

"We hope to see the day," he continues, "when an equitable contract will be adopted in the industry and a just system of arbitration set in good working order, because we feel that arbitration is far less costly than litigation. However, unscrupulous arbitration and tactics as used in the past could only bring the chaotic condition now prevailing."

Arbitration here has faced a long fight on the part of the exhibitor association, which culminated in a state court decision ruling the system illegal.

Des Moines Exchanges Study Legal Meaning of Decree

Des Moines—Decision handed down by Judge Thacher seems to be quite satisfactory in this territory outside of the fact that a good many seem at a loss to decipher the legal wording. The understanding is that the only change is that Clause 18 which provides for arbitration has been removed and that until a new contract is drawn up the letter of the old contract is to be followed.

The Des Moines Film Board is meeting with exchange men present to discuss the decree and the new contract ideas. The exhibitors have not been requested to meet with the board for arbitration or for its discussion at this meeting.

Philadelphia Convinced Some Form of Fair Arbitration Is Essential

Philadelphia.—Ninety-eight per cent of exhibitors of this territory unequivocally favor arbitration, wanting a voluntary system which will assure fairness to all parties. The need for something to find its place is being demonstrated by the return of a number of sharp practices, which had been stamped out under the arbitration system.

This need led to appointment of a committee by the eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and southern New Jersey unit, to confer with individual exchange managers on some system of voluntary arbitration. They want a system to which all exhibitors can subscribe witrhout fear and which will conform to the Thacher decision. On the committee are: Allen Benn, M. Wax, M. Landow, Jay Emanuel, George P. Aarons, David Barrist, with Lew Pizor ex officio chairman.

Bicycling, refused shipments, refusal to pay overage on percentage runs or submit box office statements, are among the evils which have followed in the wake of the Thacher decree, it is pointed out locally.

"Bad Blood" Between Fox Officials and Roxy Flares In Open Over Films

Why Wouldn't Roxy Use Preponderance of Fox Product When Other Major Firms Have Own Houses? Grainger Queries

Animosity between Fox executives and S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel flared into the open this week when James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox, promptly challenged statements made by Roxy at the annual stockholders' meeting of Roxy Theatres Corp. In his statement, Roxy had said that if he had an open and a free hand in choosing pictures, he could get just those he desired, citing that he had co-operated with Fox to the extent of using all but four Fox pictures last year, even though he is obligated to use but 35.

Grainger issued a statement on the subject pointing out that the four non-Fox weeks at the theatre were the worst of the year, stating in effect that Roxy played the Fox product because he had to, due to quality and the condition of the market. Roxy would have difficulty in obtaining a major company's quality product for the house, the statement intimated, because the other firms have their own outlets on Broadway.

Fox officials and Roxy have been at loggerheads for some time, over methods of operating the Fox-controlled house. Roxy's contract still has two years to run. At the meeting, Roxy said he had co-operated 100 per cent with Fox and would do his best to continue to do so.

On gross of $5,138,925 last year, the Roxy had an operating net of $1,354,057, according to report read at the annual meeting.

Week by week grosses for 1929 of the Roxy and all other Broadway theatres will be found beginning page 33

Says Roxy

Roxy turned down an offer of $500,000 to "assume charge of one of the largest musical organizations in the world," made within the last few weeks, rejecting it "because I want to see this job through," he told stockholders of Roxy Theatre Corp., at the annual meeting.

"I have been abused and I have been unduly criticized. I have received scurrilous letters from some of you stockholders, and some of the accusations which have been made against me have caused me to go into a corner when I was alone and cry like a baby."

Little Interest Shown in Decision at Albany

Albany — With the Film Board here awaiting instructions from the home office in New York, little exhibitor interest in the Thacher arbitration situation is evidenced here. No meetings of the arbitration board here have been held since last November, and since the decree was handed down, distributors have to wait filing claims with the Film Board.

There has been no exhibitor organization in the Albany district for several years past which may possibly account for the fact that there is little or no interest being shown by the exhibitors in the recent decision. At the Film Board it was said that no exhibitors had dropped in nor telephoned, seeking information on the decision, the secretary of the organization summing up matters by saying that the exhibitors, like the Film Board itself, appeared to be waiting to see what happens.

Here's Kansas Law Forcing Holding of Advance Deposits Within State

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Kansas:

Sec. 1.—Whenever money shall be deposited or advanced on a contract agreement for use or rental of moving picture film or like personal property as security for the performance of such contract or agreement or to be applied as payments on such contract or agreement when due. Such money with the interest thereon until repaid, or so applied, shall continue to be the money of the person making such deposit or advance and shall be a trust fund in the possession of the person, with whom such deposit or advance shall be made, and shall be deposited in a bank in the State of Kansas, and in the County where said depositor resides, and shall not be mingled with other funds or become an asset of such trustee. Any interest paid by such bank as trustee shall be credited to and become a part of such trust fund; and providing further that any waiver or attempt by the person making such deposit to waive any of the provisions of this act shall be void.

Sec. 2. Any person, firm or corporation being a trustee as provided in Sec. 1 of this act who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall forfeit a sum of money to the depositor equal to the amount of such deposit which may be recovered by the depositor in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Deposit Law Seen Kansas Barrier

Kansas City — With a deposit law on the statute books in Kansas and exhibitors already breaching contracts, this territory presents a problem as a result of the Thacher decision. Although the situation is not alarming at present, several deliberate contract breaches have been reported, with exhibitors refusing to play pictures under contract.

Two suggested solutions are advanced by R. R. Biechele, head of the Kansas and western Missouri association, which may offer possibilities, even though they may not be workable in their present form. One is that exhibitors make advance deposits to the organization which would act as trustee. Another, based on the association by-laws stating the organization will assist members in working out all problems with distributors, is that members could arbitrate through the exhibitor body, while non-members would be forced to post deposits. Biechele admits that both suggestions would need considerable working over before they could be proved practical.

The majority of exhibitors here want the arbitration clause in the contract, exchange managers declare, asserting the deposit system would work a hardship on most theatre owners.

Elizabeth (N. J.) to Have New $1,000,000 Theatre

Elizabeth, N. J.—With the application for a permit here for a $1,000,000 theatre project, the theatre will go up on residential property at No. 556 North Broad St. The Starrett Co. of New York, which will be in charge of construction, announced the theatre would seat from 3,000 to 3,500, according to tentative plans. Company executives said they were not at liberty to divulge the name of the owner, said to be a large chain operator.

Pending completion of minor details in negotiations the name of the chain interested is withheld, the builders said.

About Face on RKO-Allied Franchise Plan Held Reported Apathy Cause

Sales Manager Marcus Had Panned Proposition to Salesmen Before Told to Reverse Position and Sell It, Inside Story Goes

Chicago—Reported apathy of RKO as contrasted with Tiffany aggressiveness toward sale of five year franchises under terms of its arrangement with Allied States Ass'n., is traced by insiders to the "about-face" declared done by the company at the meetings when the agreement was ratified.

Previously, it had been reported that opposition of the Hays organization to the plan, had led to a soft pedal being placed on it, but the more direct cause is said to have been the developments at the meeting here.

Originally, it is stated, Allied had sold Lee Marcus, then general sales manager of R.K.O., on the plan, subject to a final approval by David Sarnoff, then vice president of R.C.A.

Marcus First Enthused.

Marcus, it is said, was enthusiastic over the plan. However, the R.K.O. sales manager came to the meetings here with a long rider to be attached to the agreement providing that franchise holders would not attack Will H. Hays, his organization or the arbitration system. The rider is generally reported to have its origin in discussions between Charles C. Pettijohn of the Hays office and Hiram S. Brown, of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, which is the holding company for Radio Pictures, as a means to thwart the alleged political activity on the part of the Allied group.

Abram F. Myers, president of Allied, is said to have scorned the proposed agreement, with result that Marcus is declared to have addressed a meeting of his sales force here, when he panned the franchise proposal plenty.

Hyers Finally Got Busy

Myers immediately communicated with Sarnoff in New York, with the result that peremptory instructions are said to have been given the RKO sales head to go through with the franchise agreement as originally agreed upon. This necessitated a second speech by Marcus before the field men telling the salesmen to go out and sell the franchise proposition he previously had so roundly panned.

Lee Marcus had no comment to make on the Chicago story of reported circumstances surrounding adoption of the franchise agreement with Allied States Ass'n.

Illinois and Wisconsin Houses Sought by Fox

Chicago—Fox intends to take over a number of theatres in the Middle West, with Joe Leo, president of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, coming here for the purpose. Leo is well acquainted with the situation in the Chicago and Milwaukee territories by virtue of his long connection as head of Fox Midwesco. Syd Meyers, head of the Fox chain here, and Harold Fitzgerald, general manager of Midwesco, are to discuss with Leo the proposed expansion of their circuits.

Grandeur Will Make Bow at Roxy Feb. 17

Introduction of the 42-foot wide Grandeur screen to the Roxy, New York, beginning Feb. 17, is planned. The production will be "Happy Days," a big scale all talking, all musical Fox Movietone production with practically every Fox featured player in the cast. This is the first film designed especially for presentation on the Grandeur screen. About six other de luxe Tax houses are to get Grandeur equipment immediately.

Suits to Fill Gap Caused by Decree

Omaha — Litigation will be substituted for arbitration until some new plan is worked out, it is believed here in view of the Thacher decision. Exhibitors here had been strong for the old system, so the decision is not a particularly popular one. Their approval had been expressed at a resolution passed in September, a month before arbitration was discontinued.

No immediate ill effects are anticipated, for the Thacher decision reads as had been expected. The situation apparently is well in hand with no contracts being thrown out. All film people here are making a study of the degree in an effort to determine exactly what their status is. Individual adjustments of disputes is the current procedure.

Paramount Executives Arrive from Europe

S. R. Kent, general manager for Paramount, arrived in New York Thursday on the Aquitania following a European tour and is expected soon to resume deliberations of the 5-5-5 conferenc on arbitration and a new uniform contract. Kent dodged all interviewers.

Left to right in the group are John Cecil Graham, managing director of Paramount in England Kent, Mrs. Kent, Mrs. Shauer and Melville A. Shauer, special company representative in Paris.

Graham is understood to be here on the reported plan for Paramount to take over Fox's interest in Gaumont British.

Southern California Unit Getting 5 Recruits Weekly

Los Angeles—More than 100 theatres in the southwest are now members of the M. P. T. O. of Southern California, and the organization is showing a steady gain in membership. Executives of the organization report that average of more than five theatres are joining every week, and expectations are to have 100 per cent representation among independent theatre owners of Southern California in the association. The organization is affiliated with Allied States Association.

One-Sided Arbitration Responsible For Thacher Decision, Cohen States

Inequality of System Over Years Reason, Former Exhibitor Leader Maintains—Says Exhibitor Had No Voice Until Recently in Shaping Terms—Urges Building Moratorium

By SYDNEY S. COHEN

ONE-SIDED arbitration with the odds heavily in favor of the producer and distributor is responsible for the long chain of events leading to the Thacher decision ruling the system illegal, states Sydney S. Cohen.

For four years president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and inactive in exhibitor organization since June, 1926, Cohen is now writing a series of articles for* Motion Picture News *in which he proposes to deal with a few "I Told You Sos," and to draw an analogy of the situation confronting the theatre owner today as against the time when a determined stand against producer-distributor encroachment in exhibition was being made.

Cohen, in his first article which follows, expresses the opinion today, as he did in 1924, that the industry is sitting on a keg of gunpowder; that lack of equity in the arbitration system, then as now, is leading the industry either toward a Congressional investigation or legal action by state and national authorities.

SINCE post mortems and I Told You Sos are not constructive in their effect, and since I am a staunch believer in constructive moves, let me hasten to emphasize the fact that the I Told You Sos referred to herein have a constructive intent. And that, moreover, I am going to include a message which I trust will be as helpful and as far reaching in its effects as I hope and intend it to be.

The survival of the fittest is an inhuman, and inexorable creed from which all sense of the brotherhood of man is sadly missing. I have never been an advocate of ruthless domination by the powerful; and have always and consistently been for the little fellow—the under dog. Perhaps this is partly because as an all-time unaffiliated exhibitor I am somewhat in that category myself.

But those who remember my presidency of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, when that organization wholly represented the viewpoint of the independent and unaffiliated exhibitor exclusively, can readily recall that I was a warm advocate of the cause of the small theatre owner then, and at all times. And I always shall be, even if the ranks of unaffiliated exhibitors grow slimmer and slimmer. And, if the time should come when all theatres would become affiliated, my sympathies and my utmost efforts would go to the smallest of these.

In August 1927, under the heading The Road to Economy, I wrote an article in Motion Picture News from which the following excerpts seem to make timely reading. In speaking of the general call for economy started by certain producer leaders, I said:

"Apparently the knowledge of the actual seriousness of conditions has come upon some of them (producers) so suddenly that it has made them somewhat bewildered if not a trifle panicky, and their better business sense has temporarily deserted them.

"Otherwise it is difficult to understand how they can fail to recognize the fact that they have reared a veritable Frankenstein—a monster which, if uncontrolled, bids fair to destroy those who have fashioned it.

"This situation has been largely brought about by the ease of credit which has come to these companies through stock sales promoted by the national banking and financial interests which have been attracted to the motion picture industry in recent years. This ease of credit is an unnatural condition, and has led to this era of abnormal promotion and overbuilding by producers in sections adequately seated and theatred. In most of these cases, an individual theatre owner would build a new theatre if there were not the constant fear that some producer controlling the distribution of quality film would promote a theatre in the section. Were this fear removed hundreds, perhaps thousands, would build or enlarge their present theatres and beautify them; but individuals hesitate to hazzard their own money now when they are opposed by interests who are using other people's money—the public's.

"I snicerely hope that the negative note recently sounded in the newspapers of the country about the need for economy will not create in the minds of the motion picture going public the thought that the entire industry is unsuccessful or poorly managed. We all know that the public likes to follow the crowds and loves a winner and I urge for the attention of all producers in this industry the commencement of a campaign for the concerted use of the united man power, brain power and screen power of the industry to bring the above thought about. An intensive, constructive and countrywide industry institutional advertising campaign, launched in the newspapers, on billboards, in magazines, and in the industry's trade press both national and regional, would so increase interest in and knowledge of the motion picture that it would inaugurate a greater movie era in that it would bring into our theatres everywhere millions of people who are not now patrons of the motion picture. Producers and theatre owners alike would profit, and the resultant increase of income would cause such a lessening overhead expense that real economies would be affected.

"The saturation point in production extravagances and unbridled theatre building has been reached. Sane, well-balanced minds have called a halt; and the call will be heeded.

"Great industries are not built up by pyramiding. Expense and extravagance are not the sign posts marking the pathway to success, but efficiency and ethics are."

"Although the foregoing was written nearly two and one half years ago it might well apply to the immediate present. And without undue smugness I honestly feel that, if these thoughts of mine had been given proper consideration by those for whom they were intended, a different picture today would be the result.

"The recent ruling of Judge Thacher of the U. S. Circuit Court, making it illegal to use the present contract and arbitration system, would have been not only unnecessary, but impossible to imagine as well, if the following recommendations of mine, written in 1924 and contained in my series of articles—'The Exhibitor's Place in The Sun,' which appeared in 'Exhibitors Herald,' had been given due consideration at that time or since.

For four years president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and for two years chairman of the board, Sydney S. Cohen, still an exhibitor and unaffiliated, is writing a series of articles for exclusive publication in MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Cohen is digging into the inside of exhibitor organization and promises to divulge a number of facts on the inner workings never previously aired in print.

Juggling With Contracts:

A contract among other things means a meeting of the minds of the contracting parties. However true this may be in the theory of the law, a contract appears to mean no such thing in the motion picture industry as far as dealings between producers and distributors on the one hand and theatre owners on the other hand are concerned.

"Until recently, the theatre owner, although one of the contracting parties had no voice whatever in the shaping of the terms. The only contractural relation for him was the signing of his name on the dotted line. As far as that goes, the individual theatre owner is in about the same position even today.

"I am a firm believer in arbitration predicated on a contract that is really mutual: 'fifty-fifty' as the common saying has it. Arbitration and boards of arbitration are favored by everybody on the theory that it is preferable to arbitrate rather than to go into court. I regret to say that the so-called arbitration boards fathered by the producers and distributors, and so cleverly advertised by them through the entire press of the

Old Army Game

A state right producer-distributor, inactive for many months, collected more than a hundred grand from a prominent bank this week solely on the strength of a gag.

Through unknown agencies, he circulated the report in banking circles that he was in on a merger of certain companies. At least one of the companies mentioned was known to be in a healthy financial condition. And when said state righter called on the bank, several days after the plant, the officers received him with open arms, advancing the money, and checking up later. What they found out in the check-up was nobody's business.

Better Film Group Formed in Mpls.

Minneapolis—Mrs. Henry S. Godfrey heads the Minneapolis Volunteer Committee for Good Motion Pictures organized here to raise film standards in co-operation with Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, former Minneapolis woman, and now an associate director of public relations on the Coast for the Hays office. The new association will set up friendly relations with exhibitors, give publicity to preferred films on information obtained from Mrs. Winter and from previews and keep an eye on advertising to prevent alleged indecency. Forty women comprise the committee.

Women's Clubs Would Cut Hays Backing

Support of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will be withdrawn from the Hay's organization if a resolution now being circulated among Federation members is approved. This was made known by "The Churchman," national journal of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The resolution, as quoted in "The Churchman," says that the federation's representative on the Public Relations Committee of the motion pictures industry, Mrs. Thomas G. Winters, is a paid employee of the industry.

Inspiration to Produce Series of Harold Wright Stories

Los Angeles—Inspiration's 1930-31 schedule will include a series of Harold Bell Wright talkers, rights having been purchased from Sol Lesser, general manager of the company. Lesser produced many of the Wright stories several years ago in silent form.

"Eyes of the World" is first, with Henry King directing.

An Anniversary

Hollywood.—All work on the Paramount lot was stopped for two minutes Tuesday to commemorate the twenty-second anniversary of the filming of the first picture on the Coast. The film, states Jesse L. Lasky, was "Across the Divide," work on which was started Feb. 4, 1908, by Thomas Persons and Francis Boggs.

National Theatre Building Boom Under Way in Canada

Toronto.—Canada this year will experience a theatre building boom extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, with Famous Players Canadian entrenching its national position, N. L. Nathanson, reputedly allied with Fox, seeking to build up an opposition chain and independent operators planning houses.

Fifteen theatres have been projected by the Famous interests to add to their string of 194 houses, an undetermined number by the Nathanson group and several other interests.

Nathanson Again

Nathanson, it is claimed, has $25,000,000 at his disposal for development of a chain in opposition to Famous, which he formerly headed, and from which he resigned when his proposed sale of the circuit to Gaumont British was blocked by Adolph Zukor and I. W. Killam. Downtown houses here and at Montreal are included in the Dominion-wide plans of the proposed circuit, reputed to have Fox backing.

Famous' plans call for $2,000,000 houses at Toronto and Montreal each seating 4,000; a $1,000,000 Ottawa house seating 2,000; houses at Quebec, Halifax and Vancouver costing $750,000 each and seating between 1,500 and 2,000, and other houses ranging from 500 to 1,500 seats at Welland, Galt, St. Thomas, Port Hope and Sudbury, Ont. Four houses in border cities near Windsor, Ont., also are declared planned.

Montreal Chain Active

United Amusement Co., Montreal, is building theatres of the community type, seating up to 1,000 and costing up to $200,000, at Lachine, Monkland, Girouard, Berri and Rachel, all in the metropolitan Montreal area. Consolidated Theatres is building on St. Catherine St., Montreal, and other chains are making plans for expansion.

Dodge Heads Replacement Service on W. E. Systems

H. S. Dodge now is serving as head of the merchandise service department of Electrical Research Products, handling distribution of replacement and repair parts. He was transferred to New York from Chicago where he was assistant to Frank Rogers, Central division manager. G. A. Applegate, assistant general service superintendent, is Dodge's assistant, and, together, they are working on plans for new service merchandising methods.

P.D.C. Starts Full British Schedule

London—P. D. C., Ltd., has swung into a full production program. Gordon Bostock, old-time London showman, began shooting this week on "Eve's Fall," a two-reel dialogue comedy at the B. I. P. studio, at Eltree. Monty Banks is directing.

Andree Charlot has started rehearsals for "Crystal Gazers," to be followed by "Life in A Night Club."

A. George Smith, managing director of P. D. C. announces the talking, singing, dancing subjects are to meet the British quota program. The program also includes a feature series.

16-Hour Grind for Newsreel Theatre

Chicago—Sixteen hour grind, starting at 9 A. M., is the policy of Chicago's initial all-newsreel house, the Randolph. The 700-seat theatre is managed by Frank Levin.

Carstens Heads Windy City R-K-O Theatre Publicity

Arthur Carstens has been placed in charge of exploitation work for all R-K-O Chicago theatres. Robert Haley succeeds Carstens as publicity manager on all Western vaudeville acts between Chicago and the Coast. Eunice Lefkovits, former secretary to Jack Hess, succeeds Haley, being given charge of detail and stories for Chicago newspapers. Will H. Adler remains as Jack Hess' assistant director of publicity.

General Theatres on Big Board

General Theatres Equipment stock now is being traded on the New York Stock Exchange. It formerly was on the curb.

Washington — Current Internal Revenue Bureau report on corporation incomes lists a total gross of $739,544,783 by 7,269 corporations in amusements and allied fields for 1928.

Income taxes of $6,861,300 were payed by 3,423. They had a net income of $67,543,103, and a gross of $532,431,997.

In the second group, which embraced companies reporting no net and, therefore, not remitting any Federal taxes, 3,213 corporations listed a gross of $207,112,786, with a deficit of $31,257,602.

Cartoon Theme Song

Enter the theme song for a cartoon subject. It is "The Kat's Meow," written for the Krazy Kat release of that name being offered by Winkler Pictures. Lyrics are by Jimmy Bronis and music by Joe DeNat, music director of the Winkler studios. Vincent Youmans is publisher.

Producers Plan General Anti-Strike Drive After Winning First Skirmish

Players to Be Asked to Sign Pledges When Seeking Parts Under Reported Plan—300 Sign Academy Promise, Equity Blocked

Hollywood—Concessions to players are included in revisions to the standard free-lance contract ratified at a closed meeting of players and producers Thursday. The revisions provide: keeping an actor on salary until the picture is completed; ban on doubles, unless to meet requirements of foreign censorship or to perform some act of which the artist is incapable; "reasonable" notice of dismissal; same salary for retakes made within six months as for original filming, and same salary as in a new production, if taken after six months; 12 hour rest period between studio calls. A working day of eight hours for actors employed by the day, with one-eight day's salary for each hour of overtime.

Hollywood—Victorious in their preliminary move to prevent future strikes involving actors, producers are reported planning general campaign to outlaw labor agitation in the ranks of film players. The next step, Motion Picture News is informed, is a reported plan to distribute individual pledges against striking to players and candidates for parts and bits in pictures. This follows the passage of a resolution earlier in the week by 300 actors at the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences, which probably will forestall any future Equity move.

The players went on record with the following paragraph in a resolution approving the work of the committee of players who had been conferring with producers on negotiations for a new standard player contract. The paragraph reads "Be it resolved that this gathering places itself individually and collectively on record as refusing to support or countenance a strike or any radical action by any group of actors that might be injurious to the motion picture industry so long as the letter and spirit of this agreement be observed."

It is understood that the representatives of the producers have been willing to grant many concessions to the actors in the new standard form of contract; but the player representatives in turn had to give assurances that there would be no recurrence of the Equity strike of last summer. This assurance apparently was given after the committee of players had thoroughly canvassed the situation in the actors' ranks and found that practically none of them wanted anything further to do with Equity or any other organization in the picture business that had the power to call a general strike.

Labor agitations, it was voiced at the meeting, have, in the past, caused endless troubles between producer and actor. This phase of the differences the producer indicate will be dealt with thoroughly and, it was indicated, there will be no repetition of Equity strikes within the ranks of the Hollywood profession.

Every assurance was given that both parties will get together on an amicable agreement.

A Record

Toronto.—Charles Dentelbeck has started his fifteenth successive year as president of the operators' local. For some years, he has been projection supervisor for Famous Players Canadian, and travels from the Atlantic to the Pacific supervising booths of 200 theatres.

N. Dakota Seeks Sunday Show Vote

Bismarck, N. D.—Biennial fight for Sunday shows in this "blue" state has started with circulation of petitions for a referendum on the issue at the June primaries. The law requires 10,000 signatures, filed with the secretary of state before March 25. In 1920, a referendum was lost by 4,000, declared due to the action of the American Legion in tying up the question with Sunday baseball and effort to license sale of cigarettes. Two years ago, a bill for local option was lost in the legislature, when the lieutenant governor cast the deciding vote. The proposed new law would legalize Sunday shows after 1:30 P.M.

Milliken Asks N. Y. Women to Aid Better Film Move

Declaring that the percentage of worthwhile pictures is being raised steadily, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Hays association, Thursday called upon members of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs to help raise standards by urging support of meritorious pictures, in a speech made in New York. Films, he said, are wielding a "tremendous influence" in the interest of better homes.

Co-operative Plan on Multi-Linguals

Hollywood—Sponsored by the Motion Picture Academy of Sciences a meeting was held this week at which a committee representing all foreign-version studio executives was formed. It will be known as the foreign production committee. Paul Kohner, of Universal, is chairman, and Gregory Shurlock, of Paramount, secretary.

Others attending were: John Stone, of Fox; Frank Davis, Jerome Lackenbrook and Ralph de Alberich, of M-G-M; Leon de Usseau, of RKO; Heinz Blanke and De Leon Anthony, of Warners; Jack Wilson, of the Producers Assn., and Lester Cowan, of the Academy.

Committee will meet regularly, it was decided, to review and criticize each other's work for the best interests of all producers making foreign versions. The committee also will pass on qualifications of foreign linguists, actors, technicians, translators and writers. All foreign version problems will be tackled.

U. A. Handling Radio Films in 5 Countries Abroad

United Artists will make Radio Pictures in France, Switzerland, Belgium, Italy and Algeria, through its organizations in those countries. Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, and Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of Radio Pictures, were represented in the deal by Arthur W. Kelly and Ambrose Dowling, foreign managers for their respective organizations. The arrangement is effective immediately.

Hearing Postponed

Two weeks' adjournment has been granted in hearings on manslaughter charges against John C. Flinn and Henry F. Lally of Pathe, growing out of the Pathe New York studio fire. Hearings have been postponed until Feb. 20, to await return of Flinn from the Coast.

Remaking "Silent Men"

Hollywood — Paramount will remake "The City of Silent Men" as a talker with William Powell starred under Louis J. Gasnier's direction. Thomas Meighan made a silent version several years ago.

Truth

"Four hundred and ninety-six people pay on incomes of $1,000,000 or over. There would be four hundred and ninety-seven if I had listened to my wife instead of my broker," observes Eddie Cantor.

Some Stars Facing Salary Cuts as Foreign-Language Talker Result

General Production of Multi-Linguals to Make Inroads on Drawing Power of American Players Abroad, West Coast Feels

Hollywood—Substantial decline in star and featured player salaries as a result of general production of foreign picture versions, is forecast by a production executive who has had many years' experience with salary ratings of popular stars and players.

Many favorites of the silent picture era were particularly strong drawing cards in foreign countries, which enabled the producers to secure high grosses abroad for their pictures. Several stars under high salaried contracts were kept on payrolls only because of their popularity in the foreign markets and the grosses their productions could roll up in that field. As "drawing cards" in this country, they rated below program average.

There are many contract stars and featured players carried over by the several important producing companies who have proved entirely satisfactory in talkers. Many of these are considered exceptional "draws" in foreign countries. Just how long they will remain so is problematical in view of producers' plans to make at least Spanish, German and French versions of every picture produced in English.

Admittedly, the organization of special foreign version staffs and stock companies will take time, but once all the producers stampede into the field, little time will be lost to create departments that will turn out the various versions needed. The ability of producers to quickly readjust themselves to changing conditions was definitely established with the transition to sound from silent production.

Cut in Salaries Proposed

Some high-priced stars whose salary is gauged on drawing power in this country and abroad will find themselves in the unknown class abroad soon after the producer starts making foreign versions of his productions with native players of each particular country. Eventually his decline in each country through substitution of actors who can emote in the tongue of that country, will be reflected in sales reports at headquarters, it is stated.

Then the producing executives will get their instructions and arguments as to just why the particular star no longer rates his four-figure salary. The producing official in turn will have no other alternative than to argue for a downward adjustment of the star's contract, and, failing in that, the next option will not be renewed.

The player will not be in a position to demand his previous top from the other producers for a new deal—as all of them will be curtailing player salaries in the same manner to protect themselves.

It is considered unlikely that the downward revision of star salaries which is certain to come through the general production of foreign versions will affect the rank and file of supporting cast players. The "cut" will only include those players whose salaries were predicated on their popularity both in this country and abroad.

S. O. S.!

Several weeks ago, a well known New York salesman was forced to quit his job, due to illness. Upon the advice of a doctor he left for Florida, and as the boat neared Miami, suffered a stroke and died in a Miami hospital.

After the funeral, two kiddies and a widow were left alone and penniless — stranded in a town far from home. All available funds had gone for hospital and funeral expenses.

The widow secured a position as a saleswoman in Miami to feed the children and, in time, save enough to return to New York. A tough task for her.

In the meantime, the boys in New York heard of the widow's plight and went to work. A midnight performance of "Disraeli" at the Central on Saturday night will culminate their efforts.

Da-Lite Marketing Screen for Color

A new "egg-shell" surface screen for projecting color and black-and-white films has been developed by Da-Lite Screen Corp., Chicago, which claims that both film types are screened with greater clarity on the new surface.

F. F. Sturgis, general manager of Da-Lite, reports 4,400 installations to date, with the company's plant, recently remodeled, geared to turn out 50 new-type screens daily, with installations completed in 48 hours.

The screen is said to have successfully passed the lighted-match test applied by the Electrical Testing Laboratories, New York.

Saland Enlarging Craft to Care for 10,000,000 Ft. Weekly

Upon completion of a new building opposite the present structure at Flushing, Craft Film Laboratory, headed by Nat Saland, will be equipped to handle 10,000,000 ft. weekly. Two additional stories are being erected on the old plant. Home office of the company has been moved to larger quarters on the 7th floor of 729 7th Ave., New York.

S. J. Devoe and A. E. McCory, associated with Saland, are en route to Hollywood on a sales trip.

Not the Type

A joyous event had taken place in the home of the film producer.

"Here is the son and heir, sir," said the nurse, smiling coyly.

The producer gave it a perfunctory glance.

"Sorry," he said, absently. "Not quite the type!"—"Fox West Coaster."

Without Norma, "New York Nights" Is Blah

New York critics pick the story as the weak spot in Norma Talmadge's first dialogue effort, "New York Nights" (United Artists). They like Miss Talmadge's screen and voice performance, but complain that "Tin Pan Alley" was a poor vehicle to use for her initial sound feature. An analytical outline of the New York reviews follows:

American— . . . emerges as good entertainment despite its well-grooved story. . . . While not enthusiastic, the audience seemed satisfactorily entertained.

Daily Mirror— . . . Fine direction freshens up a stale story. . . . Without Norma . . . . is just another show-business movie.

Graphic— . . . a weak, maudlin story which should never have been chosen for Miss Talmadge. . . .

Planas to Lecture on Electrical Equipment

E. J. Planas, special representative of Burton & Rogers, Boston, is on a three months' swing around the country, during which he will deliver a series of lectures in an attempt to educate jobbers in the electrical and battery fields in the proper usage of equipment. It is planned to immediately relay this information back to theatres and other equipment users.

Burton & Rogers, through advance tip-offs to wholesalers in key cities, is arranging for representatives of big equipment users to attend the educational discussions. After a talk, Planas uses new model equipment to demonstrate.

"Queen Kelly" Cause of Jam Between Kennedy, Goulding?

Los Angeles—It was a "jam" over "Queen Kelly," Gloria Swanson's production venture of long standing, which caused the rift between Joseph P. Kennedy, Pathe generalissimo, and Edmund Goulding, costing the latter his scheduled job as production chief at the Pathe studio, Goulding asserts. His alleged grievances will be aired in court, for Attorney Milton Cohen is preparing papers in a suit for $10,000 and royalties against Kennedy.

Goulding declared he originally agreed to assist Kennedy in revamping "Queen Kelly," and after looking over the possibilities, suggested making another talker quickly for a reasonable sum, outlining the story of "The Trespasser" to Kennedy and Swanson. Both approved, Goulding says, so he wrote the original story, adaptation, dialogue and music, then directed the picture in 18 days.

Goulding's Yarn

Kennedy, says Goulding, was enthusiastic, and asked him to help Pathe turn out some pictures to meet releases, promising Goulding a bonus of $10,000 in addition to his regular salary of $2,500 weekly. Goulding states he was on the Pathe staff a day after he completed "The Trespasser" and wrote five synopses including versions of properties held by the company and Goulding originals. However, he continues, none was handed to competent writers for preparations.

Seeking to justify his presence there, Goulding continues, he "jumped in" and wrote story, music and dialogue of "The Grand Parade." He selected Fred Scott, who never had appeared on stage or screen, and Helen Twelvetrees, former Fox contract player, for the leads. The picture was shot in 16 days for a moderate sum, Goulding asserts, after which Pathe signed Scott and Miss Twelvetrees to term contracts. The weekly salary of the pair is less than $600, he continues, although Pathe is reported asking $2,500 weekly each for loaning them to other companies.

Says Kennedy Broke Pact

When Goulding refused to have anything further to do with "Queen Kelly," upon which up to that time he had only offered suggestions, Kennedy refused to pay him any bonus or song royalties, Goulding charges. "The Love Spell," he claims, is an outstanding song hit.

Goulding says he never has had a written contract in the film business and had none with Kennedy or Pathe.

New Union Contracts to Be Drawn Soon at Los Angeles

Los Angeles—Jockeying for positions in the drafting of new contracts between theatres and operators, stagehands and musicians is expected here within a few weeks. Operators, musicians and stagehands have an agreement, which prohibits any of the three from making a contract with managers unless the other reach settlements. This is viewed with increasing importance this year due to dwindling prestige of musicians and stagehands, due to sound films.

Le Maire Left Only $1,482

Estate of George LeMaire, Pathe comedy producer, who died following a heart attack, totals $1,482.

The Monday night gathering of players at the Academy was representative, including a number of stars and featured players both under term contract and freelancing. A large percentage of those present were loyal supporters of Frank Gillmore last summer during the unsuccessful strike of Equity. Neither Gillmore nor Equity were mentioned during the entire proceedings by any of the speakers.

Robert Edeson was in charge of the meeting, who explained its purpose. Conrad Nagel then gave details on the contract clauses and stated the producers were willing to provide for a 54-hour week, but Sam Hardy had suggested a clause be inserted in the standard contract providing that a studio could not call back a player for work until 12 hours had elapsed. This would allow the actor sufficient time for rest if he worked overtime on a picture. Unanimous opinion was to the effect that the 12-hour rest period should be incorporated in the contract rather than the maximum number of hours that would constitute a week's work. Explanation was made that the contract would be flexible so that the specific clause could be changed over to a 54-hour week if the 12-hour rest period was not found practical after six months' trial.

Committee Increased

The original committee of ten actors who had been conferring with the producers on the new standard contract was increased by election of 11 additional members: De Witt Jennings, Ben Bard, Frank Reicher, Ben Lyon, Monte Blue, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Helen Ware, Mae Murray, Lois Wilson, William Courtney and Francis X. Bushman. The committee of ten comprises: Jean Hersholt, Richard Tucker, Rod La' Rocque, Lloyd Hughes, Sam Hardy, Lawrence Grant, Wallace Beery, Mitchell Lewis and Conrad Nagel.

A meeting was held Wednesday night between the producer and player representatives for consideration of the final draft of the new standard contract. It is expected that the new agreement will be completed and approved by both the actors and producers within the next two weeks, and the contracts can then become effective by March first.

Among those attending the Monday night meeting were: Bebe Daniels, George Fawcett, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Crawford, Cyril Chadwick, Jack Holt, Lon Chaney, Lawrence Grant, Huntly Gordon, Cosmo Kyrle Bellew, Wallace Beery, Alan Roscoe, Monte Blue, De Witt Jennings, Ben Lyon, Dell Henderson, Gus Edwards, Phyllis Crane, William Mong, Claude Allister, Clive Brook, Phillip Strange, Mike Donlin, Regis Toomey, George Cooper, Charles Sellon, Murdock McQuarrie, Sam de Grasse, George Lewis, Wedgewood Nowell, Erville Alderson, Wade Boteler, Frank Canning, George Irving, Arthur Hoyt, Charles Delaney, Robert Montgomery, Kenneth Thompson, Brandon Hurst, Raymond Hackett, Hobart Bosworth, Harry Lee, Ben Bard, Ruth Roland, William Courtney, Francis X. Bushman, Kay Hammond, Tom Dugan, Warner Oland, William Austin, Creighton Hale, William Holden, Conrad Nagel, Ronald Coleman, Hallam Cooley, Robert Edeson, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton, Rickard Tucker, Sam Hardy, William Powell, Alice White.

RKO and U. A. Adjust Contracts at "Philly"

Philadelphia — RKO and United Artists have extended adjustments to exhibitors of this territory where conditions warrant, the committee named by the exhibitor unit reported at its recent meeting. Charles Rosenzweig, RKO sales head, and Al Lichtman, United Artists distribution head, came to Philadelphia to help work our the adjustments.

Skirboll Gets Branch

Rudolph Skirboll has been appointed feature sales manager in charge of the Cincinnati office of Sono Art-World Wide Pictures. Nat Ross, for 14 years with First National, has been engaged by Sono Art-World Wide Pictures as salesman, to operate out of the Boston office.

New Technical Book

Dr. William F. Marston, vice-president of Equitable Pictures Corp., and Walter B. Pitkin, the company's Eastern story editor, are co-authors of a book on how to write for talkers, titled "The Art of Sound Pictures." The book has an introduction by Jesse L. Lasky.

"U" Considering New Policy Limiting Features to 18 Specials, Coast Hears

Further Confabs on Future Plans to be Held by Production, Distribution Chiefs—N. Y. Meetings On Hollywood—Change of production policy by Universal to limit its product to 18 pictures next season, all of the special class, with program pictures eliminated, is under consideration. This is in line with the general tendency of producers to cut down on product next year, as exclusively forecast Jan. 11 by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Further conferences on the proposed policy cvhange are slated to be held here by by production officials and heads of the sales department.

Production policy for the new year has been under discussion at conferences under way at the Universal home offices. No decision has as yet been reached as to the number of pictures to be made, it is stated, although there is possibility that the company may make a different type of product. Lou B. Metzger, general manager of the company, could not be reached Thursday night for a statement. He is leaving soon for the Coast, it is understood, for conferences on next season's product.

Early in January, MOTION PICTURE NEWS exclusively reported that preliminary schedules being drawn by producers called for a reduction of about 25 per cent in the number of pictures which are to be made for the new year.

The big factor seen as leading to trimming of schedules is extended runs of talkers in all type houses. Many theatres which formerly played week stands, and an occasional second week, now hold attractions for several weeks with frequent recurrences. Houses which have been on a split-week basis, now are rounding out a full week policy, and the three, four, five, six and seven day change houses are extending their runs in proportion.

Talkers of "Lone Wolf" Series Plan

Hollywood—Columbia will re-make "The Lone Wolf" series of features in dialogue, according to present plans. Bert Lytell, who has long been identified with the Louis Joseph Vance detective role in pictures, has been signed by Jack and Harry Cohn to star in the first of the series, "The Lone Wolf."

Foreign Director Signed for M-G-M Multi-Linguals

Hollywood—M-G-M has signed the first foreign director for talkers since the introduction of sound production 18 months ago. A term agreement was given Arnold Knorff, director of numerous German plays and pictures. Knorff is an American, but has had 40 years experience on the European stage. He speaks perfect English, French and German, and is likely to direct versions of M-G-M pictures in these three languages.

Arrest Cheaters? Not This Baby

Chicago—The big shot in a certain Chicago chain theatre organization, so the story goes, had been dogged for months by a high pressure man endeavoring to sell him the eyes of a private detective agency which, the theatre man was assured, would eventually spot box office leaks that numerous changes of cashiers and ticket takers at certain houses of the chain had failed to eliminate.

The executive refused to be sold and, desperate but confident of results, the gumshoe representative offered a trial investigation without charge, which was accepted. Operatives went into the theatres, and eventually the salesman was back with a report which showed that certain assistant managers who substituted for ticket takers and cashiers during lunch and rest periods were pocketing pasteboards at the gate which were resold at the box office later and the sugar salted away. The official was interested in the report but still could not be induced to retain the spotters. The bewildered salesman, baffled by the refusal of a man who had been shown proof that he was being cheated, to take steps to stop it, demanded an explanation.

"Well," said the theatre man sadly, "if I let you show them up I disgrace myself. Every position of any responsibility in my organization is held by a relative of mine."

Trans-Lux Net $525,388

Net of $525,388 before deduction for taxes, as compared with $258,746 for the previous fiscal year, is reported by Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corp. for 1929.

Mayer, Thalberg Sign 5 Year Pact

Louis B. Mayer

Irving G. Thalberg

Hollywood—Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg have signed new five-year contracts with Loew's, to continue in entire charge of M-G-M productions during that period. The contracts, it is reported, carry an option for an additional two years.

The deals were made directly with Loew officials, neither William Fox, John E. Otterson or Harry Stuart, Fox trustees, figuring in the negotiations. The new contracts call for "substantial" salary increases, plus a percentage of profits on pictures produced.

Rosson, De Mille Aide

Hollywood—Richard Rosson, former director for both Paramount and Fox, will become assistant director on Cecil de Mille's production of "Madame Satan" for M-G-M. Hal Rosson, brother of the assistant director, will assume the post of chief cinematographer on the DeMille production, taking the place of Peveral Marley, head cameraman for De Mille during the past several years, who recently resigned to headline in vaudeville with his wife, Lina Basquette.

RKO's Wide-Film Also to Use Many Color Sequences

Hollywood—Two current RKO special productions will utilize Technicolor in a large number of sequences. "The Ramblers" will be shot about 50 per cent technicolor, while "Dixiana" will contain a large portion of color. "Dixiana" will also be shot in two versions, one via regular film and the other entirely on wide film by the Spoor-Berggren process.

Johnston Closes Three Deals on New Continental Product

W. Ray Johnston, president of Continental Talking Pictures, has signed with Supreme Exchanges, Los Angeles, for distribution of the Continental output in Southern California and Arizona. He also signed with Greater Features, Seattle, for Alaska, Washington, Oregon, Montana and Northern Idaho. The Southeastern territory, comprising North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, were sold to Arthur C. Bromberg of Southern Independent New York from the Coast about Feb. 10.

New York about Feb. 10.

Outdoor Film Department Is Formed at Fox Studio

Hollywood—Fox has established a new Movietone department for the making of outdoor pictures. The first will be Zane Grey's "The Last of the Duanes," which will star George O'Brien. The second will be "Ghost City," starring Warner Baxter, which will be made at Rockville, Utah, on exact locations of the story.

Sound Rapidly Replacing Silents Abroad, Gov't Finds

Washington — Sensational increase in revenues from sound sales by American distributors in important foreign countries, including United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, materially outweighs any losses from certain continental European countries where legislative and sound difficulties curtail the distribution of films from the United States, according to a survey made by Nate D. Golden, assistant chief of the M. P. Division, Department of Commerce.

"American foreign trade in pictures during 1929 was dominated by two factors," declares Golden in analyzing last year abroad. "The first," he states, "is the rapid displacement of silent films by sound-and-dialogue pictures in our major markets. The second is the continuation of repressive legislation in leading countries of Europe and the spread of such legislation to Australia and New Zealand, the two markets in the Far East which supply the bulk of film revenues from that region.

"The first factor very well counterbalances the second. Early in 1929, American talkers were beginning to make their appearance in the few foreign theatres which had been wired. This new medium of entertainment, especially in English speaking countries was so immediately successful, that wiring abroad broke all records.

2,200 Wired Abroad

"Researches made by this Division indicate that as of Dec. 31, 1929, approximately 2,200 theatres abroad were wired. Of these, about 1,500 are in Europe, 400 are in the Far East, 250 in Latin America and the remaining 50 in other parts of the world.

"Touching on legislation, there is no reason to believe that greater difficulties will be presented in 1930 than in 1929. The determined stand of American distributors and the French exhibitor against a tightening up of the French quota was the outstanding legislative problem in the European market during 1929. During the progress of settling the terms of this quota no new contacts for distribution of American films in France were made for a period of over six months and the temporary settlement on the basis of the status quo, placed a decided check on the spread of such legislation in other countries which were considering the adoption of quota laws provided France was successful in carrying through her demands.

Others Active on Quotas

"Hungary during 1929 enacted more stringent quota rules, Czechoslovakia and Spain made gestures in that direction, and Italy has prohibited foreign dialogue in talking pictures and even decreed that songs in a foreign tongue be banned. The latter ban, however, was recently removed. Regulations based on those in effect in the United Kingdom were put in force in Australia and New Zealand. Germany, originator of the quota system will continue to operate till July, 1930 on a system of import restrictions, under a law which went into effect Jan. 1, 1929. Germany, however, must either abolish its regulations or enact new ones before July 1, 1930. Late reports indicating that the existing regulations will be carried through for the 1930-31 season. Patent litigation on sound systems in Germany which has greatly curtailed the distribution of American pictures will have considerable bearing on the type of quota promulgated in the German market.

"That sound pictures are directly responsible for the large increase in exports of American films is apparent from the following survey of our 1929 exports. Preliminary figures of American exports for the year 1929 discloses that 282,215,480 ft. of American films at a declared value of $7,622,316 were exported as against 222,122,586 ft. valued at $6,473,990 during 1928. This increase of over 60,000,000 ft. of American films exceeds the peak year of 1919 by 9,000,000 ft.

"During 1929, 8,443,197 ft. of negatives were sent abroad with a declared value of $1,120,602 as compared with 7,711,801 ft. with a value of $6.473,990 during 1928.

Big Jump in Positives

"It is in our positive exports that the big increase for 1929 will be found; 273,772,283 ft. with a value of $6,501,714 were exported during this period as against 214,410,785 ft. valued at $5,253,094 for 1928.

"This 59,000,000 ft. increase in positive exports is primarily due to sound gaining widespread popularity throughout the world, coupled with the increased number of silent pictures sent abroad to supply those houses in foreign markets not yet equipped to show sound. The advent of the sound picture abroad, the foreign producers' inability to produce sound pictures, his fear of producing silent ones, gave to the American producer an open field in the past year in marketing of an increased number of silents, are other factors that have helped to make our film exports the largest in the history of the industry.

"During 1929, 110,031,551 ft. of American motion pictures with a value of $3,340,495 were shown in Europe as against 69,998,393 feet with a declared value of $2,677,358 for 1928.

"Four out of the ten leading individual markets of the world are located in Europe; namely, United Kingdom, France, Germany, and Spain.

"Latin America's imports of American pictures show a gain of nearly 1,000,000 ft. during 1929 over that of 1928. During the year just closed 79,697.870 ft. of American pictures with a declared value of $1,926,543 were shown in the countries of Latin America as compared with 78,960,444 ft. with a declared value of $1,985,750 during the year 1928.

The Far East

"With two English speaking countries in the Far East, Australia and New Zealand, exports of American pictures to this region increased over 8,000,000 ft. during 1929, over 1928. Popularity of sound pictures in these two English speaking markets are primarily responsible for this increase.

Canada and Other Countries

"Canada lends further support to the acceptance of dialogue pictures in English speaking countries by practically doubling her imports of American pictures during 1929. Africa, too, shows a substantial increase of nearly 2,000,000 ft. during 1929 over her 1928 imports. Other scattered countries also have boosted their imports of American pictures."

French Versions Hit

Montreal.—This French and Canadian city will go for French dialogue in a big way, it was demonstrated by the way the turnstiles clicked when a flock of French versions of American talkers were shown. The list included: "Hot For Paris," Capitol; "The Love Parade," Palace; "The Battle of Paris," Imperial; "They Had To See Paris," Outremont Theatre; "Paris," Corona, and a real French presentation at His Majesty's.

Pathechrome Debut

Pathe's new and improved color process, Pathechrome, is introduced with sound in Issue No. 6 of Pathe Audio Review, and a pleasing innovation it is. The processing, done in France, brings out a wide variety of colors in natural hues, with a clearness of detail that makes the result startlingly effective. If the cost of Pathechrome enables widespread use of the process, it should do much to advance the color vogue. A tremendous advantage of the process is the manner in which it brings out facial coloring, lack of which has proved a big handicap to pictures in color.

HYNES

Rogers to Coast for Fox

Will Rogers is due in New York on Friday from London, where he attended the naval conference. He leaves for the Coast immediately to start work in "So This Is London," for Fox.

Multi-Lingual Films Plan of British Firm

London—Formation of the Associated Film Industries, Ltd., representing capitalization of close to $5,000,000 by the I. W. Schlesinger organization, caused changes in executive personnel at the Wembley studio. All production in the future will be in direct charge of Dr. Rudolph Becker, recently director of the foreign department for UFA. Since the combine has taken in Continental enterprises the executive staff is composed of representatives of several countries.

Garmine Gallone, an Italian, will be supervising director, with Jack Harrison and Harcourt Templeman, assistants.

Present plans call for all productions made to be recorded in several languages. This will be possible, it was stated, through an interchange of artists and technicians between the British company and the Tobis subsidiary companies. System of recording will be B. T. P., Klangfilm and Tobis.

Three specials are planned—"City of Songs," story of Baples starring Jan Kiepura, tenor; "The Beggar's Opera," and "Smoke and Steel," called a "big national subject."

British-Franco-German Tieup Seen on "Two Worlds"

Paris.—Delac, Vandal will join with the Berlin concern of Consortium and Greenbaum, in the production of "The Two Worlds," under the direction of E. A. Dupont, it is reported here. British International it is said will have an interest in the production which will be made in three versions—English, French and German. Different principals will be in each version. Vandal and Delac only recently formed. A Franco-German tieup is certain.

A report also is current here that the contemplated merger between Gaumont and Aubert and Hurel has taken place. Opinion in the trade is that either the Gaumont-Aubert-Hurel group or the Pathe-Natan group will invite other firms to join them. Sofar is reported to be considering merging with the Gaumont-Aubert-Hurel group.

McCarey Returns to Pathe

Hollywood—Leo McCarey is again at work on the Pathe lot, Paramount having failed in its effort to retain the director for a second vehicle on a borrowing agreement with Pathe. McCarey made "Let's Go Native" for Paramount.

Gag

What is said to be the most recent Hollywood gag comes from Herbert Cruikshank and concerns another cinema magnate "with a dialect," whose company had just completed an extravagant epic christened "East Is West." Many of the scenes were shot in China, although much of the picture was snapped in New York.

After witnessing the film's preview, the magnate was glum. "What's the matter, don't you like it?" he was asked.

"I ken't say dot I do," he replied.

"But how did you like the Occidental scenes?"

Broadway Poured $25,698,739 Into 20 Film Theatre Box-Offices in 1929

General Averages Show Advance Over 1928 Grosses—Eight Grind Houses Total $19,184,193.65—Twelve Theatres with Extended Runs Drew $6,514,545.35—"Cock-Eyed World" Record at Roxy $173,667 in Second Week—Played to $654,046 on Four Weeks' Run in Summer Heat

NEW YORK'S motion picture patrons poured $25,698,739 into the box offices of twenty theatres on Broadway during 1929. This is a record for picture house receipts on Broadway for all time to date. The totals in eight theatres operating on a grind policy in the Times Square section showed an amazing gross of $19,184,193.65; twelve theatres at which pictures were presented for extended runs during the year registered a gross of $6,514,545.35.

A world's record for box-office receipts in a single house was created at the Roxy, where in the midst of summer heat in August "The Cock-Eyed World" played to $654,046 in four weeks, the second week of the run reaching the unusual figure of $173,667.

An averaging of the figures for 1929 against those for 1928 show that the majority of theatres topped the returns of the previous year.

Of the eight grind theatres the receipts in six of them ran over the million dollar mark. The Roxy with its 6,205 seats led the procession with the gross of $5,579,751.70 for the year. The Capitol and the Paramount were less than $25,500 apart in the final figures, the latter having a slight lead with $3,824,374 as against the Capitol's $3,801,684.35.

The Strand with a weekly change policy was next in line with $1,748,986.85, while the Rialto and Rivoli with an extended run grind policy both went over the $1,500,000 mark. The Rialto figures were $1,733,558, and at the Rivoli the returns showed $1,667,011. All of these houses ran the full fifty-two weeks of the year. Of course the introduction of "midnight shows" during the year helped to swell receipts.

The Colony operated by Universal on a season of forty-three weeks came through to the tune of $531,601.75, while at the little Cameo the returns on the year were $297,226.

The general increase in business is generally credited to the tremendous force of the talking picture in reviving what was seemingly a lagging interest on the part of the public toward silent screen entertainment.

A close scrutiny of the business on Broadway week by week removes all argument to the contrary. The Rialto, for instance, well nigh startled the industry early in 1929 when "The Wolf of Wall Street" grossed $57,992 the week ending February 2. This figure was so far ahead of any other week in the history of the house that comparisons seemed foolish.

As an indication of how distributors were increasing their revenue via extended runs, the Rialto and Rivoli are outstanding examples. Runs at these theatres averaged from four to six weeks. Grosses hovered in the region of $200,000 for each run.

Record-breaking pictures in the grind houses during the year, other than at the Roxy, were "The Duke Steps Out" with William Haines at the Capitol, which did $91,529.95 the week ending April 19; "The Letter" with the late Jeanne Eagles, which did $88,500 at the Paramount the week ending May 3; "The Trespasser" with Gloria Swanson, which did $67,800 at the Rialto the week ending Nov. 8, and "The Taming of the Shrew," with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, $56,600 at the Rivoli the week ending Dec. 6. At the Strand, the year's record is held by "The Singin' Fool," which hung up $50,102 the week ending May 10, which gave this picture the year's record at two houses on the street. It also holds the high at the Winter Garden, where it was shown for an extended run twice daily.

A week-by-week tabulation of the attractions, the receipts and the percentage ratings of each of the eight grind houses for the entire year, together with the total business for each house as well as the average weekly business follows:

Twelve theatres on Broadway presented pictures for extended runs on a twice-daily policy during the year. Some of them, houses given over usually to legitimate stage attractions, presented pictures only intermittently.

Six, however, showed pictures for the complete year. One was the Astor, which during the year had but four attractions, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "The Broadway Melody," "The Hollywood Revue" and at the end of the year "Devil May Care," which is now current there. The receipts were $944,750 for the year. The Central was another. There First National showed nine of its productions and the Warners one, with the year's total receipts being $597,985.50.

The Gaiety, which Fox had under lease and at which he showed seven pictures, rolled up $412,843.25; the Criterion, at which Paramount displayed seven productions, took $624,578 in return; Warner's, at which the Warner Bros. presented ten pictures during the year, gathered in $914,169.30, and the Winter Garden, controlled by the same organization, at which six road show productions were shown, ended the year with $1,638,369.75.

The Embassy, which was under lease to M-G-M, played run attractions until the middle of October, when the house was closed down and turned into the Newsreel theatre. During the early part of the year, seven pictures in all were shown. Four of these were M-G-M productions, one from Paramount, while Columbia took the house for two. In all, the theatre ran but 35 weeks out of the year and receipts were $264,805.30.

The remaining five houses which showed pictures from time to time included the Appollo, where "Bulldog Drummond" ran for eleven weeks during the early part of the year and played to $159,527; at the Cohan, which opened with pictures on Sept. 20, Columbia presented three of its pictures. They were "Flight," which ran for six weeks, "Broadway Scandals," two weeks, and "Song of Love," four weeks, "Hunting Tigers In India" finished out the year there with the receipts for the fifteen weeks totalling $146,133. The 44th Street, where "Alibi" held forth for nine weeks during the spring, played to $138,878.25 in that time. At the Selwyn, "The Rainbow Man" played in the spring for six weeks, and in the fall "The Great Gabbo" and "Blackmail" were shown briefly at the house. Toward the end of the year "Condemned" was presented and finished out the year, the receipts for the sixteen weeks that pictures were shown there being $167,169.

Europe Has Gone Daffy Over Talkers, First Hand Reports from Abroad Show

English Lines Declared to Be No Objection—Houses Wiring Rapidly

Sound pictures with English dialogue have caught on with an emphatic bang, it is the opinion of important foreign sales representatives of Fox now in New York, conferring with officials of the home office regarding plans for this year.

In France, Belgium and Switzerland, for instance, much skepticism apparently prevailed, but the initiative of a few progressive showmen in installing sound reproducers was all that was necessary to start the movement under way, it is declared. By September of this year, it is anticipated 500 houses in France will be wired.

In Spain, a Fox representative declared, it is the musical that is attracting attention. English dialogue is proving no hindrance, it is claimed.

In another year, it is predicted all theatres in Scandinavia will be equipped. Talking pictures are reported to be in great demand there.

Italy now has 70 houses wired and more are on the way to meet the reported demand for talkers.

J. Carlo Bavetta

"Europe has gone thoroughly 'sound,' J. Carlo Bavetta, managing director for Fox in France, Belgium and Switzerland, told Motion Picture News. "While it is true that much skepticism has been expressed in important countries of the continent such as France, Belgium, and Switzerland, regarding the durability of sound and talking pictures, it only required a few courageous exhibitors in such cities as Paris, Brussels, Marseilles to give it a start by installing the most up-to-date Western Electric sound equipment and thus create on the part of the public a most enthusiastic desire to see and hear the latest in sound and talking pictures.

"The language barrier is obviously one that tends to make more complex a situation that is already kaleidoscopic.

"On September 1, 1929, there were but three theatres in the entire French territory that had equipped themselves with sound equipment. On the first of January, 150 theatres had either installed or ordered their equipment. By September 1, 1930, no less than 500 theatres will be showing talking pictures exclusively."

Clayton P. Sheehan

head of the foreign department at Fox who is now conferring with five of his sales managers here in New York on prospects overseas for this year.

"Had I not seen it with my own eyes and noted the box office returns, I could never have predicted the storm of enthusiasm which greeted talking pictures in Spain. Although sound films were introduced into Spain only six months ago, the tremendous following which they have created is responsible for twelve theatres being wired and innumerable others waiting for sound equipment to be installed," in the opinion of S. S. Horen, the company's managing director in Spain.

"The desire for American musical comedy productions has created a demand on the part of the theatre owner for increased bookings of this type of picture.

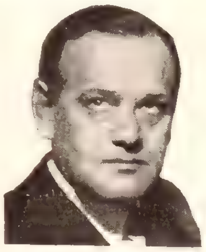
"There seems not to be the slightest objection on the part of the Spanish public to the fact that the language spoken in the picture is English. The realization that language is no hindrance has resulted in exhibiting the pictures without a single cut."

Bruno Fux

Italy Accepts Innovation As Scandinavia Greets Talking Films

"During the past year 70 installations have been made in Italy where of a total of 2,000 cinemas, at least 1,000 are important for size and lcocation," declares Bruno Fux, managing director for Fox in Italy.

"As more installations are made the public's appetite for varied entertainment in talking pictures will be appeased with the newest developments in American talking and singing films."



Julius Aussenberg

Julius Aussenberg, managing director for the company in Central Europe and for many years representative for Fox in that territory, declares the talking pictures are making progress with remarkable strides. He states the day of the extended run in the cities of the countries he handles is here as a direct result of worthwhile dialogue and musical features.

Henry W. Kahn

"The Scandinavian countries like American talking pictures," says Henry W. Kahn, managing director for Fox in Scandinavia.

"Scandinavian exhibitors, realizing the importance of talking pictures, began preparations for the installation of sound equipment during the year of 1929. In 1931 everything will be sound in Scandinavia.

"A great proportion of the population in the larger cities understands English, which accounts for the remarkable popularity of singing and talking films."

"There are many Englishmen in Denmark, in fact, all through the Scandinavian countries. This fact will be a tremendous boost for talkies."

Wide Variety of Sound Difficulties Met and Solved by M-G-M Experts

Exhibitor Only Started When House Is Wired, Work Shows

Better Showmanship Is Now Resulting from New Sound Studios

Exclusive

EXHIBITORS have learned much about entertainment in the past few months. And the chief of these revelations, perhaps, has been the fact that a decision to change from silent to sound policy is not by any means always a solution of box office problems.

They have discovered that decision as to equipment is only the first of several decisions. That sound may be well reproduced, yet be poorly received. That a saving on acoustical expenditures may be costly economy. That the best equipment and the best acoustics can get no greater returns from sound recording than it is inherently capable of yielding. That improvements in production are constantly making greater and greater demands for perfection in reproduction. That audiences are rapidly becoming more discriminating.

These are but a few of the reflections obtained from reading and studying the interesting daily reports of M-G-M'S staff of pioneering sound technicians. Running through every one of these technicians' comments is convincing evidence of the desire of exhibitors everywhere to improve the quality of the sound entertainment which is being offered to the public.

Repeatedly do we find that technicians are invited to visit theatres merely to make suggestions. "Nothing radically wrong, I guess," the exhibitor will say, "but probably you will notice something which can be done to make our entertainment better." And, usually, the visit is father to a better understanding of sound exhibition principles and to corrections of defects which inspire even higher standards of reproduction.

In the present article, which heals with a variety of difficulties, we are again letting the young men of M-G-M tell their stories in their own way. Their reports are taken just as they come, in the technical staff's ordinary working week. Names, of course, are fictitious, but the problems and their solutions are presented exactly as the technicians have explained them.

Our journey this week shall take us North, South, West and East—into every section of the country. We shall visit all types and classes of theatres and shall search them with a prohibitionist's zeal, from cellar to garret. Suppose we start in the East.

Sourness From a Belt

"The house had only been running sound for two days when I got there. There was a tone waver in the right machine which was caused by slippage of the drive belt, which was new and had stretched. This caused a speed variation with a resulting sour effect. The trouble, of course, was very easily remedied."

Wanted Ideas—Got 'Em

"Mr. Jones had not been having any particular trouble, but asked if I would visit his theatre with a view to offering suggestions. I found his horns badly boxed and recommended that he change these, baffling them in the approved manner. His horns also were directed rather low and improvement resulted from slight changes in this respect. He had planned on carpeting the aisles of his theatre and asked me if this was desirable. I considered that it was because the floor of the aisles is cement. I also suggested that the floor of the stage be covered."

Puzzled About Volume

"I first talked with Mr. Morgan at the exchange. He said he would greatly appreciate the favor if I would visit his theatre to make suggestions for improvement of sound reproduction. I found cement floors and suggested he cover the aisles with underlaid carpet. Both the horns were on the stage floor, but as they were well baffled, I recommended no change. I did suggest, however, that the floor of the stage be covered. I also recommended that a bare plaster wall, about eight inches back of the horns, be covered for about six square feet. The back wall of the house does not extend clear across the rear, but a portion of it presents a very flat, very hard surface which needed treatment.

> ### The Creed Is Spreading
> Careful study of field conditions is quickly developing a fund of knowledge, aiding and meeting the many problems arising in the new field of sound reproduction. By close contact with exhibitors in all sections of the country, M-G-M is working out new standards and formulae, which will enable the betterment of sound all along the line from studio to theatre reproduction. A wide variety of theatre problems met and overcome by M-G-M technicians are discussed in this article, the ninth of the exclusive series being published by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"One of this exhibitor's chief difficulties was that a great many patrons of his theatre had been giving him advice as to volume. A result was that he did not know half of the time whether or not he was playing productions at the proper level. I explained to him how to ascertain his house level and also the variations that are necessary when the theatre is only partly filled. He expressed himself as being very well pleased and later wrote a letter to the office expressing thanks for my services."

A Jabbed Record

"I visited this theatre in response to a complaint that the reel and disc of a production then being shown were out of synchronism. I took a new disc, hooked up the equipment, and the disc ran through in perfect synchronism. The trouble was that the pick-up had been jabbed or dropped into the disc which the house had been using and had broken down the groove."

A Record Jumper

"This exhibitor asked me to call at the theatre because the needle was persistently jumping grooves of discs. Testing the equipment with a new disc demonstrated that the tone arm was very shaky and badly out of adjustment. I advised the exhibitor to have the tone arm adjusted by the service department of the installers, but no action was taken. Subsequently, however, the exhibitor was at the exchange and I played a disc (which I had taken from his theatre) on a neighboring theatre's equipment. This latter equipment was similar to that of the exhibitor who had made the complaint. When he saw the disc go through this machine without mishap he immediately had his tone arm adjusted and subsequently informed me that his trouble had been overcome."

Metal, But Not Treated

"This was the first all-metal theatre which I have visited where no effort had been made at acoustical treatment. The sound quality, of course, is very poor. The sides of the house are tin and should be treated. The ceiling is also tin and three streamers should be strung across it at spots which I designated. The orchestra pit should be covered and the felt which is used on the floor of the stage should be extended over the footlights. The back of the house also requires treatment. I also found the tone arms were considerably too heavy and suggested adjustments which the operator made. The horns were flared too much to the sides and I explained the angle at which they should be directed."

Not on the Level

"I found both disc plates out of level in this theatre and the left pick-up head out of line. The latter was immediately adjusted by the operator in accordance with my suggestions, but it will be quite a job to level the disc plates. This is causing a tone waver in one of the machines."

Balcony Causes Trouble

"Mr. Jordan's complaint was that there was an echo in his theatre. Upon visiting the house and making tests I suggested the following method of eliminating the trouble: Treat the sides of the house at the front. Treat the front of the house at both sides of the stage. Also the back of the theatre and the front of the booth. There is a ventilator in the ceiling in the front of the booth which should be covered. The edge of the balcony should be draped all the the way around to offset trouble which the ceiling under the balcony is causing."

Many Sources of Echo

"The condition of the Eagle Theatre was fairly good, but the sound quality was decidedly below average. I found the disc plates were not true and that there was considerable vibration which can be eliminated only by concreting the machines to the floor. The horns were placed in pairs on either side of the screen leading back-stage. I suggested covering them with burlap and also covering a ventilator directly under the stage. These changes improved things very materially.

"Also suggested the use of burlap or some similar material from the edge of the stage to the floor, all along the front, the purpose of this being to eliminate an echo which originates from that point. Also suggested filling in a depression immediately in front of the stage where the piano previously had been placed.

"The house has a metal ceiling which has been well treated toward the back, but which would be improved by two more strips of absorbent cloth stretched across the ceiling. The sides of the theatre directly in front of the horns should also be treated. There is enough acoustical material on hand from former treatment to take care of these suggestions."

Fox 'Cabinet' Signed Protest Letter Under False Impression, Is Charge

Executives Labored in Misbelief Trusteeship Was Necessary to Avoid Receivership, Fox Asserts

William Fox's "cabinet," six of his chief lieutenants, signed the now-famous round robin calling upon him to carry out the trust agreement with John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart, at a time when they were unaware of the alleged breach of the agreement by the co-trustees. They signed it because they were "induced to believe that the sole alternative to receivership" for their chief was compliance with the agreement. but "in truth and in fact, such compliance was not such sole alternative."

That is the answer of William Fox to the charge that he blocked the trusteeship agreement at a time when his "cabinet" was urging him to carry it out, as "essential to the future welfare" of his enterprises. It is contained in his answer to suit of Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser, Class B stockholder of Fox Film, who filed complaint for a receivership, and stressed the "cabinet" letter as one of the important reasons why the receivership should be granted.

The co-trustees, Fox asserts, abrogated the agreement when they insisted upon the resignation of Jack Leo, vice-president of the company.

Signatories to the letter are: Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager; Saul E. Roger, vice-president and general counsel; James R. Grainger, general sales manager; Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager; JohnZanft, vice-president and general manager of Fox Theatres; Courtland Smith, general manager of Fox Movietone News. Smith has since severed his connection with the organization.

That Eastman Loan

Eastman Kodak loaned $6,300,000 to Fox Theatres and not to Fox Film, William Fox states in his answer in the Kuser action. This loan, the subject of considerable discussion throughout the trade, was secured prior to the execution of the trusteeship agreement, Fox avers.

The loan, it is said, explains Jules Brulatour's short-lived connection with Fox Securities Corp.

Pathe-RKO Deal Denied by Derr

Culver City—Sole link between Pathe and RKO is a 20-year franchise under terms of which RKO shows Pathe product, E. B. Derr, executive vice-president, declared in denying reports of possibility of a merger of the two companies.

With his production staff organized, Derr plans "Swing High" as initial picture under the new regime. The executive staff assisting Derr includes C. E. Sullivan, vice president, as general studio manager; H. C. Leavitt, studio superintendent; L. E. Clark, chief sound engineer; Carroll Clark, art director; Charles Richards, casting director; Josiah Zuro, music department head and Donn McElwaine, publicity director.

"Swing High" will feature Helen Twelvetrees and Fred Scott. Joseph Santley, co-author of the story, will direct.

Disposal of Houses in N. W. Is Continued by Publix

Minneapolis—Publix is continuing to close or dispose of losing houses in this territory. A number of theatres have been sold in recent weeks.

"I Told You So"

Under this broad heading, Sydney S. Cohen in this issue launches the first of a series of articles on exhibitor problems, past, present and future. Cohen headed the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for four terms. For two years he was chairman of its board of directors. Today, he is active in chain store development, farming and real estate, yet retains his long-championed identity as an unaffiliated exhibitor.

He speaks the language of the showman and analyzes their situation. His first article, which the editor anticipates will be of consequence to the exhibiting fraternity of the nation, appears on page 26, this issue.

Relatives Charge Assailed by Fox

Charges that his relatives were favored through contract and concessions are riddled by Fox in his answer to the Kuser receivership action.

Not a single theatre owned by Fox Film has been decorated by Mrs. Fox, he asserts, stating: "that the only theatres decorated under the direction of the wife of said William Fox are theatres belonging to Fox Theatres Corp.; that, in each instance in which a theatre of said Fox Theatres Corp. was decorated by the wife of said William Fox, competitive bids were secured and the contract awarded to the lowest bidder; that in connection with such decoration the wife of said William Fox in many cases spent her own money and utilized her own property, without compensation or reimbursement either for said money or property or for her said services."

Not a single candy concession in any of the firm's theatres has been granted to his brother, Fox continues, stating that for many years a certain corporation has held a candy concession in 12 theatres owned or controlled by the Fox Theatres Corp. out of 800 owned by the two firms and that his brother obtained a stock interest in this firm long after such concessions had been granted.

No commissions have been paid to agents upon the purchase by the Fox associated companies of theatre and other properties, "except such, and in such amounts, as would have been paid by any person, firm or corporation upon the acquisition of similar properties, and that in no case did said William Fox, or any member of his family receive any part of such commissions."

Neither Fox nor any of his relatives is interested in any concern which prints films for the company, Fox asserts, pointing that the company does its own printing in its own laboratories.

$30,000,000 Due April 1, Fox Says

Total amount of indebtedness of Fox Film that must be met on or before April 1 is $30,000,000, William Fox declares. This is to be done through refunding operations, sales of property and out of earnings. Since Jan. 1, 1930, he declares, net earnings have been at the rate of $400,000 per week.

Fox Denies Turning Over Assets to Securities Firm

No money has been borrowed by Fox Film from Fox Securities Corp., formed to sell $35,000,000 in gold notes, and no assets have been transferred, assigned to or pledged to the security firm, William Fox declares in his answer in the Kuser action.

Wesco Potential Annual Net Set at $5,500,000

Potential annual net of Wesco Corp., parent company of West Coast Theatres and Midwesco Corp., is $5,500,000, William Fox states. This estimate is after charges and depreciation, but before payment of taxes.

Fox Buys Centralia Site

Centralia, Wyo.—The previously announced Fox theatre will be built at Tower Ave. and Locust at a cost of $200,000.

In Good Faith

Purchases of theatre stock and properties both in the United States and England were "at reasonable prices and were designed to be and are of great advantage and benefit" to Fox Film, William Fox avers in his denial to the Kuser charge that purchases were made at exorbitant prices.

Fox Estimates Profits for 1930 at $13,573,000 His Affidavit Reveals

Fox Film Worth $65,005,000 On Jan. 21, 1930, Answer to Kuser Suit Claims

In answer to the action for receivership in equity filed by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser, owner of approximately one-fifth of the Class B, or voting stock, of Fox Film Corporation, William Fox has filed a lengthy affidavit in the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York.

In it, he outlines a number of hitherto undisclosed facts concerning the affairs of his company which, on the basis of Fox's statements, give a different complexion to many of the charges levelled by opposing interests.

The text of the affidavit follows:

"WILLIAM FOX," being duly sworn, deposes and says:

"I have been since the formation of the defendant corporation, and still am, its president.

"This affidavit is made by me in behalf of the defendant corporation in opposition to the motion by the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver for the defendant corporation.

"I hereby make part of this affidavit the verified answer interposed by the defendant in this action, and I hereby repeat all the allegations and denials contained in that answer with the same force and effect as if the same were here more fully set forth at length.

"I have read the verified bill filed by the plaintiff and the affidavits attached to the order to show cause in this action signed by the Honorable Frank J. Coleman on January 23, 1930. Instead of lengthening this affidavit by specifically denying the statements contained in the moving affidavits, I am relying upon the statements contained herein to constitute such denials wherever an issue of fact has been raised by the statements contained herein.

"About 1905, in association with various groups of persons, I began to lease or build theatres in the Greater City of New York for the exhibition of vaudeville and motion pictures. My original investment in this business was $1,600. These enterprises grew and the number increased from time to time.

"In 1913 I organized under the laws of New York a corporation known as Box Office Attractions Film Rental Co., Inc., to distribute motion pictures, the rights to which had been acquired from independent producers.

History of Company

"On February 1, 1915, Fox Film Corporation (hereinafter, for brevity, referred to as 'Film Corporation') was organized with a capitalization consisting of preferred stock of the aggregate par value of $500,000 and common stock of the aggregate par value of $1,000,000. The common stock was issued to me in consideration of the transfer of the assets of Box Office Attractions Film Rental Co., Inc., and certain distributing and other motion picture rights owned by me. The preferred stock was subscribed in cash by various individuals, and to these subscribers I gave as a bonus 50 per cent of the common stock of the Film Corporation.

"On June 17, 1919. the certificate of incorporation was further amended by changing stock was reduced to 100,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $10 each. The then outstanding preferred stock was at the same time redeemed at par.

"On July 31, 1922, the certificate of incorporation was further amended by changing the outstanding 100,000 shares of common stock to the par value of $10 to no-par value. On May 28, 1925, the authorized capital was further amended so that the then existing 100,000 shares of common stock, without par value, was reclassified as Class 'B' common stock, and an additional 900,000 shares of common stock without par value was authorized, which 900,000 shares was classified as Class 'A' common stock. Of the 100,000 shares of Class 'B' common stock 100 shares are in the treasury of said corporation, and 99.900 shares are issued and outstanding. Of this amount I personally own 50,101 shares.

Statement Describes Early History of Company and Stresses Its Record

"In November, 1925, Fox Theatres Corporation (hereinafter, for brevity, referred to as 'Theatres Corporation') was organized under the laws of New York, with an authorized capitalization of 4,000,000 shares of common stock, of which 3,900,000 shares are Class 'A' non-voting stock and 100,000 shares are Class 'B' voting stock. I became the owner of all the 100,000 shares of Class 'B' common stock.

"Some idea of the growth and history of the Film Corporation can be obtained by reference to the bulletin issued concerning the affairs of that corporation by Standard Statistics Company, Inc., a recognized authority for statistical information used by all the leading bankers and brokers, copies of which are annexed hereto, marked Exhibits A and B and made part hereof. The most recent of such bulletins, Exhibit B, revised under date of December 12, 1929, shows that the net earnings, before income taxes, of Film Corporation for the nine months ended September 30, 1929, were $9,605,000 compared with $4,384,200 for a like period in the year 1928; that the earnings per share, after taxes, were $9.61 for the first three quarters of 1929 against $5.23 for a like period in 1928. These statements as to the earnings of the defendant corporation are supported by the report of Touche, Niven and Co., auditors for the defendant corporation, whose profit and loss statement for the first nine months of 1929 is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit C and made part hereof.

Defines Current Position

"I am also annexing hereto as Exhibit D, and make the same a part of this affidavit, a consolidated balance sheet prepared by the same auditors for the defendant corporation, covering the defendant corporation and all wholly-owned subsidiary companies, which was prepared as of September 28, 1929, but has been revised to January 21, 1930, and shows the defendant corporation to have a net worth or equity of $65,005,000. It should be noted that this statement does not include accretion of net worth by reason of profits for the three months ended December 31, 1929, which are estimated at about three and one-half million dollars.

"I also have annexed hereto as Exhibit E, and make the same a part hereof, a statement prepared by Touche, Niven & Co., showing the estimated earnings of the defendant corporation for the year 1930 to be the sum of $13,573,000.

"I direct the court's attention to the fact that the consolidated balance sheet of the defendant corporation and of all subsidiary corporations as of December 29, 1928, which was the date about when I undertook negotiations for the acquisition of the Loew stock—shows that the corporation then had total assets of over $74,000,000 as against liabilities of less than $15,000,000, and had at that time a capital and surplus of over $59,000,000; that of its aforesaid liabilities over $6,000,000 was for current obligations. Its cash position on that date was as follows:

Call loans	5,700,000

"All of these statements as to the position of the defendant corporation on December 29, 1928, are confirmed by the bulletin of the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., Exhibit B annexed hereto.

New Financing Plan Removes Fox from Control, Affidavit Exhibit Indicates

William Fox will relinquish control of the companies bearing his name and make way for Lehman Brothers and Blair and Company, if financing now under way is consummated, as one group of stockholders, representing 40,000 shares of Fox Film Corporation stock, understand the current situation.

This group, part of the Kuser family, has voiced its opposition to a receivership, according to Exhibit K filed by William Fox in his affidavit fighting application of Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser for a receivership.

Details of the deal, or as this particular branch of the Kuser family understands them, at least, are tipped off in the following portion of a letter said to have been sent to Samuel Untermyer under date of January 24, 1930:

> "Two banking firms (Lehman and Co. and Blair and Co.) are contemplating financing the Fox Film Corporation and refunding its obligations on a substantial basis, provided they name five directors of the company, Mr. Fox to name two; the finance board to be in control of the bankers, they to name the treasurer and have charge of the financing functions of the company, Mr. Fox to have charge of the technical and production part of the business for which he has shown unusual aptitude."

A. T. and T., Through "Erpi," Helped Finance Fox Deal for Loew, Is Claim

$15,000,000 Loan Designed for That Purpose, Fox Affidavit Alleges

"In the latter part of 1928 or early in 1929 I became aware that 400,000 shares of the stock of Loew's, Inc., was available for purchase in one block. I discussed this matter with the directors of the defendant as well as with the directors of Theatres Corporation and pointed out to them the huge benefits which would result to both corporations if such stock were acquired by either one or both of the corporations. I found that these directors were wholly in accord with my views, and, with their knowledge, consent and approval, I commenced negotiations to acquire this stock. While these negotiations were pending I discussed the matter with Halsey, Stuart and Co., who had acted as the bankers for the defendant corporation in most of its public financing. I found that they were wholly in accord with my view. After a full discussion of the matter with all of these parties—and while the negotiations were still pending—it was decided that the stock should be acquired at the best price obtainable by Theatres Corporation.

Moves on Loew Deal

"In all these talks with the directors of both corporations and the bankers it was at all times understood that if these Loew shares were acquired we would ultimately endeavor to finance the cost thereof by a consolidation of the business or assets of the defendant, Theatres Corporation, and Loew's, Inc. The defendant, while not obligating itself to any extent whatsoever for the purchase of the Loew stock, would reap a huge benefit therefrom, by reason of the fact that the Loew Company controlled a chain of approximately 200 theatres in which it would be possible to exhibit the films produced by the defendant corporation, thereby increasing the income of the defendant corporation for film rentals by a very substantial amount.

"It was with this in view and to avoid duplications and overhead charges that the defendant pledged its credit to the extent of $17,000,000—to obtain funds which it loaned to the Theatres Corporation in order to assist the latter to acquire the Loew stock.

Anticipated $50,000,000 Earnings

"It was also estimated by all the parties that, if a consolidation of the three companies could be worked out as planned, there would be effected economies in operation—which would otherwise be duplicated by the defendant and Loew's, Inc.—which would amount to approximately $17,000,000 a year. It was estimated by all the parties at this time that, with the economies that could be thus effected under a plan of consolidation, the net earnings of the three companies, as indicated by their then earnings, would amount to approximately $50,000,000 a year. These figures have been fully confirmed by a recent checking of the earnings of the various corporations and by a scientific estimate of the economies that could be readily introduced and effected under a plan of consolidation.

"The character of Loew's, Inc., the history, development and nature of its business are shown in the bulletin issued by Standard Statistics Company, Inc., a copy of which is annexed hereto marked Exhibit F and made part hereof. A fair estimate of the true value of the stock of Loew's Inc., which we were contemplating purchasing, together with the stock of that corporation which was later purchased, as hereinafter set forth, may be gathered from an examination of that bulletin, Exhibit F, together with the fact, as I am informed by the officers and directors of Loew's, Inc., that its net earnings for the quarterly period ending November 30, 1929, were approximately $3,100,000.

Saw No Legal Obstacles

"Before we had definitely decided to conclude these negotiations for the purchase of the Loew stock, we caused an investigation to be made by counsel of the possible legal objections that might arise in connection with the plan to consolidate the three companies as aforesaid, and were advised that there was no legal objection thereto and that a plan of consolidation could be effectively worked out that would not violate any law.

"After the legal department of the defendant corporation had so advised us, we considered carefully the method by which the moneys should be raised to finance that purchase. Late in February I discussed the matter with the Electrical Research Products, Inc., a corporation engaged in the licensing and furnishing of equipment to producers and exhibitors of motion pictures and for the making and exhibiting of talk-motion pictures. This corporation is a subsidiary of the Western Electric Co., which is, in turn, a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. Prior to this time I had had extensive dealings with the Electrical Research Products, Inc. and my relations with them were entirely cordial. While these negotiations were pending I was given to understand that the 400,000 shares of Loew stock, out of a total outstanding issue of 1,363,993 shares, could be acquired for $50,000,000. Later, and while the negotiations were still pending, I was advised that three companies were bidding for the Loew stock and that $56,000,000 had been offered for the same block of stock by one of such competing companies.

Letters to "Erpi" Outlining Terms Filed in Court by William Fox

It was therefore in my judgment, and the judgment of my co-directors and Halsey, Stuart and Co., essential that the deal be completed as quickly as possible.

"The Electrical Research Products, Inc. agreed to loan the sum of $15,000,000 to enable the Loew stock to be acquired.

"This agreement will be found in two letters addressed by the defendant to Electrical Research Products, Inc., dated February 26, 1929, copies of which are annexed hereto marked Exhibits G and H and made part hereof, from which it appears that the Electrical Research Products, Inc. not only agreed to loan the $15,000,000, but also that, if it were found necessary or desirable, an aggregate sum of $30,000,000 par value of debentures, notes or other similar securities might be created, issued or sold in order to insure the acquisition of the Loew stock, and that such loan aggregating $30,000,000 should have priority over the loan made by Electrical Research Products, Inc. It was further agreed that the 400,000 shares of the Loew stock that were about to be purchased might be pledged as collateral security with bankers who would advance moneys to the Theatre Corporation in order to enable it to acquire the Loew stock.

"It was also part of the agreement of Electrical Research Products, Inc., that they should aid the defendant in its program of refinancing hereinafter referred to.

"It should also be noted that at this time Electrical Research Products, Inc. demanded and received, as a condition for the making of said loan of $15,000,000 releases of valid claims against it held by the defendant and by Fox Case Corporation, except only the rights of Fox Case Corporation under a certain license agreement dated May 10, 1928, made by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to Fox Case Corporation. Those releases were executed and delivered by the defendant and Fox Case Corporation at the

Troubles over Loew Financing, Illness, Stock Crash—Three Fox Bugaboos

Existing financial difficulties of the Fox companies are traceable to three direct causes in the words of William Fox, who outlines them in his affidavit filed to combat the receivership sought by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser. Here they are in Fox's own language:

"It was because of this chain of circumstances—first, the inability to complete the proposed Loew consolidation; second, the serious injury sustained by me in an automobile accident; and third, the financial debacle referred to (here reference is made to the stock crash of October and early November) that it became impossible to complete and carry into effect the program of refinancing which Halsey, Stuart and Company and Electrical Research Products, Inc., had conceived and approved, and which, in the judgment of all parties, would have permanently solved all the financial difficulties of the defendant and the theatres corporation and would have carried into effect the original idea of refinancing, which all of these parties contemplated prior to and at the time that the Loew stock was acquired and the commitment for the acquisition of the English theatres was given."

Fox Says He Planned to Combine His Companies with Loew's from Outset

time the loan of $15,000,000 was made by Electrical Research Products, Inc.

"While these negotiations were being carried on, we were also negotiating with Halsey, Stuart and Co., who were at all times kept fully informed of all negotiations for the acquisition of the Loew stock, and we had received their assurance that they would help us in financing the acquisition of such stock. In point of fact they loaned to the defendant $10,000,000 to enable the latter to acquire the Loew stock. This loan was unsecured except by the note of the defendant, and was repaid out of the proceeds of the sale of $12,000,000 of six percent gold notes of the defendant which were subsequently issued by the defendant and sold by Halsey, Stuart and Co. on or about April 1, 1929. A copy of the circular letter issued by Halsey, Stuart and Co. in connection with the sale of said issue is attached hereto marked Exhibit I and made part hereof. It will be noted that in Exhibit I special mention has been made of the fact that Theatres Corporation has acquired a substantial stock interest in Loew's Inc.

Cites Financing Deal

"It will therefore be seen that the initial purchase of 400,000 shares of Loew stock was accomplished not on my initiative alone but after conferences with the officers and directors of the defendant and of Theatres Corporation with the Electrical Research Products, Inc. and with Halsey, Stuart and Co. It was in its very nature a joint enterprise by the three parties named. Each of them had a particular interest in the acquisition by the Fox companies of the Loew stock and a particular and special interest to see to it that the Loew stock did not fall into the hands of interests that were inimical to the interests of the parties mentioned.

The following then appears underscored:

Both the Electrical Research Products, Inc., and Halsey, Stuart & Co., knew at the time that there were no means of repaying these loans out of earnings of the corporation and that a permanent funding and financing plan had to be adopted and carried out to enable Theatres Corporation to repay these loans.

"A reference to the Halsey, Stuart and Co. circular, Exhibit I, will show that their advance of $12,000,000 was a mere temporary expedient to be followed by permanent financing. It specifically provides as follows:

Saw No Legal Tangles

Before concluding negotiations for purchase of Loew stock, Fox Theatres Corporation was advised by counsel for Fox Film that no legal objections loomed to block the contemplated merger. Therefore, methods of financing the deal were taken up with "Erpi" and Halsey, Stuart and Co.

These are among statements made in the Fox affidavit.

Alleged Terms of Loan Agreement with "Erpi"

American Telephone and Telegraph Company money, via Electrical Research Products, Inc., helped finance purchase of the Loew stock by Fox Theatres Corporation, it is claimed in a letter outlining the terms of the arrangement with "Erpi" and included as Exhibit G in William Fox's affidavit filed in answer to the Kuser suit for a receivership in equity.

It had been reported since the Loew deal was launched that A. T. and T. was behind it, but Fox's letter is the first definite indication that these reports may have been correct. The alleged text follows:

Dear Sirs:

For value received, we hereby undertake and agree that we will not, nor will either of us, while a certain promissory note made by Fox Theatres Corporation to Fox Film Crporation, in the sum of $15,000,000, dated this day and endorsed and delivered by Fox Film Corporation to your order, or any part thereof shall remain outstanding and unpaid, issue or create any obligations which with other outstanding obligations, if any, shall have priority in payment over the said promissory note; except that if it is found desirable by us or either of us, an aggregate of $30,000,000 par value of debentures, notes or other similar securities may be issued with provisions for such priority, and except that in addition thereto, we or any of the affiliated Fox companies may pledge to others 400,000 shares of the common capital stock of Loew's Inc., about to be purchased, as collateral security for any borrowings they may desire to make upon such collateral.

"The proceeds of this note issue will be used to reimburse the treasury of the company for expenditures made by it in anticipation of more permanent financing, through the issuance of additional capital stock or otherwise, of certain matured projects which it is contemplated will be effected before the maturing of these notes.

"The purchase of the Loew stock became at once known to the public and the Court's attention is expressly drawn to the fact that Standard Statistics Co., Inc., in its bulletin issued on Loew's Inc., copy of which is annexed hereto marked Exhibit J and made part hereof, stated as follows:

"On March 4, 1929, announcement was made by William Fox, president of Fox Theatres Corporation that that company had purchased a substantial block of common stock of Loew's Incorporated. The shares purchased were formerly held by the widow and family of Marcus Loew, and by a group intimately associated with management of Loew's which are believed to represent control. Price was reported to have been between $120 and $125 a share in cash.

"It was a matter of common knowledge and was known to all stockholders of the defendant and Theatres Corporation who manifested any interest whatsoever in the affairs of the companies and was a matter of wide newspaper and public comment. The market letters issued by the members of the New York Stock Exchange issuing such letters contained almost daily comment upon the fact that a substantial block of the Loew stock had been acquired by the Theatres Corporation. It was hailed generally as a coup d'etat and the enormous profits and benefits to be derived by the consolidation of these three reorganizations was immediately recognized by all persons interested in any way in the situation.

Explains Additional Stock Buys

"After the purchase of this block of 400,000 shares of the Loew stock by Theatres Corporation, and because of the tremendously favorable comment that had been excited by the transaction, it was suggested by Halsey, Stuart and Co. that it would be advisable to fortify the position of the Theatres Corporation by acquiring an additional amount of the Loew stock. The block of 400,000 shares that had been acquired was somewhat less than one-third of the total issue of the Loew stock and it was felt that this was an insufficient amount to protect the interests of the Theatres Corporation. I was personally urged by Halsey, Stuart and Co. that it would be to the best interests of the Theatres Corporation to have interests, with whom we could work in harmony, acquire an additional amount of the Loew stock in the open market. Halsey, Stuart and Co. advised me that it would be dangerous to attempt to carry out the proposed plan of consolidation of the three companies unless we could have such friendly interests acquire a more substantial amount of the Loew stock. Acting on this advice and at the insistence of Halsey, Stuart and Co., additional purchases of the Loew stock were made in the open market. So as to prevent general knowledge of the plan becoming public on the stock market, such additional shares of Loew stock were purchased in individual names. In that manner there were acquired 260,990 shares of the Loew stock.

"An attack has been made upon the acquisition of the Loew stock by reason of the price paid therefor. It is claimed that an exorbitant price was paid for the stock, in view of the fact that it was selling on the New York Stock Exchange for a much lower price at or about the time that it was acquired. It requires little financial acumen to recognize the fact that so substantial a block of stock could not have been acquired in the open market for the price at which it was then being quoted in the open market; nor, in the judgment of those who were aiding us in the effort to acquire the stock, could it have been acquired in the open market at anything like the price which was actually paid for it. The price paid for the stock is fully justified upon the record of the Loew Company reflected in the bulletin of the Standard Statistics Co., Inc., Exhibit F annexed hereto. The price paid is further justified by reason of the fact that the proposed plan of consolidation would effect economies estimated at about $17,000,000 a year, so that the earnings that would be derived by the Theatres Corporation would be greatly enhanced. The judgment of the defendant, Theatres Corporation, its officers, directors and bankers who assisted in the purchase of the Loew stock is further justified by the fact that as previously stated the earnings of Loew's, Inc., for the quarterly period ending November 30, 1929, without having effected the consolidation contemplated, amounted to approximately $3,100,000 or at the rate of over $9 per annum per share.

Hits Kuser Action

"From the moving affidavits in support of the motion for a receiver it appears by the affidavit of Russel E. Watson, the attorney representing this plaintiff in New Jersey, that since February 4, 1929, he has been in touch with me for the purpose of keeping himself advised as to the financial situation of the defendant and that he has communicated his information to his client. We must also assume that the plaintiff, who indicates in her affidavit and in the affidavit of her attorney that she was at all times vitally interested in the affairs of the defendant, kept herself informed of the business transactions of the defendant. Nowhere, however, in the moving papers is there any statement or claim that the plaintiff at any time objected to the acquisition of the Loew stock or protested that the stock had been acquired. As a matter of fact, no such complaint was ever made to me by the plaintiff, or by anyone else in her behalf.

"I wish to direct attention to the fact that the stock owned by the plaintiff in the defendant, individually and as executrix, consists of 19,150 shares of the B stock, as alleged in her bill of complaint, and came to her from the estate of her late husband, Colonel Anthony R. Kuser. He was one of the persons who purchased preferred stock of the defendant corporation when it was first formed in 1915, investing at that time $200,000, for which he received 40 percent of the preferred stock and 20 percent of the common stock. His investment was repaid to him in about two years and thereafter he made a large fortune, as a result of his original investment, amounting, as we estimate it, to over five million dollars. He was from the time of the formation of the defendant and up to the time of his death one of my staunchest friends and one of the best friends and advisers of the corporation.

"The remaining stock of the defendant corporation, which was distributed through the estate of the late Colonel Kuser, has come into the hands of a large number of the members of his family, all of whom have signed a letter dated January 24, 1930, addressed to the attorney for the defendant, copy of which is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit K and made part hereof, indicating that such persons owning about 40,000 shares of the stock of the defendant, are opposed to the application for a receivership being made by this plaintiff and are opposed to the institution and prosecution of this action. Although the plaintiff states in her bill of complaint that she is bringing this suit on behalf of other stockholders of the defendant corporation, and although the action had wide publicity, neither she nor her attorney has up to this time indicated that they have obtained the consent of any other owners of stock of the defendant corporation to the institution or prosecution of this action.

$30,000,000 Was "Erpi" Pledge, Affidavit Says

So interested were "Erpi" and Halsey, Stuart and Company in seeing that the Loew stock did not fall into the hands of unnamed but "inimical" interests that they jointly made arrangements to finance stock purchase of that stock, "Erpi" to the extent of $30,000,000, William Fox alleges in his affidavit. The letter, Exhibit H reads as follows:

New York, N. Y.
February 26, 1929

Electrical Research Products, Inc.

New York City

Dear Sirs:

In consideration of your compliance with our request that you loan to Fox Film Corporation (of New York) the sum of $15,000,000, which sum in turn is to be loaned by Fox Film Corporation to Fox Theatres Corporation, and evidenced by a promissory note in said sum, dated this day, to be executed and delivered by Fox Theatres Corporation to the order of Fox Film Corporation, and thereupon endorsed by Fox Film Corporation to your order and delivered to you, we hereby agree as follows:

(1) To procure and deliver to you and your controlling and associated companies a release by William Fox, Fox Case Corporation and Fox Film Corporation, of and from any and all claims and demands against you and your controlling and associated companies, except the rights of Fox Case Corporation under a certain license agreement dated May 10, 1928, by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to said Fox Case Corporation.

(2) To procure from Fox Film Corporation and Fox Theatre Corporation an undertaking that neither of said companies will, while the said $15,000,000 note or any part thereof shall remain outstanding and unpaid, issue or create any obligations which with other outstanding obligations, if any, shall have priority in payment over the payment of the said $15,000,000 note, except that if it is found desirable by said companies, or either of them, an aggregate of $30,000,000 par value of debentures, notes or other similar securities, may be created, issued or sold with such priority, and except that in addition thereto the Fox Companies may pledge to others the 400,000 shares of Loew's Inc. common stock about to be purchased by them, as collateral security for any borrowings they may desire to make upon such collateral.

Says Gaumont British Deal Was Necessary as a Protective Move

"In connection with the acquisition of the said Loew stock by Theatres Corporation reference has been made in the complaint and moving affidavits to the fact that the acquisition of this stock constituted an illegal act, in violation of the statutes of the United States. In this connection, I wish to reiterate the statement hereinabove set forth that—before consummating negotiations for the acquisition of the initial block of Loew stock—I consulted with counsel, who assured me that a consolidation plan would be worked out between three corporations that would not be in violation of the law. Although a suit was recently started by the United States of America against this defendant, Theatres Corporation and me as defendants, in connection with the acquisition of the Loew stock, I respectfully beg leave to refer to the answers that have been interposed by all of the defendants in said action, copies of which will be submitted upon the argument of this motion. I respectfully ask leave to incorporate, as part of this affidavit, the facts set forth in said answers, all of which have been duly verified and are on file in this court in an action bearing number Equity Action 51-122.

"It has been charged in the bill of complaint and the moving papers that this defendant, acting through me, has contracted large obligations without consulting any of the persons who might be interested therein and without having in mind any means of financing such projects. Particular reference has been made to the fact that an agreement has been made by this defendant to acquire a large chain of theatres in England, representing a commitment of approximately $20,000,000, which it is claimed was done solely on my own initiative without the benefit of any advice or help of bankers or others interested in the defendant, and it is further charged that this commitment represented an improvident arrangement in behalf of the defendant.

"A short history of the negotiations for the acquisition of these properties will demonstrate that none of these charges is founded in fact.

Dealt with the Ostrers

"In the early part of May, 1929, I was in communication with Ostrer Brothers, who controlled the majority of stock of a corporation known as Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Limited, which controlled about 300 theatres in England. In the course of these negotiations I was advised and later confirmed the fact that, although there were 4,000 theatres in England engaged in the business of exhibiting motion pictures, the Gaumont theatres had gross receipts equal to about one-fourth of the entire gross receipts received by all theatres exhibiting motion pictures in England. This fact alone was largely instrumental in arousing our interest in the acquisition of these theatres. It must also be borne in mind that from the nature of the defendant's business, which is largely the production of motion pictures, its income is always largely enhanced by the acquisition of additional theatres, because of the revenue which it receives in film rentals. This additional revenue would not be earned otherwise by a corporation operating the same theatres which was not engaged in the actual production of motion pictures.

Claims "Erpi" Was Keen for Fox to Buy Gaumont to Avoid Patent Tangle

Otterson Fearful Equipment Sales Might Be Impaired in U. K., Fox Alleges

"The purchase of these English theatres was necessary for the protection of the defendant. When they were offered for sale the defendant was receiving film rentals from these theatres amounting to about $500,000 a year, which revenue might have been completely cut off or substantially reduced if the theatres had been sold to a competitor company. Since these theatres are the leading theatres in England unless the films of the defendant were exhibited in these theatres, it would be virtually impossible to sell the films for exhibition in other theatres in England, thereby impairing the earnings of the defendant, the income of the defendant in film rentals in England being at the rate of about $4,000,000 a year.

Fox's Story of G. B. Purchase

"I personally conducted negotiations with Ostrer Brothers, both of whom are residents of England, and who were here solely for the purpose of negotiating a deal for the sale of approximately 65 per cent of the outstanding stock of said Gaumont company. During all of the time that I conducted these negotiations with Ostrer Brothers while they were in New York City, I was in touch with Mr. Otterson of the Electrical Research Products Co., Inc., and Halsey, Stuart and Co. on this subject. We felt up to this time that Mr. Otterson was entirely friendly to the interests of the defendant and that he would give us his best advice in connection with this proposed transaction. We knew at this time that the Electrical Research Products, Inc., was having a great deal of serious patent litigation in Continental European countries in connection with the patents under which they were granting licenses for the reproduction of sound in connection with the exhibition of motion pictures, and that at about that time by a decree of a court in Germany they had been practically eliminated from the field of sound reproduction in Germany.

"We also knew that Mr. Otterson feared that he might have a similar difficulty in England, and that, if his company became involved in such patent litigation in England, it would create a condition where the theatre exhibitors of motion pictures would be unwilling to risk the hazard of purchasing equipment or a license to use the same and later find that, as a result of patent litigation, they could make no use of the said equipment. Under these circumstances, Mr. Otterson was particularly keen that we should acquire the theatres owned and controlled by the Gaumont Company, since we had an understanding with him that, if we did acquire these theatres, we would make some arrangement with the Electrical Research Products, Inc. to install their sound equipment in all of these three hundred or more theatres owned and controlled by the Gaumont company.

$20,000,000 for G. B.

Approximately $20,000,000 represented Fox Film's committment in the deal for Gaumont British, powerful English chain controlling about 300 theatres in number but about one fourth of the entire gross receipts of the British exhibition industry.

William Fox points this out in his affidavit, declaring he was prompted to make a deal for the acquisition to protect his company's annual $500,000 intake in rentals from that circuit. He states further this revenue might have been cut off or reduced if the chain had passed to competitors.

John E. Otterson, of Electrical Research Products, Inc., favored the deal in order to circumvent possible patent litigation which might have impaired his company's activities in England, according to Fox, who adds Halsey, Stuart and Co. likewise favored the deal. Otterson's attitude toward the deal is described by Fox as "exceedingly enthusiastic."

Holds 660,990 Shares of Loew's, Fox Says

On advice of Halsey, Stuart and Co. that it would be dangerous to attempt to carry out a proposed consolidation with Loew's "unless friendly interests acquire a more substantial amount of the Loew stock," 260,990 additional shares were bought, thus bringing the Fox holdings up to 660,990 shares. of the 1,363,993 shares outstanding. This additional stock was bought through individuals.

William Fox makes this statement in his affidavit filed in connection with the Kuser action for a receivership in equity.

"Mr. Otterson was therefore exceedingly enthusiastic about the proposed deal, and urged us to use every effort to make the same. I specifically discussed with him at that time the question of the method of financing this transaction, and he was convinced that the plan of refinancing that we had discussed at the time of the purchase of the Loew stock and which he and Stuart were then working upon could easily be worked out, so as to produce a sufficient amount of capital necessary to enable both corporations to finance both of these projects without any difficulty, as it doubtless would have been except for the reasons hereinafter set forth.

Says Bankers Endorsed Deal

"At this point I wish to point out that since the contract was made by the defendant corporation to acquire an interest in the theatres owned and controlled by the Gaumont company contracts have actually been made with Electrical Research Products, Inc., or its subsidiary for the installation of their equipment in these theatres, and a large number of such installations have actually been made. During all of this time I was also in touch with Halsey, Stuart and Co., concerning the negotiations that I was conducting looking toward the acquisition of the control of the theatres owned and controlled by the Gaumont company, and had their hearty approval and endorsement of the project. It appeared from the information which I had at the time, that the net profit earned by the Gaumont corporation in the operation of those theatres, after payment of preferred dividends and all other fixed and operating charges, would be in excess of $3,000,000 a year, and the deal which the defendant was to make was to yield it about 48 per cent of such profit, so that the profit to be derived by the defendant corporation from its acquisition of those theatres would be in excess of $1,500,000 a year.

Fox's Share of Big Chain's Profits Was to Be 48%, He Tells Court

"It should also be noted here that the future earnings of these theatres owned and controlled by the Gaumont company had far greater possibilities than that indicated by its then earnings. It was then operating these theatres for the exhibition of silent motion pictures under contracts for the rental of such silent motion pictures which it had previously made and which, as I then understood, were to expire in February, 1930.

What Fox Looked for

"The experience of the defendant in the operation of motion picture theatres indicated it would be advisable to equip these theatres for the exhibition of sound pictures, and this was done, although until February 1930, the theatres will be required to pay film rentals on the silent pictures which had been contracted for before the defendant acquired an interest in these theatres, which amount to approximately $30,000 to $35,000 a week. This obligation will shortly expire, and thereafter the earnings of the theatres will be greatly increased to that extent. All of these facts were fully explained to and known by the Electrical Research Products, Inc. and Halsey, Stuart and Co., both of whom, as indicated, expressed their elation at the prospect of the acquisition of these theatres by the defendant.

"It has been charged in the bill of complaint and moving papers that the defendant corporation purchased these British theatres on a basis of twenty-five times the earnings from said theatres. This is absolutely untrue, and, as indicated above, the purchase was made upon the basis of about thirteen times the then earnings of the theatres, but with possibilities which have been pointed out that indicated huge benefits that would accrue to the defendant.

"I now wish to demonstrate to the court, however, the ignorance and recklessness with which these charges of mismanagement and improvidence have been made by showing in the actual experience of the defendant corporation that in the acquisition of theatre properties the question of earnings is not and cannot possibly be the sole test of value. About May, 1928, the defendant acquired all the stock of Wesco Corporation, which owned or controlled the operations of

Secured Loew Stock at $125 a Share

Fox Theatres paid $125 a share for 400,000 shares of Loew stock, making a total of $50,000,000. This represented less than one third of the 1,363,993 shares of common outstanding.

Three other companies—unnamed—offered $56,000,000 for the same block. It was these competitive offers that prompted Fox to close the deal before the other offers could be acted upon.

William Fox divulges these inside angles on the biggest film deal on record in his affidavit wherein he opposes action for receivership filed by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser.

Intimates Otterson and Stuart Had Hidden Motive Behind Trustee Plan

Fox Claims Obligations Were Not Yet Due When Both Demanded Control

approximately 216 theatres and various other enterprises, including some stock in the First National Pictures, Inc., a film producing company. The total cost of that acquisition by the defendant corporation was about $20,570,000. At the time the defendant acquired the control of Wesco Corporation the proportion of the earnings of the various groups of theatres applicable to the interest of the defendant corporation therein were less than $1,000,000 per annum, the earnings for the year ended December 31, 1927, being approximately $906,000. At the time these theatres were acquired they were exhibiting silent pictures and had not yet been equipped with mechanical devices for the exhibition of sound pictures.

Fox's Story of G. B. Purchase

"The defendant assumed the management of these theatres about March, 1928, and for the year ended December 29, 1928, the net earnings of Wesco, after providing for all minority interests in the earnings, amounted to $631,581.24. In the year ended December 28, 1929, however, which was the first year in which the theatres had been managed for a full year by the defendant, and after the theatres had been equipped with sound, the net earnings after providing for all charges including Federal taxes have been conservatively estimated by our accountants to be $2,923,735.96. It also appears that a number of the Wesco Theatres were acquired during 1929. It has been estimated by our auditors that the earnings of these theatres for the full year of 1929, based upon their earnings while operated by Wesco, would increase the Wesco earnings to about $5,200,000 a year, before Federal taxes.

"At the time of the acquisition of the Wesco Corporation by the defendant, the former corporation owned or controlled about 29 per cent of the stock of First National Pictures, Inc., to which was added certain additional stock of First National Pictures, Inc., thereafter acquired by the defendant. This interest of the defendant in First National Pictures, Inc., was sold to Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., in October, 1929, at a price of $10,200,000. The original cost of all of the Wesco properties, including the stock of the First National Pictures, Inc., was about $20,570,000, of which $10,200,000 was received on the sale of the stock of the First National Pictures, Inc., so that the Wesco properties now stand the defendant about $10,000,000, plus commissions and taxes on the sale of the First National stock. As hereinafter indicated, various negotiations have been conducted for the sale of the Wesco properties at prices, which would have yielded a tremendous profit to the defendant on this transaction.

Unworried Over Halsey, Stuart

"Reference has been made in the bill of complaint and in the moving papers to an action which has been instituted against the defendant by Halsey, Stuart and Co., to recover the sum of about $268,000 by reason of an alleged default in the terms of the note issue of $12,000,000 underwritten by Halsey, Stuart and Co. Halsey, Stuart and Co., claim that the commitment of the defendant for the acquisition of the English theatres constitutes a violation of the indenture under which said notes were issued, and that they have, by reason of such default, elected to declare due and payable the notes issued by the defendant and held by them. This action has been instituted upon the ground of such alleged default, notwithstanding, that the English commitment was undertaken by the defendant, with the full knowledge, consent and approval of Halsey, Stuart and Co. I am advised by counsel for the defendant that the acts of Halsey, Stuart and Co., constitute a waiver and estoppel that would preclude them from taking advantage of the alleged default upon which they have based their action.

Paid $20,560,000 for Wesco, Is Fox Claim

All of the stock of the Wesco Corporation, which controls and operates 216 theatres in the West as well as "some stock" in the First National, cost Fox Film about $20,570,000 to acquire.

For the year ended December 29, 1928 Wesco's net earnings were $631,581 and for the year ended December 29, 1929, which is the first year of Fox management, $2,927,735. The latter is an estimate, but the figures are those supplied by William Fox.

"I have fully and fairly stated the facts in connection with the said action brought by Halsey, Stuart and Co. against this defendant to Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the defendant corporation, who resides at the Ambassador Hotel, 51st Street and Park Avenue, in the Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, who has advised me that the defendant has good and substantial defense to the said action upon the merits.

Found Consolidation Blocked

"While negotiating for the English theatres, a plan for the permanent refinancing of the defendant and Theatres Corporation had been tentatively prepared and submitted by Halsey, Stuart and Co., who had been working on it with Electrical Research Products, Inc., continuously from the time that the Loew stock had been acquired. We found it impossible, however, to proceed any further with such plan because of our inability to complete the proposed Loew consolidation.

"Many months were lost in endeavoring to straighten out the proposed Loew consolidation when on July 17, 1929, I met with a serious accident, which incapacitated me for about three months, during which time I was confined to a hospital for a substantial length of time and was thereafter confined to my home and bed for a further substantial period of time. All of this, of course, made it impossible for a period of over six months to work out the plan of consolidation with Loew's, Inc., which was an integral part of the plan of refinancing which had been proposed and drafted by Halsey, Stuart and Co.

"At the end of August, 1929, when I was again able to take up the problem, I continued my negotiations with Halsey, Stuart and Co. and Electrical Research Products, Inc., with the result that at about that time we had arrived at the general outlines of a proposed plan of refinancing and had agreed on many of the important details thereof. This is confirmed by the letter which the defendant was required to address and deliver to Halsey, Stuart and Co., dated August 30, 1929, a copy of which is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit L, and made a part hereof.

Says Financing Plan Was Set When Stock Deflation Made It Impossible

"Thereafter, and while all parties were endeavoring to work out the plan of refinancing which had been prepared by Halsey, Stuart and Co., there occurred a serious deflation in the values of all securities traded upon the New York Stock Exchange and in all other security markets, in the latter part of October and the early part of November, 1929.

Three Causes of Trouble

"It was because of this chain of circumstances—first, the inability to complete the proposed Loew consolidation; second, the serious injury sustained by me in an automobile accident; and third, the financial debacle referred to—that it became impossible to complete and carry into effect the program of refinancing which Halsey, Stuart and Co. and Electrical Research Products, Inc., had conceived and approved, and which, in the judgment of all parties, would have permanently solved all the financial difficulties of the defendant and the Theatres Corporation and would have carried into effect the original idea of refinancing, which all of these parties contemplated prior to and at the time that the Loew stock was acquired and the commitment for the acquisition of the English theatres was given.

"In November of 1929, although the obligation of the Theatres Corporation to Electrical Research Products, Inc., on which the defendant was liable only as endorser, did not fall due until February 26, 1930, and the Halsey, Stuart and Co., note issue of $12,000,000 did not fall due until April 1, 1930, the representatives of both of these creditors injected themselves into the situation and were demanding control of my personal voting shares for the alleged purpose of working out and carrying into effect a comprehensive plan of refinancing to solve the financial problems of both corporations.

The Night of November 23

"On Saturday evening, November 23, 1929, I met Mr. H. L. Stuart, of Halsey, Stuart and Co., at the Ambassador Hotel in New York City to discuss with him the defendant's financial situation. Mr. Otterson, of the Electrical Research Products, Inc., was present at the conference, which culminated in a proposal made by Mr. Otterson that I trustee my voting shares in the Film and Theatres Corporations for a period of five years to three trustees—one selected by Mr. Otterson, one selected by Mr. Stuart and the other selected by me; with the understanding that when the $15,000,000 due the Electrical Research Products, Inc., had been repaid, Mr. Otterson, or his nominee, would resign as a trustee in favor of a person to be selected by Mr. Stuart, so that for the balance of the period of the trust Mr. Stuart would have two votes and I would have one vote. Although no definite proposal was made by Mr. Otterson or Mr. Stuart at this time as to what they could or would do to help the situation if I consented to this trust arrangement, they gave me their assurance that, if I consented, they would see the defendant out of its financial difficulties.

"On Sunday afternoon, November 24th, I met Mr. Stuart and Mr. Otterson at the University Club, and I was then told that, in order to clarify the meaning of the trust agreement which they had suggested in our prior conference, they had prepared a memorandum showing the method by which this trust agreement was to be carried out. After some discussion as to the contents of this memorandum, I explained to them that I assumed that the provisions that were contained in the memorandum were the usual provisions contained in trust agreements and that I saw no objection thereto, but I felt it was my duty to consult with the executives of the defendant and advise them of what was happening, to make sure they would be satisfied to continue to work under such an arrangement.

Says Otterson Started Deal

"When I left Mr. Stuart and Mr. Otterson after this conference, it was understood Mr. Otterson was to see Mr. Adolph Zukor, the president of Paramount Famous Players Corporation, a competitor corporation of the defendant, for the purpose of selling to Mr. Zukor's corporation the Wesco properties owned by the defendant, concerning which Mr. Otterson and Mr. Zukor had been negotiating.

"On the same evening Mr. Otterson and Mr. Stuart called to see me at the Hotel Ambassador and Mr. Otterson, in the presence of Mr. Stuart and others said he felt he and Stuart could no longer continue in their efforts to aid the defendant, because they had just learned from Mr. Zukor that we had been secretly dealing with Warner Bros. on the sale of the Wesco properties while he, Mr. Otterson, was attempting to sell these properties to Mr. Zukor's company.

Fox Denies Secret Move

"At this point I wish to direct attention to the fact that Mr. Stuart had known since the night before that Mr. Greenfield was carrying on negotiations in behalf of the defendant with Warner Bros. for the sale of the Wesco properties since I had discussed fully with Mr. Stuart the night before and had explained to him in detail the reasons why such negotiations were being carried on by Mr. Greenfield. I also wish to direct attention to the fact that not only was there no basis to this accusation made by Mr. Otterson and Mr. Stuart that I had been dealing with Warner Brothers, secretly and without their knowledge, but that Warner Bros. in their negotiations with Mr. Greenfield, made it clear to him that they had an arrangement with Mr. Zukor that, regardless of which of the two might make the purchase of the Wesco properties, the one making the purchase would sell a half interest in the properties so purchased to the other. Nevertheless, after a very brief statement by Mr. Otterson, both he and Mr. Stuart stepped out of the room and returned a few minutes later, at which time Mr. Otterson stated that he and Mr. Stuart would no longer undertake to be of service to the defendant; that the defendant was then a bankrupt, and that they felt it was their duty at that time to preserve the interests of the defendant's creditors. They thereupon demanded that I execute and deliver to them an unqualified power of attorney covering all of my voting stock in both corporations, which they said would be used to protect the rights of creditors. This, of course, I declined to do.

Ultimatum from Otterson

"On the following day I was notified that Mr. Otterson wanted to see me. I saw him at 3:30 that afternoon and was asked by him whether I intended to accept his proposition that I deliver to him and Mr. Stuart an unqualified power of attorney of my voting shares. I advised him that, since they were purporting to act for the creditors, I felt it was my duty to take steps to protect the rights of the bond-holders, stockholders and creditors of the defendant and that I would retain counsel for that purpose. I arranged with them that matters should be kept in status quo by all parties until Tuesday, November 26th, when I would have my counsel get in touch with them. On Monday, November 25th I went with Mr. Benjamin Rease, whom I had previously retained to represent my interests and those of both corporations, to Mr. Charles E. Hughes and retained Mr. Hughes to act as counsel for me and for both corporations. Mr. Hughes agreed to have his firm act for the corporations and for me and promptly had one of his partners telephone Mr. Otterson and arrange for an immediate conference. In the meantime I had also retained Colonel Joseph Hartfield, of the firm of White & Case, to act as counsel for me and for both corporations and he participated in the conferences which were thereafter held. As a result of these conferences, the trust agreement referred to in the bill of complaint was executed on December 3, 1929. In the negotiations that preceded the signing of the trust agreement various understandings had been had between the parties as to the manner in which the trust was to be carried out. Among other things, it had been definitely agreed with my co-trustees that there should be no change in the management of the defendant and that the resignations of the various officers and directors would not be asked for except for the purpose of giving the trustees representation on the board of directors, it being specifically understood and agreed, however, that no resignation should be requested from me or from Mr. Jack Leo, a vice-president and director of the defendant, or from Mr. Winfield R. Sheehan, a vice-president and director of the defendant.

Fight Over Leo

Insistence that Jack G. Leo, vice-president of Fox Film Corporation and a brother-in-law of Wiliam Fox, resign despite what is claimed was a definite understanding to the contrary is cited by Fox as one of the important factors which led him to question the good faith of John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart, two of the three of the original trusteeship committee of which Fox was the third member.

He says the other trustees insisted upon Leo's resignation "because of his close personal relationship and loyalty to me."

Differences Over Leo

"As soon as the trust agreement had been executed, I was advised by my then counsel that my co-trustees had demanded the resignation of Mr. Jack Leo, as a vice-president and director of the defendant. This was clearly in violation of the terms of the understanding had between us at the time of the signing of the trust agreement. My counsel advised my co-trustees that they had agreed not to ask for the resignation of Mr. Leo as an officer and director of the defendant, but they stated they had no recollection of ever having given any such consent, but they did remember that at the time of the signing of the trust agreement I had made a request that Mr. Leo's resignation be not asked for and that they had not objected to that. They claimed, however, that they had not specifically given their consent. My counsel directed their attention to the fact that, in a written memorandum that they had prepared covering the matters which transpired at the time the trust agreement had been executed, they had clearly noted the fact that I had made such a request concerning Mr. Leo and that my co-trustees had assented thereto. Notwithstanding this fact, my co-trustees insisted upon his, Leo's resignation.

Fox Claims Breach of Faith

"On Sunday, December 8, 1929, when my then counsel told me of the request for Leo's resignation, I became ill and went to my home at Woodmere, Long Island, where I remained seriously ill, confined to my bed, for about a week. While I was so confined to my bed I received reports from my wife, with whom certain of the executives of the defendant had communicated, that my co-trustees were engaged in revamping the entire executive personnel of the defendant. I was informed, amongst other things, that they had brought Mr. Franklin, the general manager of the Wesco Theatres, to New York from his office in California, and I understand that he arrived in New York City on Monday, December 9, 1929, so that he must have been sent for by my co-trustees within a day or two after the trust agreement had been executed. This was done by my co-trustees without my knowledge or consent, although I was in constant touch with them for three or four days after the trust agreement was executed. I was told that my co-trustees, without my knowledge or consent, had arranged that Mr. Franklin should be elected as the president of Theatres Corporation at a salary of $150,000 a year, and, in addition, he should be paid five percent of the net profits of the theatres operated by Theatres Corporation and ten percent of the net profits of the theatres operated by this defendant. I wish to point out that this position was being offered to Mr. Franklin at this salary although

Sought to Depose Him as President Fox Charges in Attack On Trustees

Advances This as One Reason for Decision to Oppose Otterson and Stuart

I had served as the president of Theatres Corporation for years without any salary or other compensation.

"During the time I was confined to bed I was unable to see anybody until Friday, December 13th, when I sent for and was called upon by my then counsel. I was advised my co-trustees were then willing to withdraw their request for Mr. Leo's resignation. At that visit I advised counsel that I expected to be able to leave my home on the following day and asked him to arrange for a conference with my co-trustees or their counsel for some time on Saturday evening. Such a conference was held on Saturday evening, December 14, 1929. There were present at that conference Colonel Hartfield, Mr. Benjamin Rease, Mr. Emanuel Newman, Mr. Jack Rubenstein and Mr. Dwight of the firm of Hughes, Schurman and Dwight, who were then acting as counsel for the trustees and who had transferred their allegiance from me to the trustees, but only after securing my full consent thereto.

Wanted Otterson Temporarily

"At this conference I advised the attorneys present, all of whom except Mr. Dwight were then acting for me and for the corporations, that they had omitted to include in the trust agreement a very vital provision that I had agreed upon with Mr. Stuart and Mr. Otterson in all of the talks we had prior to the execution of the trust agreement. In all these talks it was agreed between us that Mr. Otterson was to act as a trustee only until such time as the $15,000,000 due to Electrical Research Products, Inc., had been paid, and that, thereafter, he was to resign as a trustee in favor of a person to be selected by Halsey, Stuart and Co. This was to my mind a most important detail and I was very much disturbed about the fact that the trust agreement failed to include such a provision. It should be noted that, although the preparation of the trust agreement was carried on by the various attorneys for a number of days before the same was finally executed, the agreement was never submitted to me for my approval until the date it was signed, when it was casually shown me, so that I had no opportunity to study it and to note the fact that this vital provision had not been included. After a long discussion on the subject, Mr. Dwight, who was then acting as the counsel for the trustees, said he would refuse to advise my co-trustees to modify or revise the agreement or to deliver to me a letter containing the provision for Mr. Otterson's resignation such as I had requested. The conference then broke up and Mr. Dwight left while the others remained.

The Otterson Slant

John E. Otterson agreed to resign as a trustee as soon as the Fox indebtedness of $15,000,000 to "Erpi" had been paid, his post to be filled by a selection made by Halsey, Stuart and Co., William Fox claims.

When Hughes, Schurman and Dwight informed Fox they would refuse to suggest modification of the trusteeship agreement to so provide, Fox alleges, he began to question the good faith of both Otterson and Stuart. He further declares they planned to depose him as president, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary.

"As a result of the conversation that had taken place prior to the time Mr. Dwight left, it was the general impression that he would not deliver the letter which I had requested and there were then disclosed to me for the first time facts that had happened in connection with the conduct of my co-trustees and which up to that time had been withheld from me by my co-trustees. Among other things I ascertained that Mr. Stuart and Mr. Otterson had demanded the resignation of Mr. Leo, and that it was pointed out to them that in prior talks had with them over a period of weeks they had repeatedly stated that Mr. Leo was an able and valuable executive of the defendant whose services and experience were of great value to and should be retained by the defendant. They thereupon stated they did not believe it was wise to retain Mr. Leo, because there were a great many changes they intended to make and a great many things they intended to do, which Mr. Leo, if still connected with the defendant, because of his close personal relationship and loyalty to me, would promptly communicate to me. They were then asked what objection there could be to Mr. Leo's communicating such information to me, and they thereupon stated that there were a great many things which they intended to do, and which they believed they would find it necessary to do, which they did not wish me to know. I was also told at this time that Mr. Stuart and Mr. Otterson had definitely decided to depose me as president, notwithstanding our agreement to the contrary and the provisions of the trust agreement to the contrary; that Mr. Stuart, professing the greatest interest in my personal welfare, suggested I be told that I had better leave the country for about six months, because my co-trustees intended to do so many drastic things during that period that it would be impossible for me to suffer the humiliation that would be heaped upon me during that time.

The A. T. and T. Angle

Reported entrance of the electrics into the producing, distributing and exhibiting end of the business insofar as A. T. and T. is concerned at least was all set via the Fox deal for Loew's, the affidavit by William Fox now on record in the Federal Court, New York, intimates.

Fox states "Erpi," telephone subsidiary, had agreed to aid Fox Film in a program of refinancing necessary to complete that memorable deal and that as a condition of a $15,000,000 loan demanded and received release of valid claims against it held by Fox Film and Fox Case Corporations "except only the rights of Fox Case Corp. under a certain license agreement dated May 10, 1928, made by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to Fox Case Corp."

The Fox affidavit does not divulge the details of that "certain license agreement."

Withheld Important Facts, Fox Says in Telling Why He Fought Them

"It was only after I learned these facts that I definitely decided it would be dangerous for me to continue working with my co-trustees under the terms of an agreement, the letter and spirit of which they had violated and intended to violate in every respect, from the moment that the ink was dry on the agreement.

"The attempt of the plaintiff in her bill of complaint and moving affidavits to create the impression that I was running out of an agreement that I had signed is an imposition upon this court and a vicious attack on my reputation. There was never a single thing done by me to violate the terms or spirit of that agreement, and any responsibility for the breaking down of the trusteeship must be borne solely by my co-trustees.

"In paragraph 18 of the moving affidavit of Mr. Otterson it is attempted to create the impression that a receivership of the defendant is necessary to prevent the defendant from losing its market for the sale of its film product because of the possibility of its inability to deliver next year's supply of film. In this connection I direct attention to the fact that there is in effect an agreement between all producers of motion picture films that no new film is offered to the theatre exhibitors until about June 15th in each year, and that the sales of film producing corporations are principally transacted in the months of July and August in each year.

Says Bankers Blocked Him

"During all of the time I had been negotiating with Stuart and Otterson and up to the time of the signing of the trust agreement on December 3, 1929, the defendant had attempted to interest outside capital in its financial problems. After the trust agreement had been executed and had been breached by my co-trustees the defendant again resumed its endeavors to interest outside capital in a comprehensive refinancing plan, but found it was unable to interest any banker or bankers or any private capital in such a plan. I have during this period personally communicated with every prominent bank and banking group in and about the City of New York and a large number of banking groups outside of the City of New York, but in practically each instance I have been advised before I was even permitted to outline the facts, that they would not undertake or be interested in any plan for refinancing either or both of the corporations.

"It has been charged in the bill of complaint that I have refused to interview banks or bankers in connection with such a program of refinancing because I did not wish to allow such banks or bankers to examine into the properties and books of account of these corporations. This is not only an absolute misstatement of fact but it is known by the plaintiff so to be. The plaintiff's New York attorney is the counsel for a large banking organization in the City of New York with whose president I have personally conferred on numerous occasions during the past three months in an endeavor to interest him or to get him to interest a group of banks or bankers in a program to refinance the corporations. In a number of instances where banks or bankers have indicated that they might be interested in refinancing the defendant corporations, I have not only furnished to them all data which I had available and which would be of interest to them in connection with such a plan, but have also permitted their accountants to examine into the books of account and records and reports of both corporations.

Lawyers Switch

Tells of Banking Plans

"Notwithstanding the present financial market conditions and the difficulties with which the defendant and Theatres Corporation have been surrounded because of the pressing claims of creditors and the bringing of these actions for a receivership of this defendant, the defendant and Theatres Corporation have been able to interest three large banking institutions located in the City of New York in preparing a comprehensive plan for the permanent refinancing of both corporations.

"While I do not wish the court to infer that these banking institutions have definitely committed themselves to carry through a program of refinancing in behalf of these corporations, they have made it very clear to me in my negotiations with them that they are interested in working upon such a plan and that, if satisfactory arrangements could be made, they would be willing to undertake the same. The conditions which they have outlined to me that they would require in order to undertake such a plan are generally satisfactory to the Board of Directors of the defendant and to me personally, and, so far as I have been able to ascertain, would be entirely satisfactory to the other stockholders, creditors and noteholders of the defendant.

Believes Financing Is Set

"I am advised that my attorneys have stated these facts in open court upon the application for an order to show cause for the appointment of a receiver in this action, but that, notwithstanding these statements, the plaintiff herein and other attorneys representing creditors and other stockholders have refused to consent to an extension of time which would permit the defendant to work out such a plan. Nevertheless, I have continued my negotiations with these bankers and am more convinced than ever that a plan could be worked out which would be agreeable to all parties, upon conditions which would be acceptable to all parties concerned.

Fox Film Computes Profits for 1930 At $13,573,000; Highest on Record

Fox Film Corporation, now returning net profit at a faster rate than ever before in its corporate history, expects to top all previous records in 1930 with a net of $13,573,000. This is an earnings forecast prepared by Touche, Niven and Company and included in an affidavit by William Fox, filed in answer to the Kuser suit for a receivership in equity.

The estimate is for the year ending December 27, 1930, and follows:

FOX FILM CORPORATION:
Estimated earnings for the year 1929 before Federal income taxes	$14,700,000.00
Less that portion belonging to Wesco Corp. included below....	3,500,000.00
Leaving estimated earnings before Federal income taxes of Fox Film Corp. alone for the year 1930 of.... (not including additional film rentals that the corporation expects to receive through the operation of additional theatres acquired during the year 1929)		$11,200,000.00
WESCO CORPORATION:
Estimate for the year 1930, based on 1929 earnings of theatres owned at the beginning of the year; and earnings of theatres acquired during the year resolved to an annual basis....		5,341,000.00
FOX CASE CORP investment, based on current operations—corporation's interest....		332,000.00
TOTAL income....		$16,873,000.00
LESS interest on $30,000,000 at 6%.... A substantial portion of interest has been absorbed in the 1929 figures of profit and loss, but in order to make ample provision for the interest charges for the year 1930, 6% on the total liabilities has been taken.		1,800,000.00
Net income, before Federal income taxes....		$15,073,000.00
Less Federal income taxes (estimated)....		1,500,000.00
NET income available for dividends....		$13,573,000.00

Note: The corporation will realize cash of approximately $1,750,000 in addition to the earnings above because of depreciation of all companies ,approximately $3,250,000) which is chargeable against earnings but not payable in cash, less sinking fund requirements (approximately $1,500,000) of the various bond issues.

Nothing is included in the above estimate in respect of earnings accruing to the corporation on its investment in the stock of Gaumont British Picture Corp., Ltd., nor in respect of additional film rentals the corporation expects to receive as a result of the operation of additional theatres acquired during the year 1929.

Asserts His Companies Are Entirely Solvent, But Admits Embarrassment

"To summarize the financial situation of the defendant, I wish to stress the following facts: That, prior to the time of the acquisition of the Loew stock, this corporation had virtually no obligations other than those contracted for in the normal operation of its business. It had an exceedingly strong cash and liquid position, and assets far in excess of its liabilities. It would be impossible to find an industrial corporation in this country whose balance sheet could reflect a financial condition better than that maintained by this corporation prior to the acquisition of the Loew stock. This statement is equally true of the financial condition of Theatres Corporation at or about the same time. Both of these statements are confirmed by the financial statements of Touche, Niven & Co., annexed hereto as Exhibits M and N. The acquisition of the Loew stock by Theatres Corporation represented an obligation of $73,000,000. The acquisition of the English theatres later in the year for which this defendant became obligated represented an obligation of approximately $20,000,000. So that, in these two transactions alone the both corporations became involved in obligations amounting to about $93,000,000. Notwithstanding this, and to confirm the fact which I have previously stated that the corporation is not in any financial difficulties but is simply suffering from a condition created by a chain of circumstances over which it has no control, I wish to cite the fact that the total obligations of the defendant and Theatres Corporations combined do not at the present time exceed the sum of $86,000,000. It becomes clear, therefore, that it is not mismanagement or improvidence that has brought about or even contributed to defendant's present financial conditions.

"WHEREFORE, the defendant respectfully asks that the motion be denied, with costs.

"(Sgd.) WILLIAM FOX."

Exhibit A

This is a voluminous report compiled by the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., and covering the financial position of the Fox Film Corporation as of December 31, 1928, and revised by this statistical service as of May 8, 1929.

"Fox Film Corporation and Fox Theatres Corporation, separately organized and operated but controlled by the same interests," it says in part, "together with Loew's, Inc. (including Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corp.), in which a dominant interest has been acquired recently by Fox Theatres, form together the largest amusement enterprise in the world."

The structure of Fox Film is described at length, the capital structure reviewed, and various comparative charts and financial statements embraced. Of the outlook, Standard Statistics Company, Inc., had this to say:

"Widely extended and varied character of this company's interests in the amusement field, aggressive policies of its controlling interest and recent large growth of earnings, together with a strong financial equipment and advantageous position for stock financing, all point to favorable prospects. Results for the year 1929 will reflect more fully the growing operations of Wesco Corporation subsidiaries, expansion in the talking picture field and rentals from important additions to the Fox Theatres chain. While Fox Film is not directly interested in Loew's, Inc., stock in that company being held by Fox Theatres, the Loew's theatres provide an additional market for certain Fox Film products, which, it is understood, will be mostly reflected in earnings after the middle of the year (referring to 1929)."

Exhibit B

A second bulletin issued by the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., under date of December 12, 1929, declares earnings of Fox Film Corporation for the nine months ended September 30, 1929, were $9,605,000 or on the basis of $9.61 a share as compared with $4,384,160, or $5.23 a share for the same period of 1928. Fox mentions these figures in his affidavit.

The earnings situation as viewed by this service, was held to be favorable, but dividend outlook uncertain "owing to inability to finance large current indebtedness through sale of stock of proposed new company." The bulletin states further the Otterson-Stuart-Fox trusteeship resulted "from fall in market value of stocks of various (Fox) companies, also lawsuits brought by Government and minority interests in Loew's, Inc., preventing consummation of plan to combine Fox Film, Fox Theatres and Loew's, Inc., through new holding company of which stock was to be sold to the public."

Exhibit C

Fox Film Corporation and subsidiary companies showed a net income of available for dividends of $8,725,955.41 for the nine months ended September 28, 1929, according to profit and loss statement prepared without audit by Touche, Niven and Co. and included in William Fox's lengthy affidavit filed in answer to Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser's suit seeking a receivership in equity.

Gross profit, according to this statement, was $9,692,876.64 for the period, without provision for Federal taxes which amounted to $966,921.23.

The profit and loss statement, as contained in the affidavit follows:

Exhibit D

The consolidated balance sheet as of September 28, 1929, but revised to January 21, 1930, and submitted in affidavit by Fox as Exhibit D, lists assets of Fox Film Corporation and wholly owned subsidiary companies of $139,267,000. In the action for a receivership in equity filed by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser, it was charged that while the assets totaled $139,267,000, quick assets were only $6,806,000, as against current liabilities of $12,699,000. Fox, in answer to the Kuser action, claims that the statement described as Exhibit D does not include accretion of net worth by reason of profits for the three months ended December 31, 1929, which he estimates at $3,500,000. This consolidated balance sheet, which was included in the Kuser bill of complaint, was published in full detail in MOTION PICTURE NEWS for January 25, 1930.

Exhibit E

According to an estimated earnings statement prepared by Touche, Niven and Company, earnings of Fox Film Corporation for 1930 are expected to total $13,573,000. This statement of future earnings which comprises Exhibit E places the 1929 earnings of the Wesco Corporation at $5,341,000. It is claimed that the estimate does not include profits accruing to Fox Film Corporation from its investment in the stock of Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Ltd., "nor in respect of additional film rentals the corporation expects to receive as a result of the operation of additional theatres acquired during the year 1929."

Exhibit F

This is a lengthy analysis of Loew's, Inc., prepared by the Standard Statistics Co., Inc., and dated January 4, 1930. The bulletin, at one point, reads as follows:

"Company has outstanding 148,400 shares no par $6.50 cumulative preferred (of 150,000 shares issued in December, 1927) and 1,355,129 shares no par common. Funded debt of the company and subsidiaries, August 31, 1929, was $39,006,600, parent company debt consisting of $12,694,000 15-year debentures 6s, due 1941. To and including the third quarter of 1929, the company paid regular dividends of $2 per annum on common from the final quarter of 1923 when dividends were resumed, after about two years' suspension; while holders received $1 extra in each of the years 1926 to 1928 inclusive, and a 25 per cent. stock dividend in 1928. The stock was placed on a regular $3 basis by the declaration of 75c quarterly, payable December 31, 1929, with an extra of 75c."

Under the general heading of "Outlook" the bulletin continues,

"Loew's, Inc., is in a strong competitive position, having its own producing subsidiary and also a large chain of theatres as an outlet. Policy has been to keep pace with new developments such as the talking motion picture, this in some cases involving displacement of a vaudeville program formerly accompanying

Exhibit I

This exhibit is a copy of a prospectus dated April 1, 1929, and issued by Halsey, Stuart and Company in connection with an issue of $12,000,000 in six per cent. gold notes on behalf of Fox Film Corporation. The purpose of the issue as outlined in the prospectus was as follows:

"The proceeds of this note issue will be used to reimburse the treasury of the company for expenditures made by it in anticipation of more permanent financing, through the issuance of additional capital stock, or otherwise, of certain major projects which it is contemplated will be effected before the maturity of these notes."

The notes, according to the prospectus, are due April 1, 1930. The prospectus continues further:

"As at February 23, 1929, the consolidated balance sheet of Fox Film Corporation and subsidiary companies, after giving effect to this financing as prepared by independent auditors, reveals net tangible assets of ap-

Theatre Operation Cost $24,381,320; Film Unit Maintenance, $6,737,399

Rentals of Fox Film Corporation for the nine months ended September 30, 1929, totaled $26,878,549; Fox Theatres Corporation, $27,091,215, while total income of both companies, with other sources of revenue, reached $57,108,135.

Operation of theatres for that period cost $24,381,320; film amortization was $10,773,042 and cost of maintaining the film company, $6,737,399. Total expenses were $46,719,467 and net income available for dividends, after deducting charges and Federal taxes, $8,725,955.

This insight into the financial status of one of the industry's largest and most far-flung companies is revealed in Exhibit C, one of the fourteen included in the affidavit filed by William Fox in opposing the equity receivership sought by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser. It was introduced to demonstrate the healthy financial condition of the Fox enterprises.

Lehmans Brought Into Fox Via Its Efforts, Class A Committee Asserts

Takes Credit for Move, Despite Fox's Newspaper Slam Against Wall Street—Continuing Activities

It was the Class A committee formed shortly after the Fox financial difficulties became known which interested Lehman Brothers, prominent Wall Street bankers, in a possible refinancing of the Fox companies, according to a circular letter now being distributed by that committee to holders of Class A stock.

This was done despite William Fox's biting newspaper attack on Wall Street, issued about the time Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser filed her action for a receivership in equity, according to T. S. Da Ponte, secretary of the committee.

The committee announces its intention of continuing activities "so that proper representation of the Class A stockholders is assured either under the plan of financing now being devised or, should it become necessary, in receivership."

The statement makes it clear that, in the opinion of this committee, a receivership is still within the realms of possibility.

Holders of Class A stock are asked to deposit their shares with the Commercial National Bank and Trust Company of 55 Wall Street so that the committee may be able "more fully and effectively to function." Beyond that, no reason is divulged.

Some Holdings to Be Sold, Fox Hint

Hint of impending sale of some of the Fox holdings to meet present indebtedness is contained in answer of William Fox to the Kuser receivership, stating that some of the assets "can be advantageously sold or disposed of without materially affecting the efficiency or integrity of the business of the defendant."

One Group of Kusers Opposes Receivership

Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser, who asserts she represents approximately one-fifth of the Class B, or voting stock of Fox Film Corporation, is on record with a bill of complaint in the Federal Court of New York seeking a receivership in equity for Fox Film Corporation, but some of her family apparently are not in sympathy with the move.

This is indicated in a letter addressed to Samuel Untermyer, attorney for William Fox, in which a group purporting to represent approximately 40,000 shares of stock, 12,000 of which are Class B favors an amicable settlement without recourse to receivership provided financing arrangements with Lehman Brothers and Blair and Company are carried out.

The letter is signed by John L. Kuser, estate of Mary D. Kuser. J. L. and M. D. Kuser, trustees; John L. Kuser, Jr.; Walter O. Kuser, R. Victor Kuser, Jr., R. E. Kuser, R. George Kuser, Frederick Kuser, by R. D. Kuser; and Frederick A. Kuser, Jr.

proximately $71,053,000, an amount equivalent to $5,921 per each $1,000 of notes, and net current assets of $18,843,000. The class A common stock of the company is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and has, based on current quotations, a market value in excess of $65,000,000."

Exhibit J

This is a bulletin issued by the Standard Statistics Company, Inc., dated January 4, 1930, in which reference is made to the acquisition of a substantial block of common stock of Loew's, Inc., by "William Fox, President of Fox Theatres Corp." The bulletin states that the purchase price was to have been between $120 and $125 a share in cash.

Fox quotes the bulletin to demonstrate that his purchase of the Loew stock was common knowledge, "a matter of wide newspaper and public comment." He says further, "it was hailed generally as a coup d'etat." Mrs. Kuser, in her bill of complaint, attacked the purchase of Loew's, Inc., stock at $125 a share when the stock, she averred, was selling in the open market at $70, the over-payment being $25,000,000, according to her assertions.

Exhibit K

This is a letter claimed to have been written by members of the Kuser family who are said to own about 40,000 shares of Fox Film Corporation stock. In it the signatories allegedly declare themselves opposed to receivership provided the financial plan advanced by Lehman Bros. and Blair and Company can be successfully carried out.

Exhibit L

A letter purported to have been sent to Halsey, Stuart and Co. by William Fox as president of Fox Theatres Corporation under date of August 30, 1929, and dealing with a financial plan to effect consolidation of Fox Theatres Corporation "and possibly its subsidiaries" with the Fox Film Corporation and Loew's, Inc.

Exhibit M

Bearing out his contention that prior to the time the Loew stock was acquired the Fox Film Corporation had virtually no obligations other than those contracted for in the normal operation of its business, Fox makes Exhibit M a balance sheet of the film company and wholly owned subsidiary companies for the year ending December 29, 1928. Among other interesting detail, the statement shows that $3,217,741 was paid in dividends and that earned surplus as of December 29, 1928, was $16,565,994.

Exhibit N

The consolidated balance sheet of Fox Theatres Corporation and wholly owned subsidiary companies as of October 28, 1928, which is the last annual statement available to date, claims assets of $64,112,727. Land, leaseholds, buildings, furniture, fixtures and equipment (net after depreciation and amortization) are computed as being worth $62,036,688. This statement, according to Fox, was prepared by Touche, Niven and Company and was introduced in his affidavit to further bear out the claim that the theatre corporation occupied "an exceedingly strong cash and liquid position."

$1,000,000 in Cash, Halsey, Stuart "Bit"

William Fox agreed to pay Halsey, Stuart and Company, bankers for many Fox enterprises, $1,000,000 in cash as their "end" for arranging the financing necessary to bring about a consolidation of Fox Film Corporation, Fox Theatres Corporation and Loew's, Inc.

This inside yarn is divulged in one of the fourteen exhibits attached to Fox's affidavit, now on file in the Federal Court in New York, as his defense against the granting of a receivership in equity sought by Mrs. Susie Dryden Kuser.

The arrangement with Halsey, Stuart is embodied in a letter alleged to have been written on August 30, 1929 and was designed as an addition to the compensation "which you may have derived from the discounts on securities which you have purchased and marketed."

Harry Stuart, with John E. Otterson as the second and Fox the third, is a member of the trusteeship committee originally formed to handle Fox affairs. It has not been functioning because Fox has refused to turn in resignations of the majority of his directors for replacement by representatives of "Erpi" and Halsey, Stuart. The latter has instituted suit to recover $268,000, alleging default in connection with its issue of $12,000,000 in one year gold notes.

Paid $10,200,000

Variously reported as ranging from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, Fox Film was paid exactly $10,200,000 by the Warners for its approximate 29 per cent interest in First National.

Wesco cost Fox Film $20,570,000, or with the money accruing from the sale of First National stock, roughly $10,000,000. It is understood that since the Fox financial situation became acute, the company had been made several offers of $20,000,000 for Wesco, or a profit of about $10,000,000 had decision been made to dispose of the circuit.

No Reason Seen Why Fox Receiver Can't Be Averted, Problem Solved

Assets and Earnings Held Sufficient to Assure Future If $50,000,000 Is Raised to Meet Immediate Needs

There should be no difficulty in working out a financing plan for Fox observes "The Wall St. Journal," pointing to the company's earning power to back up its viewpoint, in an analysis of the company's financial position based on the pro forma balance sheet as of Sept. 28, 1929, as submitted to the Federal Court in affidavit of William Fox. Around $50,000,000 of financing is declared needed.

"Of course, the situation is still full of complications," the newspaper reminds, "which will take a long while to straighten out. There seems to be no reason at present, however, for doubting that receivership will be averted and that the problems of the company will be eventually solved.

"Principal liabilities listed are $6,800,000 bank loans most of which are now probably due; $14,625,000 notes for the Gaumont theatres due on March 31, 1930; $12,000,000 Halsey Stuart 6% gold notes due April 1; and the $15,000,000 notes of Fox Theatres Corp. due to Western Electric Co., which were guaranteed by Fox Film Corp. and mature on February 26. This makes a total of about $49,000,000 obligations maturing within the next 60 days. Since the total bank loans have been stated in court to be around $10,000,000 the actual amount of financing might have to be larger although it is probable that with a financial reorganization under way a temporary financing of a small portion of the debt could be arranged.

"On the asset side Fox Film shows $19,700,000 investment in foreign associated corporations which obviously stands for the Gaumont Corp. On this investment there is due the $14,625,000 notes payable, making equity in the property about $5,000,000.

"Investments and advances to domestic associated companies stand at $17,454,000 and 'advances to associated corporations (notes receivable)' stand at $17,777,000. On this basis Fox apparently has advanced to Fox Theatres $35,231,000. This coupled with the $18,000,000 contingent liability on notes of Fox Theatres, again gives an idea of the funds which Fox Theatres received for the purchase of the Loew stock and other expansion. The total of these three obligations is $53,231,000, thus giving another check on the source of funds for the Loew purchase.

"In view of the current earning power of Fox Film Corp., reported as $14,700,000 for 1929 and estimated at $13,573,000 for 1930 after interest and charges for 1930, there should be no great difficulty in working out a financing plan.

Status of Loew Stock Obscure

"The company reveals only $1,425,000 cash out of a total of $22,564,000 current assets, of which $16,729,000 are film inventories less reserves and $3,410,000 accounts receivable. The $5,209,000 book profit from the sale of the minority interest in First National Pictures to Warner Bros. is carried, apparently, 'as a reserve for losses due to obsolescence of silent pictures.

"Little light is shown on the status of the Loew stock which was an important cause of the difficulties of the two Fox companies. The answers of Fox Film Corp. and Fox Theatres Corp. made in the government suit under the Clayton Act state that Fox Theatres Corp. purchased 437,500 shares of Loew stock and that Fox Film guaranteed a loan of $15,000,000 in connection with this obligation. This block of stock cost $125 a share or $54,687,500.

"In addition to this, Fox Theatres bought 223,400 additional shares making a total of 660,900 shares which cost an average of about $105 a share, making the total cost about $69,300,000. As far as can be traced the funds to pay for this came from the following source: $18,000,000 from Western Electric and other borrowers guaranteed by Fox Film; $12,000,000 from Fox Film gold notes sold by Fox Film and lent to Fox Theatres; around $10,000,000 in bank loans, and probably the $10,000,000 cash which Fox received from Warner for First National. This makes a total of $50,000,000.

"The Loew stock currently has a market value at 60 of about $40,000,000 whereas when it sold at 40 during the market break its market value was only about $28,400,000.

"To compute the effects of the present financial position on the common stocks of the two Fox companies is, of course, difficult.

"The income account attached to the affidavit shows estimated earnings of Fox Film for 1929, not including profits from the Wesco Corp., owning West Coast Theatres, amounting to $11,200,000. Earnings of West Coast, including new theatres acquired, are estimated for 1930 at $5,341,000 and total net of the Fox Film Co. for 1930 is estimated at $16,873,000. Deducting interest amounting to $1,800,000 on $30,000,000 and federal taxes leaves an estimated net for 1930 of $13,573,000 available for the 920,660 shares of common stock.

"This estimate is based on the rate of earnings shown by the constituent properties in 1929; and since other amusement companies are showing large gains this year it seems reasonable to expect that Fox will share in their prosperity. This estimate includes no income from the British Gaumont chain.

Of the $45,000,000 to $50,000,000 new financing, it seems probable that about $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 will be borne by Fox Theatres Corp. which probably can pay the interest from its own income, although it would have to be guaranteed by Fox Film Corp.

Possible Effect on Loew Dividend

"One interesting phase of the situation is the possible effect it may have on the current dividend on Loew's stock. Fox apparently paid about $69,300,000 for the Loew holdings on which interest charges at 6% would amount to over $4,000,000, whereas the stock pays $3 annually plus an extra of $1, making a total return of $4 a share or about $2,800,000.

The present difficulties of Fox make any immediate attempt to arrange a merger of the two companies by the exchange of stock improbable, so that if the Fox Theatres Corp. continues to retain its Loew holdings, it seems reasonable to expect that pressure will eventually be brought to bear on the Loew management to increase the dividend, especially in view of Loew's large current earnings, which are at the rate of over $10 a share."

In the Goods

A lady stockholder in the Fox Film Co. complains that "William Fox paid himself a salary of $150,000." If that's true, Mr. Fox, like a distinguished servant of the East India Company, must be amazed at his own moderation.

One company that he controls pays each of two managers three times $150,000. And moving picture stars hired by him get $150,000 for one picture.

Even humble newspaper employees get more than that modest $150,000 salary. It isn't what you are paid, but what you produce that counts."—Arthur Brisbane in "The N. Y. American."

"Men Without Women" Good, but Gruesome

Many New York newspaper critics, in reviewing "Men Without Women" (Fox) find in it material which will appeal generally to all men, but very few women. Its greatest dramatic punch, the undersea episode when a submarine is sunk by a trawler, proves too gruesome, they state, and for this reason women may turn thumbs down. From the standpoint of production, it equals the best, in their opinion:

American— . . . a gruesome piece of business . . . a man's picture with small appeal to femininity . . . audience appeared indifferent.

Daily Mirror—A grim and grizzly horror picture, well made, but primarily for the men . . .

Daily News— . . . Men audiences are going to enjoy every minute of the talkie. But the ladies—lots of 'em anyway—are bound to turn thumbs down. . . . a stark grim story . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . possesses a freshness of touch and of attitude that is particularly engaging . . . splendid portrayals . . . help enormously in making "Men Without Women" so gallant a photoplay.

Journal— . . . so well directed and acted and so different . . . that it sustains one's interest throughout . . .

Post—A courageous and powerful picture . . . had an astounding result. . . .

Sun—There can be nothing but admiration for the production . . . it is done with intelligence, vitality and reality. Yet, it . . . is a disappointment in that its plot framework is familiar . . .

Telegram— . . . an unusually realistic and effective picture and is hereby recommended as first rate entertainment.

Telegraph—Though doomed to almost certain commercial failure, "Men Without Women" is a truly fine picture and should be seen by intelligent moviegoers.

Times— . . . a stirring submarine drama . . . an absorbing pictorial study in which suitable comedy relief comes to the rescue of incisive dramatic interludes.

World (Evening)— . . . From beginning to end it is so convincing that it has all the earmarks of having been sketched from life.

World (Morning)— . . . represents the finest of the new year's dramatic productions . . . I advise it without qualification.

"Men Without Women" was branded "strong melodrama" by MOTION PICTURE NEWS in a review which appeared on Jan. 4.

Loew's Earnings Declared 50 Per Cent Ahead of '29

Gain of around 50 per cent over last year in net of Loew's will be shown for the 16 weeks to March 10. This will total $4,500,000, if present rate of earnings continues. Loew's apparently has not been affected by difficulty of the Fox enterprises, which are declared to own 43 per cent of the company.

M-G-M Net $1,737,471 for 12 Weeks to Nov. 22

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corp. reports for the 12 weeks ended Nov. 22, net of $1,737,471 after expenses, but before taxes, equivalent to $10.28 a share on the $4,566,682 7% cumulative preferred stock ($27 par) outstanding. This compares with $1,082,321 or $6.39 a share on the same share basis in the 12 weeks ended Nov. 18, 1928.

Default Judgment on Note Paid Off by Fox Film Corp.

Default judgment for $342,158 given the Public National Bank & Trust Co. prior to the court stay of two weeks on the receivership actions, has been paid by Fox Film, according to Robert P. Levis.

Cures for Sound Reproduction Ills Are Outlined by M-G-M Technicians

"The manager of the theatre, while visiting the exchange, mentioned that his sound-on film equipment had developed a bad buzzing noise which seemed to be getting worse. At his suggestion I visited the theatre and found that his trouble was due to the adjustment of the idler above the sound aperture. This caused a sprocket hum. Readjustment of the idler, however, promptly eliminated the trouble. The manager and projectionist became so much interested in our conversation respecting care and handling of sound equipment that I was urged to return to the theatre the next day, when they could give me more time. I did this the following afternoon, spending two hours in demonstrating the different methods of resynchronizing and making adjustments."

Back-Stage Echo

"This was a peculiar trip. I visited the theatre at the request of the owner and found that he was at home ill with a bad cold. His wife, who sells tickets, could not leave the booth to take me back-stage. Peculiarly, the faults which I discovered in the theatre seemed all to come from back-stage. There was a very decided echo which was very noticeable and annoying. I also discovered a bad pit condition and it was quite clear that the sound lacks definition from up front. The booth was well concreted and the equipment was functioning properly. I made what suggestions I could to the manager's wife, but as the owner would not be able to see me unless I waited for another day I was unable to talk to him."

Loss of Volume Corrected

"The occasion of my visit here was a statement by the manager that his sound quality was unsatisfactory. Upon inspection I found that what the house lacks is naturalness of tone, the definition being pretty good. The theatre has been fairly well treated for what originally were very bad acoustical conditions. I recommended boxing the speaker units to prevent loss of considerable volume back of the screen. There is also loss of high frequencies due to the low range of the pick-up arms and there is a tone waver which causes a sour note and which is very noticeable, this being due to a direct connection between the projector head and the disc plate."

"The power house does not supply an even volume of current at all times. This naturally causes a lessening of speed in the machine and a subsequent sour note on the disc plate. There was considerable side play in the arms which will be almost impossible to remedy. I suggested that the pit be draped, there being plenty of material on hand for this purpose, and felt that with proper tone arms and a good connection between the projector and disc, this house will have satisfactory sound."

Horn Overloaded

"Mr. Wood thought that his sound was very bad, but I found the condition not as serious as he imagined. The house condition was very fair, due to the theatre having been treated and to the construction being of wood. The chief trouble was occasioned by an over-load, resulting from the amplifier being capable of delivering considerably more wattage than the air column horn unit could carry. As a temporary expedient, I suggested the use of extra loud needles and the cutting down of fader volume. This gave just as much volume in the theatre but got away from the overload. It also had a tendency to minimize the barrelly effect and the over-mellowness which was produced by the low level pick-up arms."

Sound Going to Waste

"My call at the Tosca Theatre, in response to a request from Mr. Rudko, developed that much sound was escaping back stage and was causing reverberation because a part of the theatre behind the screen had not been treated. Peculiarly, the entire theatre had been completely celutexed with the exception of this back stage section. I suggested that the horns be boxed in (that is, the unit of the horn). This suggestion was due to the fact that it is a cheaper method than treating the back of the house and where the plan can be utilized almost anyone can box two horns in a half hour's time. I also suggested a simple method of draping the pit and I feel that when these changes have been made the sound will be as good as can be expected. There is no remedy more effective in cases of this description than plenty of drapes where such is possible. The pit always can be draped more or less profusedly. With the horns boxed and the drapes hung Mr. Rudko's difficulties should be overcome. Such procedure not only is effective but inexpensive."

An Enthusiastic Reception

"This situation had been discussed with the exhibitor at the exchange prior to my visit. From explanations which he had made I was quite certain what was causing part of his trouble. I was totally unprepared, however, for the reception which I received. Mr. Holland had evidently made mental notes of the work which I had previously indicated might be required and when I arrived at the theatre I found a force of men ready to make any improvements which inspection might demonstrate to be necessary. Here is what we did:

"Balanced and adjusted the tone arms. Boxed in the back of the horns with masonite, which was on hand, to minimize the amount of sound which was being lost back-stage. Raised and flared the horns. This stopped all sound loss and tended to throw it into the theatre where it belonged. Closed the ceiling ventilators with celutex. Ran several banners across the ceiling. Covered the pit. In addition to this, I also suggested that new pick-up arms be provided. This will further improve the sound very materially, as the present arms are not delivering over four thousand cycles at the most.

"Mr. Holland seemed to believe the sound and conditions had been very greatly improved. I was assured that the new tone arms would be ordered and was invited to return after they had been installed. This I shall do."

Dialogue Not Distinct

"I called at the Howard Theatre in response to a telephone conversation with Mr. Howard, who said that dialogue sequences were difficult to understand. An investigation developed that the principal cause of trouble was due to a tone arm which did not lie flat on the disc plate. This adjustment was very simple and tended largely to overcome the exhibitor's difficulty. I also suggesting cutting down the volume to get rid of some of the muffled and barrelly effect.

"In inspecting the house I discovered considerable echo coming from the pit in front of the stage. This is a very large hole in the front of the house and is entirely concrete. The theatre tone was too mellow and inspection of the speakers showed that one of them was delivering a much fuller and mellower quality than the other two. I suggested that if the exhibitor desired to get better definition he might temporarily cut out this third horn. He intends to experiment before making a decision."

Like a Massage Machine

"Mr. Ransom had complained to one of our salesmen about the quality of his sound and I made a trip to the theatre with the salesman. It was the same old story—over-weighted tone arms and a bad house condition. One of the machines can't be operated at a speed in excess of eighty-six feet per minute. Consequently, it is impossible to obtain wholly satisfactory results. Also, both machines vary two feet per minute with the result that music is almost invariably sour. The vibration reminded me of the mechanical devices for giving a Swedish massage. Also discovered that a trick type of hard needle was being used.

"I made some suggestions to help better the house conditions, explained the method of straightening and counterbalancing his tone arms and succeeded in helping matters considerably. As a result of demonstrations, the exhibitor gave orders for concreting his booth and for two new machines."

A Troublesome Case

"Mr. Snyder met me at the exchange and explained that he had been trying for several months to overcome a peculiar condition in his sound reproduction. He could not give me a definite idea of what the trouble was and my questions did not develop a satisfactory definition of his difficulties. As a consequence, I visited the theatre. When I arrived he was playing one of our pictures with which I was pretty familiar. I was actually surprised at the excellence of the reproduction. However, I understood what he had been trying to tell me the previous day when he took me to different spots in the theatre. In none of these places, however, was the sound really bad.

"At the end of the show I made a careful inspection of the auditorium and cold find no echo or reverberation. But I did discover a number of dead or partially dead spots. These were most noticeable from about the center to the back of the house. They were resulting from the fact that the horns were pointing to the opposite corners at the back, thus causing the beams to cross about one-quarter of the way from the stage and developing a comparatively dead spot from about the center of the house back to the rear.

Hours Solve Problem

"Normally, this difficulty would be easily overcome by redirecting the horns. This, however, was impossible in the present instance because the stage is so constructed and the screen is so set that there is only one place for the horns—at the sides of the screen, which, by the way, is not a sound screen. Two pillars are so located on the stage at the sides of the horns that the latter cannot be moved sufficiently to overcome the crossing which I have described. There was, however, a very little room available for moving, so that we could slightly change the place of crossing and thus somewhat reduce the dead area.

"The exhibitor had had numerous suggestions as to the best method of overcoming his difficulty and had practically decided to make a considerable investment in reconstruction. My suggestion was to install a sound screen. This would permit of the proper placing of the horns behind the screen. Mr. Snyder seemed very much pleased with this idea and I feel that my trip was well worth while."

Detroit Critics Give "Lummox" Big Send-Off

Detroit—Critics on the four local dailies sent "Lummox" over-the-top in their reviews of the United Artists picture which was world-premiered at the United Artists Theatre here. The Fannie Hurst story marked Herbert Brenon's entrance into the talker field and terminated an eight-year retirement of Winifred Westover. Both are given great plugs in the reviews, brief excerpts from which follow:

Daily— . . . directorial genius of Herbert Brenon and the poignant characterization . . . by Winifred Westover . . . unite to make "Lummox" . . . one of the finest things of the cinema. . . . It is a motion picture apart from any other yet produced.

Free Press— . . . a beautiful piece of work. . .

News— . . . certain to register with discriminating audiences. . . . a mighty fine talking picture. . . .

Times— . . . Women will love it. . . . Brenon . . . can feel proud of this picture. . . .

Detroit Mayor Helps Nolan Put Over "Lummox" Campaign

Detroit—Warren Nolan, of United Artists' home office, staged a real campaign for "Lummox" at the United Artists Theatre, culminating the plug on the steps of city hall, where Mayor Charles Bowles pushed a button which signaled the unreeling. A local newsreel was made of the event and 13 Publix-Kunsky houses screened the shots on the following night. The dailies ran stills.

Nolan sold "The Times" a Coast-to-Coast interview with Winifred Westover, in California, and Fannie Hurst in New York. The complete hookup, including the interview, was made in four minutes. All of Postal Telegraph Co.'s Detroit offices carried window displays showing telephoto messages from Miss Hurst, while Mayor Bowles' speech made on the theatre stage at the opening was plugged in Western Union fronts.

M-G-M Makes 3 Purchases; Davies May Appear in 'Rosalie'

Hollywood—With a heavy schedule outlined for the next several months, M-G-M officials are busy lining up story material. Recent purchases include rights to "Let Us Be Gay," current New York stage play; "Daybreak," novel by Dr. Arthur Schnitzler, and "Rosalie," Broadway musical comedy, which is being considered as a starring vehicle for Marion Davies.

Pizor Spikes Merger Rumors

Reports current in Wall St. circles crediting Rayart, Bray Prod., Peerless Pictures, and Capital Prod. Exporting Co. with merging to establish a large independent company, were spiked by William Pizor, head of Capital, who told a Motion Picture News representative that "his company was not interested in mergers and intended to function as an independent exporting and importing unit."

Nils Asther in Heavy Training to Down That Swedish Accent

Hollywood—Nils Asther, former M-G-M contract player who was headed for stardom previous to the advent of talkers, is not discouraged by handicaps presented by his Swedish accent. Asther is one of the group who found themselves shelved because of talkers, embarking on an intensive training course to overcome linguistual difficulties. He embarks on a personal appearance tour late this month, opening for Publix at the Michigan, Detroit, Feb. 21. During his tour, Asther will attempt to correct his accent.

Barthelmess Good, but His Film Disappoints

"Son of the Gods" (First National), from a production standpoint, does not match the abilities of Richard Barthelmess and Constance Bennett, New York critics state in their review, which give considerable praise to the work of both players, but little to the vehicle in which they appear. The reviews of Metropolitan critics are summed up in the following few lines:

American—Despite lavish production and fine characterizations . . . proves an unconvincing photoplay, which fails to rise above programme calibre . . . audience seemed restless.

Daily Mirror—An unusual drama, packed with interest, played with skill, produced with taste. First-rate entertainment. . . .

Daily News— . . . combined work of Barthelmess and Constance Bennett lends brilliance and allure to an only fair screen treatment. . . .

Graphic— . . . an old-fashioned dramatic plot distinguished by the star's excellent characterization and by splendid support from Constance Bennett. . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . just a fair magazine story translated into screen terms . . .

Journal— . . . It would . . . be very nice to be able to say that the picture matches the abilities of the people concerned in its making. . . .

Post—Except for one dramatically effective moment . . . "Son of the Gods" is a weak and unskillful drama, burdened with a good deal of pretentious moralizing . . .

Sun— . . . has very effective moments, but it winds up as something of a disappointment—a rather ambitious disappointment.

Telegram— . . . handsomely mounted and has been directed . . . with taste and intelligence. But despite its various virtues, it never quite comes off. . . .

Telegraph— . . . The story is seldom credible, and seems relatively unimportant even in its believable moments. Nevertheless, it makes a mildly interesting film, due to the splendid acting of Barthelmess and Miss Bennett.

Times—After a none too hopeful beginning, "Son of the Gods" plods its weary way through banal episodes, until the final happy fade-out. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . It has in it some infinitely praiseworthy work, but it also has its sleazy portions. . . . a "yes" and "no" picture. . . .

World (Morning)— . . . Barthelmess . . . is hardly equal to the task of bringing this exaggerated yarn to the point of credibility. . . .

Motion Picture News review of "Son of the Gods," appearing on paeg 74, in this week's issue, states that the Barthelmess picture "will rate with the classes and get over with the masses."

Ban on Children Under 14 Continued at Indianapolis

South Bend, Ind.—Theatre owners here have been refused their appeal to the board of health to permit children under 14 years old to attend performances. The board of health recently issued its ruling as a result of an epidemic of spinal meningitis as a precautionary measure. Although the epidemic in Indianapolis was much more severe, no ruling was made against theatre attendance.

"Sunny Side Up" Breaks Records at Milwaukee

Milwaukee.—There is perhaps no picture in recent months which has clicked better here than "Sunny Side Up."

After a five weeks' stay at Fox's Strand, downtown house, it was sent out to the five de luxe theatres. Not satisfied with breaking records at the Strand and packing them in for the five weeks, it proceeded to break all records at neighborhood theatres.

The de luxe houses played the picture to capacity crowds for three days. After ten days it was recalled to these theatres for a one day showing. Sunday was the day selected and again the picture played to capacity crowds.

Beaudine's Next Set

Hollywood.—William Beaudine will direct "At Bay" for First National as his next. Loretta Young will be featured in a part calling for a dual role. Beaudine recently completed "His Woman" for First National with cast including Monte Blue, Lila Lee, William Boyd, Betty Compson and William Janney.

Smith Again on Daniels' Story

Hollywood—Wallace Smith is writing the adaptation, continuity and dialogue for "Smooth as Satin," based on Bayard Veiller's stage play, "Chatterbox," the next Bebe Daniels vehicle. Smith wrote the adaptation and dialogue for the current Daniels feature, "Love Comes Along."

Grinde Remains with M-G-M

Los Angeles—Nick Grinde, now making "Good News," will continue on the M-G-M directorial staff, a new contract having been signed this week.

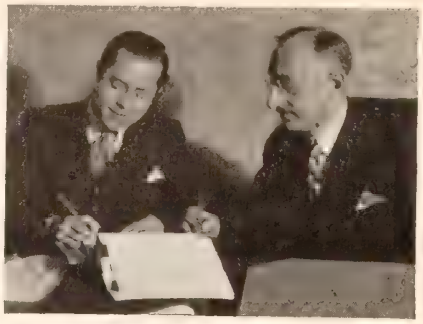
In the Money

Good old reliable Bill Powell. He usually comes through. "Street of Chance," his latest and his best—or very close to it—gives him plenty of chance to display his histrionics.

Based on the famous Rothstein murder mystery which has enjoyed national publicity, Powell here is "Natural Davis" in an interesting, well directed and well produced yarn of what goes on—sometimes—behind the bright lights of Broadway.

O.K.—very much so—for the box-office. It's an all-Powell show.

KANN



Joe Cook, musical comedy star, signing contract with Joe Brandt of Columbia to appear in talker version of "Rain and Shine." Designed to be one of the big ones on Columbia's program for 1930-31.

Much of Van Dine Lost in New Film

S. S. Van Dine's mystery thriller, "The Bishop Murder Case" (M-G-M) proved better reading material than screen fare, in the opinion of New York critics, who found many thrills in the talkie version, but not enough to compare it with the best-seller book. Highlights of their reviews, in brief form, follow:

American— . . . drama is sufficiently tense . . . but story dwarfs all else . . . audience liked it.

Daily Mirror—A dandy detective movie. Thrills, suspense and a half dozen beautiful homicides.

Daily News— . . . There is deeply thought out, intellectual crime in this one . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . a well acted and sensible version of the story and it is reasonably entertaining, but it does not prove to be anything better than the average of its school . . .

Journal— . . . neatly developed and provides its share of excitement.

Post— . . . there is no better entertainment than this type of picture . . .

Sun— . . . As a mystery talkie, . . . has a thrilling, up-to-the-minute gruesome and arresting idea. Therefore, it is . . . a pity that the production, writing, construction and atmosphere are not up to that idea.

Telegram— . . . a handsomely mounted picture. But . . . much of the horror and suspense that made the novel the best . . . of the Van Dine stories, has been lost.

Telegraph— . . . narrative moves forward-steadily from the start, builds up to any number of dramatic climaxes . . . and maintains interest and excitement throughout.

Times— . . . a film that sustains the interest . . .

World (Evening)— . . . something has been lost in its transition to the screen.

World (Morning)— . . . fair enough entertainment of its kind. . . .

"Audiences partial to murder mysteries will cling to their seats," MOTION PICTURE NEWS stated in its "Bishop Murder Case" review, which appeared in the issue of Nov. 16, 1929.

30 Minute Newsreel Shows Launched at Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Fox's Wisconsin is featuring special newsreel showings for a 30-minute period twice daily in addition to the regular program. These periods are being presented at noon and at 6 P.M., in addition to a midnight performance every Saturday night.

Milwaukee is the first city in the middle west to follow the lead of New York in placing special emphasis on the presentation of newsreels. The program will consist of a parade of Fox Movietone News and Hearst Metrotone News shots.

Kistler at Atlanta

Atlanta.—H. R. Kistler now is managing the Pathe branch here.

Stricter Censoring Plan at Portland

Portland, Ore.—Strict enforcement of the censorship ordinance this year is announced by Robert M. Mount, chairman. The board has notified the industry of the sort of pictures it does not approve. Mrs. Eleanor T. Colwell, secretary, reported that last year the censors had viewed 6,062,000 feet of film. Subjects numbered 1893, involved 6,062 reels. Eliminations were made in 13 subjects, six subjects involving 30 reels, were condemned, and the board held 63 regular sessions and five special ones.

The problem of talking pictures presented itself during the past year, making the censoring more difficult, as the picture either had to be passed or condemned, since eliminations would spoil the synchronization of the film and the sound, according to the annual report.

Ticket Trade Parley Slated on Feb. 25

Washington—Trade practices of manufacturers of roll and machine tickets for theaters will be discussed at a conference called by the Federal Trade Commission, to be held in Washington Feb. 25, with Chairman G. S. Ferguson, Jr., presiding.

Subjects proposed for discussion are: Interference with contracts, defamation of competitors, enticement of employees, price discrimination, secret rebates, discrimination in price by means of split shipments, delivery points, sales without mutuality, cost accounting, standardization and simplification, misbranding, discounts, and free service.

Epics Opens in Boston

Boston—Distribution of Talking Picture Epics in New England will be handled from 10 Piedmont St., in the Columbia exchange. Gerald Swaebe, formerly in charge of Pathe non-theatricals, is managing.

Finishes Duncan Story

Los Angeles—Joseph Franklin Poland's original for the Duncan sisters' new film musical was okayed by M-G-M chiefs and Poland is now at work on the adaptation and script.

Cut It Out

"Because the platoon of soldiers appearing in a talkie was forced to take 10,560 steps a day over a period of three weeks, a podiatrist is now in the payroll of the RKO studio in Hollywood," states a press agent's yarn.

Can you imagine what a tough gang of marching marines would do to one of those fancy podiatrists?

And how many $1,000 a week production supervisors were used to find out the number of steps walked by each RKO "soldier"? Perhaps there is a special stepiarist on the staff.

Myers Welcomes Ill. Unit to Allied

Welcome to the new Illinois independent association, which recently his organization, is expressed by Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n, in a letter to Aaron Saperstein, president of the new unit.

"From small beginnings Allied has grown until it now reaches into 33 states and includes in its membership practically all the exhibitor organizations worth considering," Myers said. "This is of the greatest help in our fight for the protection which the exhibitor must have, since it can no longer be said of us that we speak for only a minority of the theatre owners."

High School Study of Films Planned

High school students at Evanston have organized to make a study of pictures, getting regular scholastic credit for the work. Meanwhile, their elders are preparing for the annual Sunday show squabble to be resumed at the election in April.

Windy City Briefs

Henri Ellman of Tiffany returned recently from a ten-day tour of the exchanges in his district.

The Grand, an 850-seat house at Wheaton, Ill., formerly owned by Art Dernback, has become a Publix unit.

President Bachelor of Chesterfield Pictures, New York, was a visitor at Security offices recently.

H. Whelpley, manager of the Indiana, Terre Haute, was a visitor on Film Row last week.

The Gage Park has been purchased by Charles Schall. Formerly owned by Charles Smolka.

Alfred T. Mannon of Tec-Art found time to greet Chicago acquaintances while here, en route from New York to Los Angeles.

Security Pictures has added to its sales staff Milton Cohen, who will cover Indiana territory, and Jack Berry, who will combine the Illinois and Indiana territories.

"Hit the Deck," which has been filling the Woods Theatre for the past several weeks, is said to have done $2,500 a week better than "Rio Rita," which preceded it, Jack Hess reveals. A prominent advertising campaign in all local newspapers, fortified by some beguiling publicity, palpably is showing results.

Wabash Ave.—South

THESE paragraphs, it is hoped by their author at least, will serve to initiate a permanent weekly department to provide an amplifier for the voice of Wabash Avenue, so that it may be heard by anyone interested or by anyone with nothing better to do for the moment than listen. It may also be found helpful to persons who have tried, unsuccessfully, every other means of getting to sleep.

As this was our maiden venture along the Windy City's Film Row, it was suggested that we record the impressions of our first week of crashing the various offices to shake hands (not shakedown) the boys who reign along South Wabash. But, we had been warned that the Film Boys were tough: "Get smart with them and you'll be tossed up for grabs mighty quick."

We thought of the detective bureau squads and the desk sergeants around Chicago police stations who used to make passes at us as a routine morning exercise in the days when the world's wealthiest newspapers were paying us our unearned $25 per week. We thought of prohibition agents we had met (most of them now, happily, back at their old truck driving jobs) who would draw cannons as naturally as a horse draws flies in July. These and several other half hour eggs whom we had encountered were recalled and multiplied by nine, and with these pleasant thoughts we sauntered forth to meet our fate.

At Universal, we shook hands with Charlie Loewenberg, who offered us a cigarette and a chair. We accepted both, fearful of offending him. He might be hardboiled, we thought, looking at him. However, he explained later he had been in an automobile accident a few days before and had not yet fully recovered. In the same office we met, and liked, Henry Herbel, Walter Hyland, Charlie Ford.

We are being let down easily, it occurred to us then. He's introducing us to the normal, good-natured ones, first. The skull crackers are being saved for the last. They might appear in the next office or the one after that, and then all the rest would be like them—tough.

But we met Carl Lasserman and Tom Gilliam of First National; Phil Dunas just promoted to district manager by Columbia, and C. G. Wallace, new branch manager. Max Stahl and Sol Goldman of Educational; Felix Mendelsohn and F. A. Bartow of M-G-M, and Si Greiver. They were all a regular bunch of smart business men, not really hardboiled. Maybe this building is an exception, we thought. But we met others and saw that this was not so.

Up and down Wabash, in and out of offices we went, and added to our acquaintance Hal Young and Lee Verschuur of National Screen Service; Irving Mack of Filmack; C. H. Fulton and MacMillan of E. E. Fulton Co.; Eddie Grossman and Cres Smith of United Artists; Charlie Lindau, Steve Montgomery and Harold Wise of Tiffany; Sam Gorelick and Jack Hess of R-K-O; Clyde Eckhardt, Harold Loeb and Ernie Grohe of Fox; Tom North of Van Beuren at Pathe; Irving Mandel of Security; B. N. Judell, Earl Silverman and Reidy of Warner Bros.

And off the street we were made known to R. L. Campbell of Essaness Theatres; Jack Miller, Tess Heraty, Mr. Siegel and Miss Collins of the Exhibitors' Association; Edna Phfister of the Film Board of Trade; Fred Martin of De Forest; Ken Leach of Movie-Phone; Robinson of Carter Sound; D. H. Finke of Midwest Ticket, and at the meeting of the Illinois Independent Theatre Owners—President Saperstein, Al Steffes and H. M. Ritchie.

Somebody lied, we decided. If there are any yeggs in this business they've all left the chilblain belt for the winter, and in that case they'll be well softened by the tropical sun when they return. Our informant? A friend of mine. He works in the fire commissioner's office and has been inspecting the acoustical materials used in Chicago theatres lately. Maybe you know him. He wears a bandage over the left eye and his right arm is in a sling.

The rest of you we not only hope, but are anxious to meet as soon as possible. We want this department, first of all, to carry the news of Film Row, but we don't believe that all the news is on the station ramps where the big shots change cars for New York or Los Angeles. There's a lot of it in your own offices, at your finger tips, and we have to know you to get it.

KANE.

Thugs Fail to Daunt Operator

Chicago—George W. Krueger, owner of the Hinsdale, Hinsdale, Ill., continues to operate his own projection machine despite persuasions in the form of a slugging and shooting and the bombing of his theatre, directly attributed by Krueger's wife to the Operator's Union of Chicago.

When he entered the shipping room of the Paramount exchange to pick up his show here last week, Krueger was slugged with blackjacks and shot through the calf of one leg by three unidentified assailants who had entered by way of a rear door. Krueger was painfully, but not seriously, injured. Three days later, a bomb was exploded at the rear of his theater, terrorizing 300 patrons, most of them women and children. A panic is said to have been narrowly averted by the pastor of a nearby church and Mrs. Krueger, who reassured the stampeding persons.

Krueger states that competition in the suburbs has cut his receipts and he was obliged to discharge the operator in order to lower expenses.

Kane Joins News

Chicago—Sherwin A. Kane has taken over news representation in Chicago for Motion Picture News, at 910 South Michigan Ave. Kane is a veteran newspaperman having been associated with a number of Chicago papers. He formerly was on the staff of "The Hollywood News" and was film editor of "The Santa Monica (Cal.) Outlook."

Harry E. Holquist, is Chicago business representative for the News.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for Mr. and Mrs. Bob King, who are now celebrating their forty-fifth year of marital bliss. Bob started rhyming "kiss," "bliss" and "miss" in 1880 and since then has had over 500 songs published. Under the nom de plume of Mary Earle he wrote "Beautiful Ohio," which to date has sold over 4,000,000 copies.

WE know one songwriter that's tickled about the recent Warner-Austin deal, whereby Al Dubin remains with Warner Bros. His monicker is Joe Burke.

* * * *

LOUIS BERNSTEIN, president of Shapiro-Bernstein & Co. Inc., left for a four-week vacation to Palm Beach. Before leaving, he told us that business had picked up tremendously during the past month, and that the popular song is coming back strong.

THIS new song racket of selling 100 songs for five cents is without a doubt doing the music business a lot of harm. It seems that the various music song writers and publishers feel protective societies should find some way to rid the city of what they term a new form of bootleg.

IN Chicago, news stands have the slogan, "Buy two papers, one for yourself and one for the family." There's an idea for the music publishers. Why not adopt this slogan with a slight variation, to read, "Buy two copies, one for yourself and one for the guy across the hall who sings in the bathtub and don't know all the words."

Kill Him

One of the New York boys met a pal, noted for his heavy stock transactions, strolling down the main stem last Tuesday, the birthday of Charles Lindbergh, and remarked that "today should be a day of celebration for all of us, because Lindy is 28."

"Never mind," retorted the manipulator, "I haven't a share, and I'm not interested, but tell me, what did Warners open at."

Lobby Sales of M-G-M Music Banned by Edict of Sidney

Although the sales have proved highly profitable, music from M-G-M pictures, no longer will be sold in lobbies of Loew theatres, under an edict of Louis K. Sidney of Loew's, transmitted to J. J. Bregman, general manager of the Robbins Music Corp., publishers of M-G-M songs.

Sidney says he feels it wise to sacrifice the profits from sales of sheet music and records to maintain the goodwill of the Robbins firm in the music business. The Robbins firm, pointing out that music merchants generally believed that lobby sales seriously hurt their business hails Sidney's action as "the latest achievement in behalf of the dealer."

Coast Protection Trial Up March 5

Los Angeles — Resignation of Federal Judge Henning before whom the action was slated, led to postponement until March 5 of trial of the government's charges against West Coast and ten distributors for alleged violation of the anti-trust laws. The defendants are under indictment in connection with an alleged conspiracy to drive independent exhibitors out of business through long protection.

Arbitration Sentiment Strong in New York Territory

Sentiment in the New York territory is "overwhelmingly" in favor of arbitration, declares Louis Nizer, secretary of the New York Film Board. Exhibitors as well as distributors feel that they need the safeguard which arbitration provides, he declares. His office, continues Nizer, is in receipt of many communications from exhibitors asking for assistance in the fulfillment of contracts and wanting to know how they stand as a result of the Thacher decree. Nizer is co-operating with exhibitors in helping them solve their problems.

"Lost Zeppelin" Only Fair, Critics State

The best break accorded "The Lost Zeppelin" (Tiffany) by New York newspaper reviewers states the film is "fair," or "pretty good." "The World," however, claims "it is a realistic film drama," while, on the other, The "Sun" dubs it "one of the most bogus efforts on Broadway at the present time." Brief excerpts from the reviews follow:

Daily Mirror—Pretty good program movie. . . .

Daily News— . . . only fair talkie celluloid . . . you'll admire the air sequences.

Herald— . . . took more than a year to make. For our part it was a waste of time, because a film that takes a year to make . . . should be superlatively good, and "The Lost Zeppelin" fails to be that. It is, however, a fair program picture. . . .

Journal— . . a fair program picture. . . .

Post— . . . some good shots of the Zeppelin flying through a storm . . . the rest of the picture is trashy. . . .

Sun— . . . one of the most bogus efforts on Broadway at the present time. . . .

Telegraph— . . . an unconvincing and unoriginal tale . . . too artificial . . .

Times—Presumably the producers . . . do not believe in a very high order of intelligence among cinema audiences . . .

World (Evening)— . . . with a better story would be a very good picture, but the lack of a convincing plot takes away that "very."

World (Morning)— . . . an amazingly realistic film drama . . . recommended as an astonishingly effective reproduction of air travel . . .

MOTION PICTURE NEWS states "The Lost Zeppelin" will get over "as a popular priced attraction through its novelty and hokum," in a review appearing on page 75 of the current issue.

WITH many of the Broadway legitimates coming over to the Flatbush studios to appear in Vitaphone Varieties, Arthur Hurley, director, is renewing acquaintances with many whom he formerly directed for the speaking stage. Among the score who recently appeared for sketches under his direction are, Mary Phillips and Humphrey Bogart in "Broadway's Like That," Jessie Busley and Leni Stengel in "The Master Sweeper," Wallace Ford, Malcom Dunn and Thurston Hall in "Absent Minded" and the entire male cast in "The Bubble Party."

ALTHOUGH for the past thirty years foremost basso of the Metropolitan Opera House, Adam Didur, who made his Vitaphone debut in "Celeste Aida" with Giovanni Martinelli, at the Eastern Vitaphone studios, admitted being "just a little bit nervous."

MIKE AMES, who made a Vitaphone Variety last week, under Edmund Joseph's direction, is one of the cleverest female impersonators in the business. It seemed funny to hear the director addressing "her" with the appellation of "Mike."

DURING a pause in the shooting of "Young Man of Manhattan," featuring Claudette Colbert at the Paramount Long Island studios, Miss Colbert was in the way of the credit titles. Stepping aside, she stood on some of the net work of wiring and again was asked to move. With a smile she said "Pardon me for living," and ducked in behind the scenes where she was safe.

$267,000 Verdict in Texas Suit on Talker Promotion

Laredo, Tex.—John L. Dannelly and wife received damages to the sum of $267,000 in a suit brought by them against A. F. Bard of San Antonio, growing out of the promotion of the talking picture machine allegedly invented and patented by Allen Stowers. The verdict found Dannelly had been damaged by the action of other directors and stockholders and found that their stock in the Aleograph Co. was worth only $12 per share and their in the Photoaudigraph Co. was only worth $10 per share, and that their punitive damages amounted to $5,000.

New Daniels Film Far Below "Rio Rita"

RKO depends on Bebe Daniels' singing and her "captivating performance" to put "Love Comes Along" over, judging from reviews appearing in New York newspapers. The critics, generally, agree that it is a long way from "Rio Rita." Their opinions follow:

American— . . . pleasant entertainment . . . But it fails to attain greater dignity than what may be accorded a good program attraction. It doesn't make the grade as an extended run."

Daily Mirror— . . . Lloyd Hughes . . . and Bebe Daniels make a winning team . . .

Daily News— . . . story is slight but it has a certain amount of charm. . . . Depends on the songs and on Bebe's quite captivating performance to put it over . . .

Graphic— . . . without her (Bebe Daniels) it would be a mediocre program picture. . . .

Herald-Tribune—Save for Bebe Daniels' performance . . . it is an original and unconvincing romance studded with Miss Daniels' new-found voice . . . A long way from "Rio Rita" . . .

Journal— . . . would have been pretty mediocre without her (Bebe Daniels) . . . who warbles and wise-cracks, and does both expertly.

Telegram— . . . It is only because of her (Bebe Daniels') presence and her admirable singing voice that the present offering is at all bearable . . .

Telegraph— . . . not much of a help to the cause of cinema art . . . a trite and frequently tiresome story. . . .

Times— . . . Miss Daniels sings pleasantly enough in this photoplay, the only evident reason for its being. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . story is ineffective and hackneyed . . . doesn't measure up.

World (Morning)— . . . Bebe Daniels . . . sings her way through a satisfactorily diverting melodrama . . .

"'Love Comes Along' can stand with any in its appeal to the public," stated MOTION PICTURE NEWS in its review, which appeared on Dec. 21, 1929.

Bulgaria Likes Films

Sofia—Picture houses here are enjoying great popularity, the number of theatres having increased to 136 from 26 in 1926.

"Street of Chance," a Good Racketeer Yarn

Despite the abundance of Broadway racketeer-type stories which have found their way into films in recent weeks, New York newspaper reviewers accept "Street of Chance" (Paramount) as a "comfortable bit of entertainment," "exciting" and "authentic." There are a few dissenting voices, but, as a whole, the group gave the piece a good break. Their opinions, told briefly, follow:

American— . . . The audience was delighted. Every New York audience will follow suit.

Daily Mirror— . . . may not be a superlatively good underworld movie, but it certainly is entertaining, because of the polished performances of its principals.

Daily News— . . . a well-staged thrill drama which has the advantage of expert direction and exciting action scenes.

Graphic— . . . While the idea . . . has been used several times . . . it is strikingly presented here. . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . turns out to be excellent entertainment. . . . direction, writing and acting make "Street of Chance" a good melodrama.

Journal— . . . good screen entertainment. . . .

Post—Well written dialogue, expert direction and an intelligently handled story combine to make "Street of Chance" . . . exciting and entertaining. . . .

Sun— . . . John Cromwell . . . has fashioned a moving, affecting melodramatic tragedy. . . . a good picture.

Telegram— . . . an acceptable, well written, well performed, unimportant program picture. . . .

Telegraph— . . . no sentimental interest, no drama to speak of, and no entertainment value. . . .

Times— . . . admirably acted and its incidents are so craftily devised that they compel attention.

World (Evening)— . . . a picture which will doubtless stir you to the depths of your feeling. . . .

World (Morning)—No matter how many of the Broadway racketeer type of film plays that have gone before, this one is a good, and exciting, and authentically dramatic one. . . .

"Street of Chance" was described by MOTION PICTURE NEWS as "just another crook yarn," which "manages to grip the audience until the end," when this publication reviewed the picture on Dec. 28, 1929.

New Talking Equipment Is Offered in England

London — New talking film equipment called "Majestone" at prices ranging from $1,675 upwards, is announced from Leeds by Grainge Lodge and Co. Service depots are to be located in London, Leeds, Birmingham, Newcastle, Glasgow, Manchester, Liverpool, Nottingham, Cardiff and Belfast, and as an alternative to the service agreement, a training school for exhibitors' own operators and electricians is to be opened at Leeds. The highest price equipment is $2,250.

Calumet, Indiana, Crafts Victors in Pay Argument

Chicago—Danger of strikes and lockouts in theatres in the Calumet-Indiana district has been averted by a tentative agreement between exhibitors, and employees after a 34-hour parley there. Victory went to the operators, electricians and stage hands in thirteen theatres in Hammond, East Chicago and Indiana Harbor, who won increases.

Operators in the larger houses will be raised from $88.75 to $95 a week, according to the new contracts. Stage hands and electricians will be boosted from $70 a week to $72.50. Only the operators in the smaller theatres will take a cut, from $88.75 to $75.

On 4-a-Week Basis

London—Fox Movietone News, starting Monday, is being issued four times a week. An all-newsreel theatre is being planned here, it is stated.

Academy All Set for Second Course

Hollywood—The forthcoming Academy course in the fundamentals of sound recording will be divided into two sections, one for technical workers and the other non-technicians. Each group will meet one night a week for ten weeks, with the same subjects taught to each by the same instructors and lecturers. Presentation of the material will be varied to meet the makeup of the two classes.

The second semester commences early in March. The initial course was offered last year, and at that time several hundred studio workers were unable to gain entrance to the school.

Lecturers lined up to date include Prof. A. W. Nye, physics chief at the University of Southern California, and Dr. V. O. Knudsen, associate physics head at the same institution. Lester Cowan, the Academy's assistant secretary, has supervision over the school.

Only accredited studio employees are eligible for admission. Enrollment at the various plants is in charge of the following:

M. C. Levee (Paramount); Harry Rapf, (M-G-M); William Le Baron (RKO); H. Keith Weeks (Fox); Hal Wallis (First National); William Koenig (Warners); John W. Considine, Jr. (United Artists); E. H. Allen (Educational); Walter Stern (Universal); C. E. Sullivan (Pathe); Phil Goldstone (Tiffany); Samuel Bischoff (Columbia); Charles Christie (Metropolitan); Hal Roach; Mack Sennett; Larry Darmour, and Alfred T. Mannon (Tec-Art).

Chicago Exhibitors Sought on "Blue Sky" Stock Charge

Chicago—Local newspapers carried the tale of I. F. Dersch and N. W. Willard, president and secretary of the United Theatres Corp., who are being sought on a charge of selling stock in violation of the state securities law.

The corporation owns two houses on the west side and is alleged to have advertised some time ago that it would build another in the near future. Investors who are said to have gone in to the tune of about $20,000 worth of stock, when they became anxious later learned that the corporation had been refused permission by the secretary of state to qualify the stock issue, an assistant state's attorney here declares.

Los Angeles—Andre Durenceau, French artist, will work with Herbert Kalmus, Technicolor president, in aiding producers to secure the most effective color values in pictures.

F. B. T. Secretary Recovers

Des Moines—Margaret McGrevey, secretary and treasurer of the Des Moines Film Board, has returned to duty after recovering from influenza.

A Fine Talker

Not so long ago newspapers turned their columns over to the disappearance of Loewenstein, Continental banker, who jumped or fell from an aeroplane while crossing the English Channel. Exactly what happened has never been definitely established.

Around this bit of fact, Elinor Glyn has woven a piece of fiction which she calls "Such Men Are Dangerous" and Fox has turned it into a splendid talker. Principally because the story is intensely engrossing and largely because of the manner in which it is told.

Then again the beaten track is left far behind. That helps. Warner Baxter, who apparently found himself with the birth of sound, contributes a fine piece of work. Catherine Dale Owen is easy for the eye to take, but in performance she is wooden and stilted. She's the weakest asset of an extremely effective production.

Recommended for those tired of backstage stories and inane musical comedies. Also those who like their story weaving deftly and adroitly told.

Buzzell Saves Film, New York Critics Say

Eddie Buzzell's fine performance and a thrilling racing sequence in "Little Johnny Jones" (First National) are the saving graces in the George M. Cohan story, in the opinion of critics in New York, who find in the piece an old tale "without any new tricks." Their reviews are summed up in the following few words:

American— . . . little to recommend it other than the presence of Eddie Buzzell and one corking race sequence.

Daily Mirror— . . . While not an important movie, or what Hollywood quaintly calls an "epic," "Little Johnny Jones" is a vastly entertaining film.

Graphic— . . . an unfortunate flicker debut for Eddie Buzzell . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . it is old without any new tricks . . . Buzzell grows better as the film gets under way . . .

Journal— . . . an entertaining talkie. And that's because of Eddie Buzzell . . .

Post— . . . There are only a limited number of variations on that (jockey hero) theme, and "Little Johnny Jones" has managed to compress them all into one stunning banality . . .

Sun— . . . its chief claim to life is the engaging personality of Eddie Buzzell . . .

Telegraph— . . . It is not likely to cause much excitement in movie circles, and it seems a pity that Mr. Buzzell had to launch his career in such an antiquated vehicle.

Times . . . some good racing scenes . . . But the film, while fair enough as entertainment, doesn't become a good musical piece or a good play.

World (Evening)— . . . this one is so utterly outmoded that even Eddie couldn't make anything of it . . .

World (Morning)— . . . good enough program material, by no means fresh or imaginative in treatment

"You won't remember 'Little Johnny Jones' after leaving the theatre, but undoubtedly the votes of popular favor will declare it in," advised Motion Picture News on Nov. 2, 1929, when this publication reviewed the Buzzell vehicle.

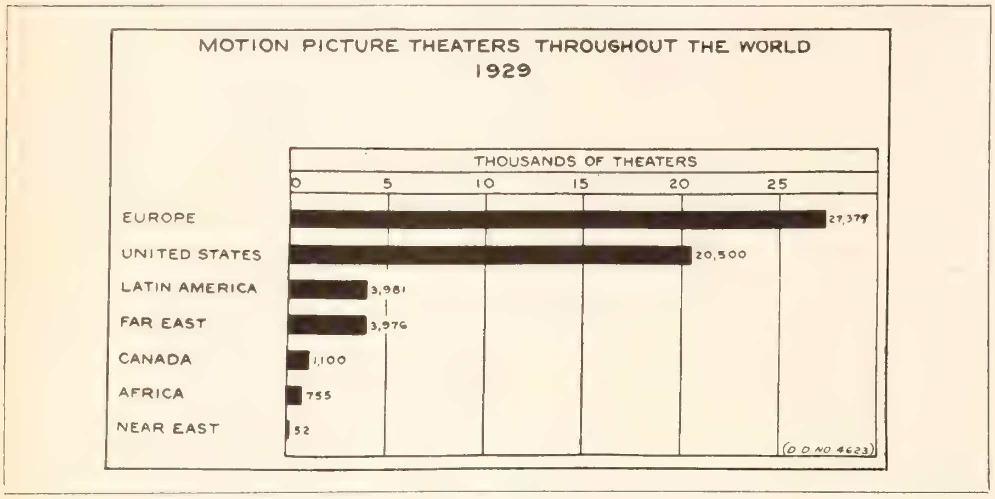
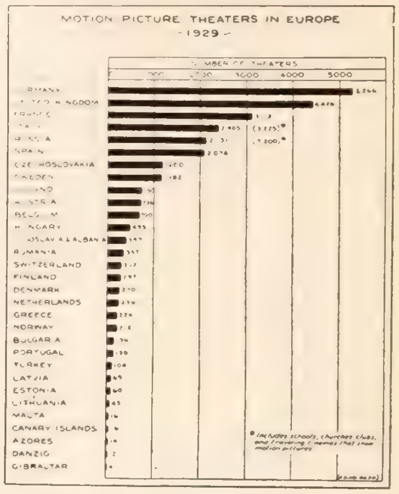
World's Theatres Now Total 58,143; Europe Leads All Areas with 27,379

Same Old Total of 20,500 Used for U. S. Exhibition Industry In Govt. Survey—Latin America Jumps to 3rd Place



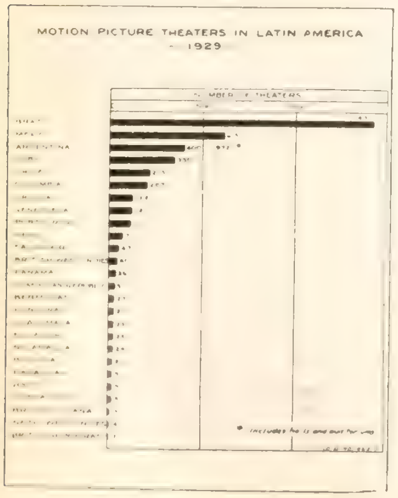


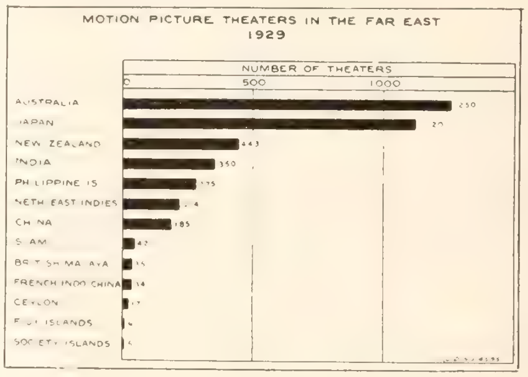
Total number of motion picture theatres throughout the world at the end of 1929 reached 58,143, the M. P. Division of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce estimates. The figure shows an increase over 1928 of only 802 houses. In the preceding year, the total was estimated at 57,341. The comparatively slight jump in the theatre total for all countries is attributable to the chaotic reactionary movements influenced to a great extent by sound, coupled with quota legislation in many lands.

Again, Europe heads all geographical divisions, listing 27,379 houses, as compared with 27,338 a year ago. United States is second with 20,500. The latter figure is probably inaccurate, inasmuch as it is the same total used by the industry for the past several years. The Hays organization compiled a list of theatres about five years ago, arriving at the total of 20,500, and this figure has not been changed since then.

All countries of Latin America combined have 3,981 theatres showing films. Last year, the figure was 3,733. Fourth in line is the Far East, in which 3,976 are operated, a decrease of 91 under 1928, when that territorial division listed approximately 3,885.

Canada is fifth, with 1,100. This figure also represents a repetition of other years. Africa comes sixth, having 755, a jump of 115 over 1928, while theatres in the Near East, according to government estimates, showed a marked decrease, from 145 in 1928 to 52 in 1929.





In Germany, 5,266 theatres were operating at the end of 1929. She stands far and away in the lead of all European countries, topping the United Kingdom by considerable numbers. France is third, an appreciable number under both Germany and England.

Italy, which has a narrow margin over Russia and Spain for fourth place, is far below the leader. Russia and Spain as the diagram shows, run almost neck and neck for fifth place, Russia taking the lead by a very narrow margin.

Gibraltar At The Bottom

Czchoslovakia and Sweden go into a near-tie for seventh place, the first taking it by a neck. Gibraltar takes the consolation prize, being placed at the bottom of the list of European countries, and separate domains.

Latin America is undoubtedly governed in the theatre field by Brazil, far and away, in the lead. Its nearest competitor, Mexico, has less than half of Brazil's total. The Argentine takes third place, with Cuba and Chili following in the order named. With Peru disposed of in tenth place the percentage begins to dwindle to less than 50 theatres in Salvador. British Honduras is placed at the tail end of the division with one lone theatre. Haiti has nine. Brazil and Mexico hold the balance of power over all other Latin-American countries in the theatre field.

Africa and Near East

South Africa stands out in this division like a Babe Ruth in baseball. It is interesting to note Egypt's position. Egypt takes third place but a very poor third with less than 100 theatres to her credit. Compare this situation with her supremacy at the time of Anthony and Cleopatra and the vast difference is appreciated.

Palestine presents another surprise, with less than 20 theatres. Persia falls below Palestine.

Second place is given here to Morocco, Tunis, Algeria and the French colonies. Their theatres combined are needed to give this large area a poor second to South Africa.

Persia Lags Behind

In all Persia there are only 10 theatres, a surprising bit of information when it is remembered that Persia in ancient times held almost unlimited sway over a great part of Asia.

With the advent of sound and the general trend toward producing pictures in various versions taking in the principal tongues of the world it may be expected that the countries now showing a small number of theatres will, when the next survey is made five years hence, or later, have increased their quota an appreciable amount.

Hollywood, Cal.—Gore Bros., Sol. Lesser and Mike Rosenberg will operate the theatre to be housed in the six-store apartment building announced for Wilshire Blvd. and Beverly Drive.

Xenia, O.—A second theatre is planned here for James Hibbert, who has purchased property for a two-story building on West Main.

Waukesha, Wisc.—Midwesco is named lessee of the $300,000, 1,700 seater now in work on the side of the A. C. Nickell property.

OMAK, WASH.—Completely rebuilt, the Gem here has been opened by Guy Merrill and A. H. McDemott.

Medford, Ore.—Earle Davis will manage the Holly to be opened here in April by Walter Leverette. The house will seat 1,200.

Ybor City, Fla.—Two theatres are to be built here. One will replace the Rivoli, which closed its doors Monday, and the other will be built at 16th St. and Ninth Ave. The house to be built on site of the Rivoli will seat 1,200, cost $100,000 and be named the "The Haya." N. V. Darley and Ed A. Serf, who operated the Rivoli, will be lessees.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—A theatre is among improvements planned on the Coast Highway and Olive Mill Rd.

San Pedro, Cal.—Warner Brothers will build a theatre at 488 W. Sixth St., to cost $100,000.

Los Angeles. Balch and Standervy, Film Exchange Building, have completed plans for the $200,000 house to be built at Eureka for Fox West Coast Theatres. The theatre will seat 1,700.

Richmond, Va.—With a capacity of 1,100 seats, the Patrick Henry theatre is to be built by E. F. Neal at 25th and Marshall Sts. The proposed house will be just one block from the place where Henry delivered his famous "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death" speech.

Wenatchee, Wash. — Construction starts in spring on a house here for Fox West Coast Theatres. It will cost $200,000.

Stockton, Cal.—There will be 2,200 seats in the $600,000 Fox theatre to be built at Main and San Joaquin Sts.

Sacramento, Cal.—Fox West Coast will spend $850,000 on its proposed house here, according to announcement by Harold B. Franklin.

Lynn, Mass.—Olympia Theatres, publix subsidiary, spent an estimated $1,000,000 on the Paramount at Union St. and Burchstead Pl. here.

Centralia, Wash.—Plans have been prepared for a $200,000 house to be built here by Northwest Fox Theatres Corp.

Alturas, Cal.—Arthur Yates, who formerly operated the Empress, is building a $50,000 house here. George F. King is architect and contractor.

Tucson, Ariz.—Feb. 15 has been set as opening date for the new Fox house under construction on Congress St.

Beaver Falls, Pa.—Alfred Karp will build a theatre at 1123 7th Ave., the site of the present Colonial, which will be razed.

Steubenville, O.—Edward Franzheim, Wheeling architect, has completed plans for a theatre to be built by W. B. Urling, Rex owner.

W. E. on Top

Western Electric will soon be sitting on top of the world, literally at least. Electrical Research has closed a contract for a sound installation at Fairbanks, Alaska, only 60 miles from the Arctic Circle.

Advocates Co-operation to Settle All Big Distributor-Exhibitor Problems country, fail in the essence of all arbitration. They are as technical as any court of law. They do not at present possess that full power and jurisdiction without which they can never function to advantage. Matters vitally affecting a given case from the viewpoint of the theatre owner are shut out and cannot be discussed.

"The arbitration methods and arbitration boards as they exist at present in our industry may earn medals from societies and institutes that have nothing whatever to do with the film industry and are absolutely ignorant as to its needs and do not know how these arbitration boards really function, but they will never earn the appreciation or gratitude of theatre owners who are supposed to share in their advantages.

Playing With Fire

"It seems to me that this whole situation, as it now exists is fraught with grave danger for any producing and distributing interest employing these methods. They are sitting on a keg of gun powder and all that is needed is the applying of the match. Several requests have been made of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in the course of the past year to apply matches to this gun powder, and even at this time demands are being made to ignite it, but I believe everything possible should be done by all those who really are interested in the progress and advancement of the industry to prevent such a happening. The airing of facts and conditions and the unbusinesslike practices in force in our industry at large can serve no good purpose. It would only be putting another weapon into the hands of the enemies of the motion picture and might result in either a Congressional investigation or legal action by state or national authorities.

"These were my well-founded beliefs at that day and they are unchanged today. But I still feel and hope that representatives of both producers and exhibitors will get together in such a manner that a mutually satisfactory contract to all will be the result.

"As I have had occasion to remark on many occasions before . . . dividends are not paid from quarrels; and there is too much community of interests between all branches of our great industry for them to remain at odds in the future, insofar as opposing all destructive efforts from the outside.

"In my 'Hail and Farewell' address, being a report rendered to 1200 delegates assembled at Los Angeles, June 1-5, 1926 at the seventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, were included the following comments which have a ring of timeliness now during these first days of 1930!

Forecast

"The tendency during the next few years, apparently, will be for theatre owners not aligned or affiliated with producing companies financially to enter into some arrangement, either through contractual relationship or franchise agreement over a term of years by financial interest or consolidation, to group themselves with various producing and distributing companies. Almost all the large theatres in the central sections of the key cities of the country are owned (directly or indirectly) by these producing and distributing interests. A large number of new theatres have been built and are being built, and conditions will continue this way until the inevitable business depression comes, lessening that ease with which monies can now be secured—monies necessary to promote the biggest kind of projects which a few years ago would have been termed visionary, radical or impossible. Economic pressure along will be able to bring about an end to this overbuilding, overseating and in time, overshowing."

"The Battle of the Giants"

"Many months ago I sounded a note of warning relative to 'The Battle of the Giants' which was coming. Recent movements with which you are conversant, and those which are now in the making, are eloquent confirmation of the statements I advanced at that time. The 'skirmishing' until recently has been mostly done by flank attacks and now that most of the other forces, including the independent theatre owners, have been manoeuvered out of the line of battle, this skirmishing will be superseded by direct frontal attacks in the open. One giant producer-distributor-exhibitor company will lock horns with another and after some slaughter and carnage have resulted, the banking interests in control of these companies will step in, negotiate a treaty of peace and effect if possible the proper terms and conditions for each of the 'warring' factions.

"Capital when it fights only does so for better terms and conditions and understandings, not to destroy, and it is essential that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America be vigorously and aggressively conducted along lines that will prevent the annihilation of all the 'dough-boys' in the ranks when the 'generals' meet.

"The newspapers have lately carried columns about the financial difficulties of one of the largest producing companies in the industry, whose attempts to secure necessary permanent financing have been met on all sides by 'closed' doors. The head of this company has always been known for his laudable fight to maintain independence and for his efforts to prevent trust or monopoly. They have made film history. Anyone who has closely watched the events and happenings of the last fifteen years cannot but admit that this 'giant' was forced to embark on his campaign of theatre acquisition to prevent the necessary outlet for the product of his company being closed against him by others. It is to be hoped that the reports that this company has at last met with success in its financing are true, because it would indeed be a disaster for the industry if certain forces were successful in their attempts to curtail or wholly close this channel of product. The 'stakes' in this instance are tremendous with the many ramifications entering into the situation; and it would only take another 'elimination' or two before the entire motion picture industry would be sewn up tightly, and then of what value would be investments of the unaffiliated theatre owner be.

"In an address delivered at the eighth annual convention of the M.P.T.O.A. at Columbus, Ohio, June 7-9, 1927, which I called 'The Right To Live'; the following excerpts should prove of more than timely interest:

Building Moratorium

"This condition of senseless overbuilding now constitutes the gravest menace in the industry. There is nothing to be said in favor of it, while reams might be written in condemnation.

"Some of the able minds in the industry who are directing these companies plainly state that it is a battle for the survival of the fittest. That someone will be hurt. But the public's funds, available as yet, can carry on these intensive programs for some time to come. When the public once senses the actual conditions, however, and the prospects for profits are not as roseate as formerly, additional monies will not be forthcoming and an entirely different complexion will be placed upon matters.

"Why not, then, before this catastrophe comes about surely it must—why not a sitting down of the producing heads engaged in this unintelligent and destructive competition, together with the representatives of theatre owners, to properly consider this situation? A stiuation which not alone is hurting these combatants, but one that may destroy the investments of thousands of others. At such a meeting, theatre owners interests should insist that a moratorium of at least several years should be declared against theatre building by producers. Such action would not be without precedent. It has been brought about during wartimes in other industries, and with the state of war now existing in this industry similar action is required; or otherwise this ruthless, uneconomic and unbusinesslike procedure will bring about a complete annihilation of the doughboys in the ranks—the great army of men and women in all parts of the world who own and operate theatres.

"We theatre owners two years ago pointed out to the heads of the various producing companies at a meeting in the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, the very things enumerated there, but it was impossible at that time to bring about any arrangements for a cessation of the overbuilding campaign they were then embarking upon.

"It was coming too easy for them then. They were not competing against one another so strongly then. They were only competing against the unarmed theatre owner. They were only skirmishing, reconnoitering as it were, at this stage in 'The Battle of The Giants,' but now the 'battle' is in full blast, the big guns are in action, and so much damage has been done already that perhaps they will welcome an armistice.

Unemployment Causes Slump in Cleveland

Cleveland—Neighborhood houses are suffering from the present acute unemployment situation.

City officials place the number of jobless at 50,000, and this total is rapidly mounting. Acting city manager Harold Burton called a conference with employment commissioner B. C. Seiple and Earle Martin, industrial chief, to work on plans for alleviating the situation.

Woodlaw Sues to Balk Unfair Branding at Second Theatre

Portland, Ore.—Injunction suit against the operators' union and the Central Labor Council, to restrain picketing of the Columbia, and distribution of handbills branding the theatre unfair, has been filed by G. T. Woodlaw. He claims he cannot meet the demand for two operators in the booth. A stench bomb recently was placed in the house. It followed the sending of a bomb as a Christmas gift, which resulted in burns to Woodlaw, his daughter and his grandson. A similar action recently was lodged in connection with picketing at the Circle.

Sponsor Seeks More Aid on New Virginia Tax Bill

Richmond, Va.—Delegate Lucien H. Shrader, author of the bill to place a ten per cent tax on admissions, has intimated that he will have to get more solons lined up with promise to support his measure, before he will make attempt to have it passed. The bill is practically the same as two others offered during the last four years and defeated after much opposition.

"Fly" and Smallpox Scare in Iowa Seen Abated

Des Moines—With cold weather cutting down influenza, the prevalence of cases is expected to abate. The smallpox scare, which cut down attendance around Christmas time, has been eliminated.

Type G in 131 Houses In 41 States, Claim

RCA-Photophone's Type G equipment, designed for houses up to 500 seats, has been installed in 131 theatres in 41 states, according to Sydney E. Abel, general sales manager. Contracts are being filled as orders are received, he states.

27 RCA Men in Kansas-Missouri Field on Sales

Kansas City—With the local Kansas-Missouri field staff of 27 men completed, RCA Photophone claims it can complete installations soon after the contract is signed.

Loew Has Three De Forest, One Photophone Theatre

Boston—De Forest Phonofilm equipment is installed in three theatres of the E. M. Loew chain, which also has one RCA-Photophone equipped house, states E. M. Loew, in denying that all houses of the circuit are equipped with Western Electric equipment.

700 De Forests Installed, in U. S., Woodhull Says

Seven hundred installations of De Forest Phonofilm equipment have been made in the United States, R. F. Woodhull, executive vice-president of General Talking Pictures, declared prior to leaving New York this week for a trip to Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Kansas City.

Anderson with Erpi

Atlanta.—W. W. Anderson, for more than eight years Pathe manager here, on Feb. 4 became a southern district manager of Electrical Research Products.

Home-Made Reproducer at Prison

Fort Madison, Ia.—The state penitentiary has a home-made talking picture apparatus at the prison auditorium. T. P. Hollowell, warden of the institution installed the new equipment. Waldo Ebinger, manager of the Strand furnished "Paris" as the prison's first talker.

Photophones as Sales Aids

Schenectady, N. Y.—Installation of portable RCA-Photophone equipment at ten district offices of General Electric is under way, as an aid to sales.

Laughs Expensive

Comedies are much more expensive in the present talkie era than in the old silent days. According to "Screenland," laughter in comedy talkies costs the industry approximately $100.000 every year. About 5,000,000 feet of film is used to permit audiences to laugh at the funny business perpetrated on the screen. Silent footage must follow the wisecracks or gags offered by the talkie actors in order that the audience will not drown out the players' voices as they proceed with the dialogue. The boys and girls on the screen pause politely while the audience laughs—then, timed by experts, go on with the show until slowed up by the next laugh. They call these pauses in the dialogue "laugh gaps." The time out for laughter occasioned by love scenes doesn't count.

New Installations

KINGSTON, Ont.—Closed for five years, the Strand is to be re-opened as soon as alterations are complete. $25,000 is being spent on reconstruction and talker equipment. Famous Players Canadian will operate.

Los Angeles—RCA Photophone sound reproducing equipment is being installed at the Gaiety.

Garland, Tex.—C. R. Van Scoy has purchased the Crescent and will remodel it for sound.

San Antonio—Edgar G. Uhl has opened his Empire sound.

Wallace, N. C.—The Wanoca will open soon with RCA Photophone sound installation.

Holtville, Cal.—Fred Holmes will use RCA Photophone at the Arcade.

Cleveland.—Engineers are wiring the Palace for DeForest Phonofilm and Phonodisc.

Cleveland.—The Crown and Arion are new Western Electric installations.

Coquille, Ore.—Clyde Gage has contracted for Western Electric for the Liberty.

Barton, Vt.—Pierce & Carron have reopened the Gem with sound.

Cameron, Mo.—The Ritz has been remodeled and sound installed.

Pocatello, Ida.—National Film Phone is installing a device at the Grace O. H.

Minneapolis.—Marvel reproducer has been installed in the five Twin City houses of the Lake Amusement Co. chain. Other new Minnesota installations are: Bijou, Brown's Valley; Crystal, Bird Island; Community, Buffalo Lake; Lyric, Waconia, and Grand, Lake City. The reproducer is distributed by Elliott Film Co.

Minneapolis—Clamage & Rothstein will install Ultraphone reproducer in the firm's six houses. These include the Palace here, three houses at Detroit and two at Omaha. Other Utraphone equipments will be installed at the Grand, Hayward, Wis., and Rex, Henning, Minn.

Albuquerque, N. M.—The Pastime is being equipped with RCA Photophone sound.

Salina, Kan.—RCA Photophone sound reproducing equipment is being installed at the Jayhawk.

Alexander City, Ala.—RCA Photophone engineers are wiring the Strand theatre.

Flagstaff, Ariz.—The Orpheum is being equipped with RCA Photophone.

Hot Springs, Ark.—The Royal will soon open with RCA Photophone equipment.

San Francisco.—RCA Photophone engineers are installing sound reproducing equipment at the Pompeii.

Cincinnati—Wonderphone, disc and film reproducer, has been installed at the New Liberty.

Kannapolis, N. C.—RCA-Photophone equipment has made its debut at the Pastime, operated by L. P. Kestler. The house seats 400.

Dallas—R. D. Thrash now is selling De Forest Phonofilm equipment in Texas.

Cheaper Talkers Speed Wiring of Iowa Houses

Des Moines.—Sound equipment is coming in with a rush in Iowa. W. J. Miller, Iowa theatre broker, states that the new and cheaper equipment, has made possible the purchase of reproducers by houses which have not been able to handle the overhead previously.

Theatres which have recently put in sound are the Princess, Boone, where John Anderson introduced Western Electric equipment, the Palace at Waverly which claims to be the smallest theatre in the state equipped with Western Electric equipment, W. T. Biggs of the Adair at Adair who is planning to install Pacent and Mrs. J. H. Johnson of the Princess at Stewart is planning to install equipment this month.

3,367 of 4,531 World W. E. Systems in U. S.

Of a total of 4,531 world-wide installations of Western Electric sound reproducing equipment, 3,367 are in the United States, Electrical Research Products states.

Foreign countries in which installations have been completed include: Great Britain, America, Balkan States, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Hungary, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunis, Turkey, Australia, China, Dutch East Indies, India, Japan, New Zealand, Philippines, Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rico, Cuba, Guatemala, Jamaica, Mexico, Panama, Porto Rico and Canada.

Installations are now being completed in Morocco, Algeria, Portugal, Syria.

33 Tone-o-Graphs Claimed in Northern Ohio Houses

Cleveland — Thirty-three Tone-O-Graphs, it is claimed, have been installed in northern Ohio theatres since November. Rube Traube, Middle West division manager, has opened an office here to service equipments without charge.

Marblehead Has Phonofilm

Marblehead, Mass.—Phonofilm and Phonodisc equipment, and not Western Electric as previously and erroneously reported, is installed at the Warwick here, operated by Thomas A. McNulty.

New "Mike" Gag

San Francisco.—"Eight cylinder" microphones were used by King Vidor to screen the running shots of Marion Davies and Elliot Nugent driving a roadster in "Not So Dumb," recently completed. The scenes, continuous in automotive movement as well as dialogue, were first tried with a six cylinder car. The engine explosions, however, were out of time with the high sound-wave frequency of the microphone. After some technical adjustments were made on the microphone frequency, an eight cylinder machine was tried out. In this manner motor disturbances were reduced to a soothing hum throughout the dialogue passages.

"Disraeli" Heads "Ten Best" List

"Disraeli" (Warners) nabbed first place in the Film Daily poll of "ten best" pictures for 1929, selected annually by trade, fan and newspaper reviewers.

"Broadway Melody" (M-G-M) was voted second, followed by "Madame X" (M-G-M), "Rio Rita" (RKO), "Gold Diggers of Broadway" (Warners), "Bulldog Drummond" (United Artists), "In Old Arizona" (Fox), "Cock-Eyed World (Fox), "Last of Mrs. Cheney" (M-G-M), "Hallelujah" (M-G-M).

According to the poll, only five companies turned out "ten best" material in 1929. M-G-M had four on the critics' list, Warners and Fox two each, and one from RKO and United Artists.

Foreign-Language Sound Series Planned by "U"

Universal City—Production of 12 two-reel talkers to be made in French, Italian, Spanish and Mexican with foreign-speaking casts, have been started at Universal with Paul Kohner supervising. Each of the 12 will be introduced by a Universal star, speaking that particular language.

German Is Added

Culver City—German has been added to Spanish and French as languages in which the Stan Laurel-Oliver Hardy comedies are being produced.

Zukor Going to Coast

Adolph Zukor leaves Saturday for the Coast for a business and vacation trip.

Harriscolor Ready With New Process

Los Angeles—Harriscolor is the latest to launch activities in the color field, using a three-color process and printing on single emulsion.

The company, which has been doing research work for two years, states it is equipped to care for 15,000,000 ft. within the next six months.

"Made in America"

American films have flooded the European market, and there's nothing Europe can do about it except to try to make better films—which they can't.

In Copenhagen the officials talked about these American films the other day. They don't like them. They say American-made movies breed all sorts of distorted notions in the plastic minds of the young Danes.

Denmark declares Russian films to be better. If they mean more educational, yes. But certainly the Russian films of recent vintage aren't calculated to amuse. They are lessons in horror and pictographic lectures in social science. American films amuse and pretend to do nothing more. That is why Europeans like them better than the home product.—"The N. Y. Mirror."

Educational to Handle Terry Sound Cartoons

Educational will distribute "Terry-Toons," a series of sound cartoon subjects to be made by Audio-Cinema, at its Long Island City studio, with Western Electric recording. The subjects, to be released each alternate week, are the work of Paul Terry, originator of "Aesop's Fables," and Frank Moser. Philip A. Sheib, veteran studio and theatre musical director, will be in charge of music. The first subject, "Caviar," will be released Feb. 23.

This gives Educational eight sound series, the others being: Mack Sennett, Coronet, Lloyd Hamilton, Jack White, Lupino Lane, Mermaid and Tuxedo.

Antipodes Deal Set

Union Theatres, Ltd., has purchased Educational's output of 76 two-reel talking comedies for its Australia and New Zealand chain in a deal closed for Educational by Foreign Manager L. J. Woodridge. This gives the firm 100 per cent representation in all English-speaking countries, the product being handled by Ideal in the United Kingdom and the Schlessinger interests in South Africa.

New Building for Warner Music Chiefs

Hollywood—Warners will spend $250,000 on a new administration studio building to house its various music department heads. The structure will be erected on the First National lot.

Robert Crawford is slated to head all company musical activities. On the staff will be Erno Rapee, director of the music department; Oscar Straus, composer of originals for Warner musicals; Lou Silvers and Leo Forbstein, musical directors; Oscar Hammerstein II, Sigmund Romberg, Jerome Kerm and Otto Harbach, song writers.

The administration building will house five rehearsal rooms, 20 arrangers' and song-writers' rooms, copyright department rooms, a library of 200,000 manuscripts, and executive offices.

Eason to Make Hoot's Next

Hollywood—Reeves ("Breezy") Eason has authored an original, titled "Who—Me?" to be used as Hoot Gibson's next vehicle. Eason will direct.

Hatrick Denies Newsreel Story

E. B. Hatrick, executive chief of all Hearst film interests, denies that W. R. Hearst is interested with Courtland Smith and Arthur Brisbane in the development of a new newsreel and string of newsreel theatres. He told a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative that "there is no truth to the report."

When Hatrick arrives in Hollywood, he will confer with Hearst and M-G-M chiefs regarding new production plans.

Spanish Versions of All Chaney Talkers

Hollywood.—No sooner had Lon Chaney signed to make talkers for M-G-M than he began taking lessons in Spanish under tutorship of Salph de Alberich, studio Spanish teacher. Chaney signed a new contract calling for a salary hike of $1,000 per week, it is understood. The argument over salary, outlined last week in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, replaces the present contract of the star and calls for production of talkers with Spanish versions of each. Five years is the period covered.

Chaney's first talker may be "Sergeant Bull," prepared as a silent script. Jack Conway will direct.

Joe Rock Ready with New Shorts Company

Los Angeles—Joe Rock, comedy producer, is all set to launch his new Premier Pictures studio, where he will produce a total of 30 short talkers, all comedies, for state rights release in 1930-31.

Schenck Buys "Gambling"

Chicago—Joseph M. Schenck completed arrangements with George M. Cohan for the filming of "Gambling," the latter's stage play which is current at the Erlanger. The producer recently returned from Europe, and spent a day on the "Gambling" deal before resuming his journey to Los Angeles.

Dilemma

A small film company went on the rocks in Hollywood last month. Among its outstanding debts was the bill of a costume company for garbing a chorus. On the day of the blow-up, representatives of the costume company presented a court order for the return of its property.

Nearly a score of alarmed chorus girls pointed out that they had no other clothes at the studio. The costumes had been given them the night before and they had come to work in them. But a court order is a court order. The unfortunate chorus was compelled to hand its costumes through a door, and to wait until scurrying taxis had collected their street clothes. Fortunately, no one yelled "Fire!"

—"Talking Screen."

"All for One"

Chicago—A modern version of the "Three Musketeers" was offered by Abram F. Myers, President of Allied States Ass'n in a telegram to Independent Illinois Theatre Owners in Chicago.

"Allied," said Myers, "has three musketeers: Steffes, who corresponds to D'Artagnan; Coles, who reminds us of Athos; and Richey who resembles Aramas. They have borne the brunt of the battle for exhibitor rights and deserve the gratitude of the theatre owners of the country."

Critics Call "Grand Parade" Pretty Good

"Grand Parade" (Pathe) was accepted by New York newspaper reviewers as "pretty good" fan fare, although many agree that the story material is weak. Brief excerpts from their reviews follow:

American — . . . a simple—very simple narrative . . . won't do for any save very juvenile minds. . . .

Daily Mirror— . . . pretty good picture . . . a shade more entertaining than many back-stage movies because of its new personalities and its fresh atmosphere.

Daily News— . . . has charm and character. . . . an all-around dandy little program production.

Herald-Tribune—There is an indefinable quality about "The Grand Parade" which makes it an arresting and original piece. . . .

Post— . . . a preposterous romance of the heaving, sobbing variety. . . . The result is extremely distressing.

Telegram— . . . a maudlin and undistinguished narrative . . . is made into a convincing and at times moving story by the sincere performance of Helen Twelvetrees. . . .

Times— . . . This feature is not even a travesty, it is a honeyed, hackneyed, revamping of the combined backstage, mammy, on-with-the-show melodrama.

World (Evening)— . . . The plot is hoary with age. . . .

World (Morning)— . . . Helen Twelvetrees . . . causes what otherwise might have been a familiar and ungainly melodrama of life backstage to rise up at times into fierce, piercing tragedy . . .

When Motion Picture News reviewed "The Grand Parade," in the issue of Nov. 16, 1929, this publication pointed out that the picture "will prove entertaining because of several excellent performances and a generous amount of music."

Stan-a-Phone Using Talkers for School Use

Foreshadowing the time when talkers will be a regular part of the school curriculum a talker program was presented this week in assembly hall of Public School 60, New York, with Stan-a-Phone portable talking picture equipment. The entire student body and teachers witnessed the performance. In the evening, the same program was presented in the auditorium of the St. Cecilia Church, Englewood, N. J., to an audience of 1,000.

Long Wait in Vain

San Francisco.—For four years, Mrs. Suzanne B. Allen has been scanning films in an effort to locate her husband, Samuel E. Allen, character actor, but finally gave it up and secured an interlocutory decree.

Frisco House Changing Name

San Francisco.—A new name will appear here when the Wigwam, Mission near 22nd Sts., reopens after remodeling, as the New Rialto. Western Electric sound equipment is being installed and the house is being altered and redecorated at a cost of $60,000. It is operated by the Wigwam Amusement Co.

A Lady to Love

(MGM—All Dialogue)

Full of Popular Appeal

(Reviewed by Alvin Meyers)

IN spite of the Hays edict barring it, "They Knew What They Wanted" reaches the screen. True, it is in greatly denatured form, but the process of expurgating the offensive portions has worked wonders. "A Lady to Love" is entertainment and full of popular appeal. Make no mistake about it; you can back it to the limit. You can promise clean-cut drama and at least one performance that is a positive standout in any league.

Edward G. Robinson as Tony contributes a fine characterization. In the role successively played by Richard Bennett, Leo Carillo and Jean Hersholt, Robinson easily tops them all. He dominates the picture. Vilma Banky, in her first all-talker, is satisfactory in her part and in one or two spots rises to nice emotional heights.

To Victor Seastrom, for his direction, and Sidney Howard, for his dialogue, there must be given unlimited praise. Each in his own field has given this story of a girl who makes the best of what looks like a bad matrimonial bargain, movement and charm to a degree out of the ordinary.

Musicals, cartoons and comedy shorts best suited to this.

Produced and distributed by M. G. M. from the play "They Knew What They Wanted," by Sidney Howard. Directed by Victor Seastrom. Adaptation and dialogue by Sidney Howard. Edited by Leslie Wilder. Photographed by Merrit B. Gerstad. Length and running time, not set. Release date March 8 1930.

Dames Ahoy!

(Universal—All-Talker)

Popular Comedy Stuff

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

NOT sensationally funny by any means, but the kind of stuff that offers fine light entertainment. Popular appeal with lots of good comedy.

The story, a weak affair, opens in fine spirit aboard a battleship, where, beneath decks, the gobs are musically celebrating the end of a cruise—which means shore leave. The gang is singing "Barnacle Bill, the Sailor"—a tune with a fine swing—and the shot switches to the inseparable trio—Glen Tryon, Otis Harlan and Eddie Gribbon, who are making plans for a search of the town in quest of a big blonde who tricked Harlan into signing away one-half of his pay check on the last trip.

The search ends in a dance palace, where Tryon is unconsciously made the winner of a home in the suburbs and $500, with the stipulation that he marries his dancing partner at a public ceremony. Tryon and Helen Wright go through with the gag and eventually they fall for each other in a big way.

Although Tryon is featured, honors are divided evenly between his support. Gertrude Astor is in the cast, but she has very little to do. Wm. James Craft directed and made a good job of it.

Use a novelty and a sound dramatic short.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Story, adaption and dialogue by Matt Taylor. Directed by Wm. James Craft. Photographed by C. Allan Jones. Length, 5,933 feet. Time, 1 hr., 5 mins. Release date not set.

The Battle of Paris

(Paramount—All Dialogue)

War Drama Minus Newness

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

WAR stuff with sound, music and song. Gertrude Lawrence of musical comedy fame makes bow on screen. Whoopee in Paris just before signing of armistice with doughboys playing principal roles. With a long list of war pictures ahead of it this one loses much of its dramatic and comedy appeal.

A street singer meets young American artist, later an officer, while teamed with a pickpocket. She later becomes a Red Cross nurse and makes a round of Paris' underworld in search of her lover, who is on leave. The inevitable final clinch.

Miss Lawrence has oodles of personality, can sing and swings through this overworked story with plenty of pep. Charles Ruggles as the pickpocket, and later a doughboy, furnishes some good comedy. Walter Petrie is fine type as artist. Voices of all three record with remarkable human quality.

Some good action and plenty of atmosphere are given in shots of Paris underworld. Miss Lawrence gives you much the same type and personality as the old favorite, Elsie Janis.

Shorts of dramatic nature and slapstick comedy will compare nicely with this one.

Produced by Paramount. Directed by Robert Florey. Story and dialogue by Gene Markey. Music and lyrics by Cole Porter. Photographed by Bill Steiner. Running time, 1 hour and 15 minutes. Length, 6,218 feet. Release date, Nov. 30, 1929.

Montana Moon

(M-G-M—All Dialogue)

Excellent Western Comedy

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

BRILLIANT dialogue by Joe Farnham makes this a most entertaining picture that will do business aplenty in the week run spots and general bookings.

The story is an original that fluffily combines a "jazz daughter" theme with that of a western—and a few song numbers are inserted for added audience value.

Joan Crawford is starred in the role of a spoiled millionaire's daughter who falls in love with the cowboy working on her father's Montana ranch. John Mack Brown shows up excellently as the westerner, and indicates he is about ready for stardom himself.

An excellent cast includes Dorothy Sebastian, Ricardo Cortez, Benny Rubin, Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards and Karl Dane. Mal St. Clair directed capably.

There is plenty of exploitation available through the star and cast "names," plus the fact the picture is a musical western comedy with a dash of the "Dancing Daughters" theme.

Dramatic shorts and newsreels would round out a program with this one.

Produced and released by M-G-M. Story and continuity by Sylvia Thalberg and Frank Butler. Directed by Mal St. Clair. Dialogue by Joe Farnham. Music and lyrics by Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Photographed by William Daniels. Length about 8,100 feet. Running time, 1 hr., 30 minutes. Release date not set.

Son of the Gods

(First National—All-Dialogue)

Fine Box-Office

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

DRAMA and romance is nicely interwoven in "Son of the Gods" to assure wide popularity. Richard Barthelmess' characterization of the son of a Chinese millionaire is splendid.

The picture is adapted from Rex Beach's novel which has been widely circulated. The story, rather sentimental in spots, nevertheless is engrossing. It details the struggles of a highly cultured Chinese youth against racial prejudices of the white man. He falls in love with a rich girl, who publicly flogs him when she discovers he is Chinese. But all eventually ends satisfactorily for the regulation and dramatically false happy ending.

"Sons of the Gods" will enhance "draw" potentialities of Barthelmess. Its plea for racial and religious tolerance will rate with the classes, while the dramatic and sentimental love story will get over with the masses.

Frank Lloyd's direction throughout was fine. An excellent supporting cast.

Two-reel comedy and musical short will nicely balance here.

Produced and released by First National. From novel by Rex Beach. Adaptation and dialogue by Bradley King. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Photographed by Ernest Haller. Length, 8,344 feet. Running time, 1 hr., 20 mins. Release date not set.

Peacock Alley

(Tiffany—All Dialogue)

Fine in Spots

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

A TYPICAL Mae Murray story. But a much older Mae, and obviously less attractive from an "it" standpoint. Mae did this story some years ago under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. In this version she has sound, dialogue, music and Technicolor as compliments. Apparently Mae has yet to find Fanny Ward's secret of eternal youth. First two reels drag. Balance well timed, full of strong dramatic action and some powerful situations.

Story of the "Gold Diggers" type. Found in a compromising situation in a prominent New York hotel Claire Tree later marries a young Texan attorney who learns from house detective of his wife's "past."

Less than a reel at the end is in color. Mae dances and shows much of her once "perfect" figure. The star has been aided greatly by fine support from George Barraud, Jason Robards, Richard Tucker and others. W. L. Thorne as the house detective lends much to the picture.

Except for a perceptible dragging in the initial reelage the story moves fast and is well told.

Enough color, music and sex. Comedy shorts would fit here.

Produced by Tiffany. Directed by Marcel de Sano. Story and dialogue by Carey Wilson. Continuity by Frances Hyland. Edited by Clarence Kolster. Photographed by Benjamin Kline. Running time, 1 hour and 15 minutes. Length, 6,060 feet. Release date, Jan. 10, 1930.

Opinions On Pictures

Rich People

(Pathe—All Dialogue)

Not So Hot

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

PATHE has taken the age-old Cinderella prescription and added a lot of Horatio Alger to achieve "Rich People." The result is a fair program picture which drags in spots and makes up for it in others. It will satisfactorily pad out a program in the regular two-a-week houses.

Constance Bennett is the blonde heiress and Regis Toomey is the fair-haired, poor bookkeeper who conceives charts to beat the stock market. Naturally his brain children astound the great economic experts, Constance's father being one of them, and everything ends in the clinch.

There is a dash of triangular stuff tossed in because Constance has a hard time convincing Toomey that she loves him. At the same time she gets herself engaged to a rich lad. The wedding is washed up when Constance disappears from the yacht and is next seen pulling Toomey from his humble bed and forcing him to marry her.

Needs strong supporting program of comedy, news reel and scenic.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Story by Jay Gelzer. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Adaptation by A. A. Kline. Edited by Charles Crast. Photographed by Norbert Brodine. Length, 7,074 feet. Runnning time, 1 hour, 18 mins. Release date, Jan. 5, 1930.

On the Border

(Warners—All Dialogue)

Best Dog Star Film Yet

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

ACTION snaps like a whip. Unique in that it is the first "barkie" produced. Outdoor shots predominate. Good photography. Best thing Rin-Tin-Tin has done. Plausible story and some fine exterior shots. A heavy truck plunging over a rocky embankment is thrill enough for the most melodramatic. Rin-Tin-Tin is given less unplausible stunts to perform in this one. Musical sequences.

Gangsters bootlegging Chinamen over the Mexican border into the United States are beaten to it by border patrolmen, aided and abetted by pretty Armida. She is a cute trick and a right spot in the picture.

Philo McCollough is good as the villian. John B. Litel as head of the border patrol in disguise is a good type. Walter Miller, another old timer, also a border patrolman, lends a good bit to the story. Rin-Tin-Tin although up to his old tricks as the hero in need, clicks on all fours. Some good Mexican whoopee scenes are shown. Rin-Tin-Tin's bark registers before the "mike" with a bang.

Support this one with comedy and society drama shorts.

Produced and distributed by Warners. Story based on original by Lillian Hayward. Directed by William McGann. Dength, 4,452 feet. Running time, 58 minutes. Release date, March 15.

Because I Love You

(American General Film—Part Dialogue)

Novel and Fair Entertainment

(Reviewed by R. C. Uebel)

EXCEPT for the angle of novelty, it takes a knowledge of German to appreciate this picture. The picture is chiefly talking and singing, except for the introductory sequences, but once it gets going it pleases, as a picture which compares with fair program offerings of American standards. However, it is not outstanding, and doesn't rate advanced prices. The acting is fine, diction and enunciation excellent. Reviewed at the Mansfield, New York, the tonal quality did not impress as favorably as good American talkers, but the fault of recording or reproducing cannot be determined from an out-front review. There are some good singing numbers.

The story is of a singer and her efforts to resist the lure of the stage and live down an indiscretion, committed under the influence of loneliness and champagne. Although she is a model wife, the husband, learning the truth, dissolves the marriage and she returns to the stage, later to be reunited with her husband, through the influence of her child.

The appeal of this picture, of course, is to German-speaking patrons, although it may attract others because of the novelty of German dialogue.

Good comedy and singing shorts will help this.

Produced by Aafa Tobis Prod. Distributed by American General Film Co. Story by Walter Reisch, Director Rudolf Walther-Fein. Photographed by K. Brodmerkel and W. Janssen. Length, 9,000 feet. Running time, 1 hour and 10 min. Release date, Jan. 24, 1930.

The Lost Zeppelin

(Tiffany—All Talker)

Novelty and Hokum

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

FROM its angles of novelty and hokum, this will get over as a popular price attraction. It's a meller concerning a South Pole flight, and has a number of unusual angles, and others not so good. However, it will be eaten up by the kids and the grown-ups, too, will get a kick out of the air sequences, despite unconvincing far-fetched events in the story. This, plus some unusual selling angles and publicity values, stamps this as a program offering of money-making caliber. There is one particularly effective sequence, when following the reputed air passage over the South Pole, the reception of the news in various countries is shown through the medium of newspaper first pages and newspaper venders shouting the headlines.

A naval commander, about to leave on a South Pole expedition, finds his wife in the arms of his pal and junior officer. He is of a sacrificing type, and is concerned only with her future happiness. When, with the pal he is found by a rescue plane on the ice floes, he orders the pal into the plane, which can carry but one passenger. The pal returns a hero, but finally the commander and the aviator are rescued, with the wife sure she loves her husband. Go after this from the air angle, capitalizing on current polar flights.

Needs comedy shorts.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany. Directed by Edward Sloman. Story by Frances Hyland and Jack Natteford. Dialogue by Charles Kenyon. Edited by Martin G. Cohn and Don Hayes. Photographed by Jackson Rose. Length, 6,882 feet. Running time, 1 hour, 16 minutes. Released Dec. 20, 1929.

Corking Comedies Highlights In Shorts

"And How'

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3719—1 Reel)

Pleasantly Diverting

TECHNICOLOR scenes in one reel showing Indian dances, staged in the open, with ballad of pretty girls in Indian costumes. Color gives a certain beauty to this one, the picturesque Indian costumes lending themselves admirably to a play with the spectrum. Ann Greenway leads the ballad and sings rather nicely the numbers, "Peter Minuet" and "Memories."

A fine short diversion for an otherwise black and white program.

"Feline Fighter"

(Sound—Sportlight—Pathe 1 Reel)

Unusual Thriller

HERE is a short crammed with excitement, showing the sensational chase and killing of a wildcat in Florida. The beast, upon whose head there is a bounty, is chased and overtaken by the dogs, and puts up a terrific fight, losing out when an airdale enters the fray to break down the cat's defense with one lunge. Dave Newell, sportsman, hunter and fisherman, directs the hunt. It's a wow of a subject, which will thrill any audience. Running time, 11 minutes.

Comedy and singing shorts with this.

"The Setting Son"

(RKO—Talker—2 Reels)

Laughs Galore

ALBERTA VAUGHN and Al Cooke are featured in this H. C. Witwer short, but Irvin Bacon is pretty much the whole show. He's shown as the wealthy old judge, who takes a drink of ink instead of tonic. The relatives are summoned, hoping against hope, that the old man will pass out. They try doping out who'll get the dough and finally start grabbing on the theory that possession is nine points of the law. The old man, asserting he'll live to be 100, steps into the elevator shaft and takes a dive. There are plenty of laughs in this and it should be plugged in advertising. Running time, 20 minutes.

Splendid as contrast for heavy feature.

"In Old Madrid"

(Fitz Patrick—Talker—1 Reel)

Dandy Travelogue

IN this subject, James Fitz Patrick continues his travels through Spain, carrying out a running line of conversation throughout the travelogue, which also has musical and sound effect synchronization. It's a very interesting subject, proving that ultra-modernism has resulted in disappearance of "old Madrid." Then, in contrast, he shows quaint Salamanca, an historic spot of interest to all Americans, as it was at the university there that Columbus was educated. Running time, about 10 minutes.

Splendid relief for dramatic feature.

Frances Alda

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 805—1 Reel)

OPERATIC number lends Mme. Alda, of Metropolitan fame, splendidly to the talkie screen. Good recording and an oldtime number, "The Last Rose of Summer" with "Birth of Morn" give Alda's voice fine expression. Mme. Alda makes an impressive appearance and lends dignity to her work. Running time, about 10 minutes.

Will fill a dignified musical spot on any program.

"Sole Mates"

(Columbia—"Krazy Kat"—Sound—1 Reel)

Cartoon That Tickles

THIS one will click on any program. Tuneful music, tap dancers of the animal kingdom staging a vaudeville with all the laughs to be found in a two-a-day over the big time. With Ben Harrison and Manny Gould behind the animation the boys and girls of the animal world make whoopee like nobody's business. A full animal orchestra furnishes the jazz. Running time, about 10 minutes.

With dramatic or musical short this one will surely fill the spot.

"Girl with the Perfect Voice"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

Fair Program Filler

ROSE PERFECT sings "Kiss Me Again" and a couple of others in excellent voice, but the camera makes a comedy out of another vocal number. Her facial contortions set the audience to giggling. Dudley Wilkinson, her accompanist, wins a hand with a number of his own.

Needs plenty of support.

"World Tours of Prince of Wales"

(Captain Erard—Silent)

Wales Name Puts This Over

ANY subject that can boast the Prince of Wales as star is worth a spot on any program. This one purports to cover his tours from 1920 to 1929. Only flashes of the Prince in Australia, New Zealand and America are given. Very poor photography throughout the less than two reels of subject matter. The whole books very much as though it had been hurriedly assembled from news reel flashes. The assembler hasn't forgotten to show Wales in his favorite pastime of riding and falling off horses. Flashes of his visit to America include surf-riding off San Diego coast.

Couple with a dramatic or musical feature and you have a magnet.

"High Toned"

(Pathe Talker—B Reels)

Good Comedy

ANOTHER of the Buck and Bubble series based on High Wiley's comedies. There are some good laughs and action, winding up with a wrestling match between Wildcat and the high-hat Jamaica negro, who has everybody in the neighborhood putting on the dog. Wildcat has been away, returning with Demmy, and Lil, the goat, to find the high-hat in possession of his job and girl. And then things begin to happen, with Lady Luck favoring the wildcat. Running time, 21 minutes.

This is good for use with musical shorts.

"Doing Phil a Favor"

(Pathe Talker—2 Reels)

Boring

PATRONS will yawn through this one, so if you play it, don't promise them much. It's unfunny and laborious comedy material that has but few laughs at best, and these of the strained variety. A husband sets out to cure his wife of flirting, through inducing his friend to carry on an affair with her. Of course, the arrangement is not revealed until the end, but by that time it matters but little.

Bradley Barker directed, and Mackenzie Ward, English player, is featured. Length, 18 minutes.

Need real comedy with this.

"Letter Box"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

More Child Slush

SYBIL LEE is the central character in this playlet. She brings together her grandpa with his estranged son and daughter-in-law, her parents. It's the same old slush done in a simple manner. Will go well on children's programs but will prove boring to all but fond parents.

Will need plenty of help.

"Oh, Sarah!"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

In Between

A REGULAR old-fashioned vaude patter act filled with cracks—some good, others punk. Jack McLallen is the boy handling the gags. He plays a jew's harp and does all the old things. Supported by a well built gal in a waist-high skirt and the customary dumbbell in outrageous clothes.

A short dramatic number will balance nicely with this.

"Pathe Review—No. 5"

(Pathe-Silent—1 Reel)

A Good Subject

THE Pathechrome process is used effectively in this subject, through the medium of pottery work in Araby. It's beautifully done, and the colors are brought out nicely. Then there are scenes of new fashions, which give this a selling angle for women. The wind-up contains some fine snow shots. Running time, 10 minutes.

For any kind of bill.

"Pathe Review—No. 6"

(Pathe-Silent—1 Reel)

Pleasing

THE always interesting Pathe Review combines the unusual and beauty in this release. It has three main topics, "High Life in Borneo," showing monkey life in Borneo; shots of a Japanese stenographer and the odd typewriters used, and some beautiful examples of color work illustrating birds, bees and blossoms. Running time, 10 minutes.

An Audience-pleaser anywhere.

"Singing Saps"

(Aesop's Fable-Pathe Sound—1 Reel)

Good Cartoon

THERE are a number of good gags in this latest number of the popular fables. The tough quartette is introduced to provide music, and the menace, when they interrupt the love-making of Little Milton Mouse, a fight ensues. It's a good cartoon and a light offering for any kind of bill. Running time, 7 minutes.

Line with accompanying sound acts.

"Vanity"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3780—1 Reel)

Too Much Story for One Reel.

THE story here should take at least five reels to bring out properly. In about ten minutes' time some big gaps are closed with insufficient dramatic explanation. Despite this apparent fault it is far from being just so—so. The eternal triangle with the neglected wife and former suitor is the basic plot. Ruth Lyons, possessing plenty of personality, Rudolph Cameron, a good-looker, and Viven Oakland solve all difficulties. Straight drama. Running time, about 10 minutes.

Use with feature comedy that is light.

"The Benefit"

(Vitaphone No. 939—1 Reel)

This One Is a Riot

JOE FRISCO, he of the inevitable cigar and derby, brings to the talkie short subject field one of the best comedy sketches of the talking age. Joe, who has quite some reputation along Broadway for his impromptu wise cracks, gives an impersonation of Helen Morgan that is unbeatable. Another skit, "Amateur Night," and a few of his well known cigar tricks are included in this reel of many laughs.

Where comedy is needed this will fit.

"Vengeance"

(Vitaphone No. 3799—1 Reel)

Good Short Thrill Drama

AN incident from circus life has been screened in dialogue with punches aplenty. A tight-rope act, high in the air, with the villian conspiring to "get" the strong man by causing a mishap in midair has been done with rapid-fire action. Warner Richmond, Gardner James and Natalie Moorhead put this one over with a bang.

A good comedy will go big with this one.

"The Operation"

(Vitaphone No. 947—1 Reel)

Clever Variety

A VENTRILOQUIST makes his appearance in dialogue. Edgar Bergen, supported by his dummy "Charlie McArthur," offers one of the best novelty short reel subjects yet resulting from the out-louds. "Charlie" is operated upon and some clever comedy lines result from his taking the ether. It's a comedy playlet that may be coupled with any high-class program. It will be received with applause in keeping with its clean-cut calibre.

Will stand alone in any comedy notch.

MILWAUKEE—Strand (1,406), 25 and 60 cents, 7 days. Other attractions, Fox Movietone News, Polly Moran and Marie Dressler in "Dangerous Females." Weather, clear and cold. Opposition, "General Crack," "The River," "Phantom of the Opera." "Pointed Heels," "Most Immoral Lady," "Condemned." Rating, 115%.

TROY, N. Y.—Proctor's (2,000), 25c-60c, 4 days. Other attractions, vaudeville acts. Opposition, "Condemned," "Navy Blues." Rating, 112%.

Ad Tips—The title and the stars were played up strong with window cards, letters to the rural districts and 24 sheets. The audiences liked it and the comedy went over big with men as well as women. All types liked it.—C. D. Gerraty, Mgr., Orpheum, DesMoines.

Isle of Lost Ships (F.N.)

BUFFALO—Hippodrome (3,000), 7 days, 60c. Other attractions, vaudeville, Fox Movietone News, comedy. Weather, mild. Opposition, "Dynamite," "Hit the Deck," "Behind the Make-Up," "Love Parade." Rating, 155%.

VANCOUVER—New Orpheum (2,881), 25c-$1.00, 6 days. Other attractions, 5 vaudeville acts, featuring Jack Pepper, Calvin Winter and his music, Path Sound News. Ivy Evans at the Wurlitzer. Weather, cold and wet. Opposition, "Welcome Danger," "Paris," "Sunny Side Up," British Guild Players. Rating, 80%.

Kibitzer, The (Par.)

BALTIMORE—Loew's Century (3,221), 6 days, 25 and 60 cents. Other attractions, Fox Movietone and M-G-M News; Loew-Publix unit "Les Parfums," headed by Wesley Eddy; organlogue by Maurice, "Adam's Eve" (Paramount all-talking comedy), scenic, orchestra. Weather, heavy snow Monday and Thursday, otherwise clear, cloudy, cold. Opposition (screen), "Grand Parade," "Darkened Rooms," "Lost Zeppelin," "Box of Pandora," "The Sap," "Sunny Side Up," "Melody Man," "Sally," "Chasing Rainbows." Stage, "Pygmalion," Connie's "Hot Chocolates," Jack Reid and his "Record Breakers," various concerts and artists at the Lyric. Rating, 107%.

DES MOINES—Strand (1,100), 4 days, 20 and 30 cents. Other attractions, "Sporting Youth," "Live Ghosts," Pathe Sound News. Opposition, "Most Immoral Lady," "Playing Around," "Sally," "Hot for Paris," "Love Parade." Weather, snow. Rating, 90%.

Ad Tips—Exploit title with names of principal players. One stunt you can use to popularize the title is to have cards printed giving bearer the right to butt into all kinds of arguments and give advice generally as he is a kibitzer. Have these distributed. When newspaper ads are flashed explain when a kibitzer is in them, and, explain, here is a comedy-romance concerning a Smart Alec who knows all the answers. His troubles are your laughs. A convulsing comedy. Use line cut of Green's head with cigar in mouth in upper left of newspaper ads with black shield panel beside head and the title and stars in white on it. In upper right and lower left use type matter. Audience appeal was found to be particularly strong due to the clever way Harry Green handled his role. They liked it immensely here.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Gen'l Mgr., Loew's Century, Baltimore.

SAN FRANCISCO—Granada, 50, 65 and 90 cents, 7 days. Other attractions, "Casey at the Bat," all-talking comedy; Frank Siegrest and his syncopators, sound news, organ recital. Weather, pleasant. Opposition, "Love Parade," "Love Comes Along," "Sunny Side Up," "Sally," "Not So Dumb," "Show of Shows," "Peacock Alley," "Night Ride." Rating, 150%.

Ad Tips—Feature as all-talking version of the stage hit, a comedy appealing to everyone. Harry Green, as star, great fun maker. Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton in support, additional drawing cards.—Hal Horne, Mgr., Granada, San Francisco.

Laughing Lady (Para)

KANSAS CITY—Newman (2,000), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions, Paramount screen song, "Afraid to Go Home"; Charlie Murray in "Duke of Dublin" (Christie talking comedy), Seymour Quartette singing "The Road to Mandalay." Weather, cold. Opposition, "They Had to See Paris," "Big Time," "Love Parade," "Love Comes Along." Rating, 100%.

Locked Door (U.A.)

LOS ANGELES—United Artists (2,100), first 5 days, 35 and 75 cents. Other attractions, Christie comedy, "Let Me Explain"; Paramount Sound News, organ concert. Opposition, "Love Parade," "Anna Christie," "Not So Dumb," "Son of the Gods," "Hit the Deck," "Dark Streets." Weather, fine. Rating, 99%.

OMAHA—World (2,500), 25c-50c, 7 days. Other attractions, "Dangerous Females" (Paramount), "Song Writers' Revue" (M-G-M), Pathe News. Weather, fair. Opposition, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Burning Up," "Seven Days Leave," "The Sky Hawk." Rating, 100%.

TACOMA—Fox Colonial (965), 7 days, 25 and 75 cents. Added attractions, "Ship Ahoy" (Pathe); Charley Chase in "Crazy Feet," "Enchanted" (Tiffany color symphony), and Fox Movietone News. Weather, very bad, icy streets. Opposition, "Love Parade," "Lost Zeppelin" and "His First Command." Rating, 150%.

Ad Tips—This was a natural here as O'Brien is here in this locality making another picture. Tie-up with one paper for kid matinee on O'Brien's invitation. Featured star and Zane Grey in additional advertising. Appeal general.—Doug Kimberley, Mgr., Fox Colonial, Tacoma.

Ad Tips—Placed one thousand "Wanted, dead or alive," cards in windows and also used another thousand snowbirds. Preview for school kids in morning and made them all "lone star rangers." Zane Grey name and title big in all advertising. Audience appeal, general.—Lionel Wasson, Mgr., World, Omaha.

Lost Zeppelin (Tiffany)

BALTIMORE—Keith's (3,016), 6 days, starting with Sunday midnight show, 25 and 50 cents. Shown here after one week at the Auditorium at $1.50 top. Other attractions, Fox Movietone News. Weather, heavy snow Monday and Thursday; cloudy, clear and cold otherwise. Opposition (screen), "Grand Parade," "The Kibitzer," "Darkened Rooms," "Box of Pandora," "The Sap," "Sunny Side Up," "Melody Man," "Sally," "Chasing Rainbows." DES MOINES—Paramount (1,700), 3 days, 25, 35, 50 and 60 cents. Other attractions, "Scotch" (Educ'l comedy), Paramount News, special arrangement of "Annie Laurie," overture. Opposition, "The Kibitzer," "Most Immoral Lady," "Playing Around," "Sally," "Hot for Paris." Weather, snow. Rating, 90%.

HOUSTON—Metropolitan (2,512), 25 and 50 cents, 7 days. Inauguration of all-sound policy. Other attractions, Pathe Sound News, sound cartoon. Weather, warm, some rain. Opposition, "Bishop Murder Case," "Great Gabbo," and "Playing Around." Rating, 150%.

KANSAS CITY—Royal (900), 25c-60c, 14 days (second week of picture in Kansas City). Other attractions, Paramount News. Weather, cold. Opposition, "They Had to See Paris," "Big Time," "Laughing Lady," "Love Comes Along." Rating, 110%.

LOS ANGELES—Paramount (3,596), 7 days, 35 to 65 cents. Other attractions, Milton Charles organ concert and Paramount Sound News. Opposition, "Anna Christie," "Son of the Gods," "The Locked Door," "Not So Dumb," "Hit the Deck," "Dark Streets." Weather, fine. Rating, 120%.

TACOMA—Fox Rialto (1,350), 7 days, 25 and 75 cents. Added attractions, "Mickie's Follies" (Mickey Mouse), and Fox Movietone News. Weather, very bad, snow, icy streets. Opposition, "Lost Zeppelin," "Lone Star Ranger" and "His First Command." Rating, 110%.

Ad Tips—We advertised this picture long in advance as "the finest screen vehicle," and as the first screen operetta. Also heralded Jeanette McDonald as one of the stage favorites of Broadway. Although the picture will please all, it will appeal more to adults.—William Gilliam, Mgr., Stillman, Cleveland.

Ad Tips—Audiences were found to be a little skeptical of this new name and, while Chevalier went over well with audiences, they were slow in starting in. A stunt which got newspaper space was a marriage license paid by Chevalier on the opening day of the show. The picture has entertainment.—Jack Roth, Mgr., Paramount, Des Moines.

Ad Tips—We doubled newspaper space in advertising, doubled billboard, engineered newspaper ad tie-ups, played song hits by orchestra a week in advance, and gave two midnight previews (percentage does not consider preview returns), and sent telegram passes to all newspaper critics and prominent citizens. Also issued few billboard passes, yard long and 18 inches wide. Played up Chevalier. "Gay with comedy, glittering, intimate screen musical romance of love behind a throne" was the line. Appeal is to everybody, every class.—E. E. Collins, Mgr., Metropolitan, Houston.

Marriage Playground (Para)

Stage, "Pygmalion," Connie's "Hot Chocolates," Jack Reid and his "Record Breakers," various concerts and artists at the Lyric. Rating, 75%.

Ad Tips—Use ad cut No. 24, copy of which is shown in press book and revise this to suit your needs. Cut and top line were left intact with the star's name as arranged but the copy was changed to bring out "Elaborate scenes in Technicolor" and that this is Lew Fields' stage success based on the life of a master musician. Use border of musical notes in white against black, place signature of theatre at top. Plenty of chances to tie-up with musical stores, radio, phonograph and record dealers. Get newspapers to run contest on jazz or classic music. Notify musical societies there is a picture that depicts the difference between the two kinds of music. Audience appeal is very strong for all.—Frank Price, Jr., Mgr., Rivoli, Baltimore.

Ad Tips—Played this one up with the innumerable ideas always offered in connection with a Lloyd comedy. The Chinatown angle was used here to good effect and, of course, large dodgers showing Harold in his heretofore inevitable spectacles. The thrill element in the picture was played up with almost as much prominence as the always-present Lloyd comedy. Lloyd always predominated the stunts used.

A National Association of Showmen Meeting in MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"What's the Difference?"

First we have the already well known three or four thousand seat palace with all the trimmings and decorations that go with it.

Then we have the little three or four hundred seat "shootin' gallery" without said trimmings and decorations, but nevertheless cozy and inviting in neatness and cleanliness.

What's the difference?

Both houses are doused in darkness or near darkness about 95 per cent of the time they are open to the public for business.

So it all simmers down to the point that the screen of each type house is the real centre of interest and what is projected thereon (ritzy expression, eh wot?) constitutes what the cash customers have paid their good, hard-earned money to see.

So it should behoove us to pay a lot more attention to the projection and the screen show in the smaller houses because we must overcome that advantage the big hippodromes have over the little guy in the way of draperies, settings, lighting effects and a cup of coffee (in the language of the classics—better known as the show business).

Some managers and exhibitors have a peculiar inferiority-complex (wot a word) that because their theatre happens to be small (in admission as well as in size) they must run it like a dump. They're rather damp, if we may be pardoned this unusual slang, because they can make their little houses perfect sound palaces. It's cheaper for them to carpet their houses, to hang a few drapes, to mask in their screens, to give good projection, and, in fact to do anything that the bigger boys do because the relative costs are so much smaller. Unfortunately, they refuse to recognize this angle.

Is it not a fact that you men in the small houses are running the same product as the big theatres?

Of course you are. Then why not project it on the screen equally as well, if not better? You employ projectionists. You have good projecting equipment, or should have any way.

Try to get away from your nickelodeon ideas and tactics. Work along the same lines as your big brothers. Make your little houses as comfy and cozy as you can. Lend a feeling of intimacy that they can never achieve with their vast foyers and auditoriums. Train your employees to be warm and cordial, to try to cultivate that smiling welcome to the patrons when they come into the theatre.

Yule Found Mgr. Frederick Ready to Boost Business

When Santa Claus visited Pittsfield, Mass., he found out that much of his work had already been accomplished by Manager C. Frederick of the Capitol Theatre.

Each child visiting the theatre's Santa Claus workshop was requested by Santa Claus to write his or her name, address and Christmas wishes on a slip of paper; the wishes referring to what the child wanted Santa to give him or her.

The thought occurred to Manager Frederick that many of the parents would be glad to know of their child's wishes fastened the slip of paper to it and mailed it to the parents.

The letter sent to the parents read, "My dear Friend:—At this season of the year I, Santa Claus, am paying my annual visit at the Capitol Theatre, where I have established a workshop. During my stay here I am visited by hundreds of children entering the theatre, who leave their names and their Christmas wishes. Attached hereto are the wants of one of the members of your family. Believing that this may be of value to you in the selection of your child's Christmas gift, and that the child may have its wishes fulfilled on Christmas morning, I am passing it along to you. With the season's best wishes for you and yours. Sincerely, Santa Claus—from his workshop at the Capitol Theatre."

The Santa Claus letter proved an excellent goodwill builder as was evidenced by the many complimentary telephone calls and personal remarks concerning it.

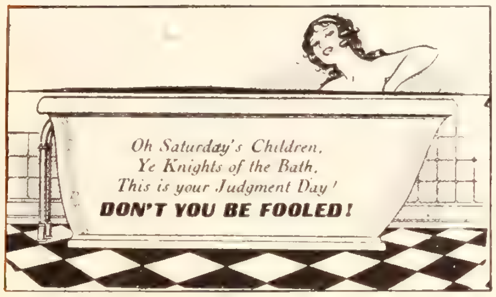
Novelty Herald Was Effective for Matthew F. Anysh

Matthew F. Anysh, manager of the Superba Theatre in San Diego, Calif., writes in to inform us that he has been transferred back to his former stamping grounds, the Plaza Theatre, in the same city, replacing Jack Rosenberg, who goes to the Mission Theatre.

We're glad to know that you're back in your old theatre, Anysh, and we know you will continue with the same policy of excellent service that you have always observed and given to your patrons at the Plaza and Superba houses.

Anysh has considerably enclosed a sample of the "trick" herald which he used in connection with "Show of Shows" when that picture played at the Superba. We are reproducing the herald below because in conjunction with the same type of "nut" herald we recently ran in these pages, which was submitted by Bill Levey, we ran an article stressing the laugh getting and business producing qualities of this type of advertising.



Oh Saturday's Children,
Ye Knights of the Bath,
This is your Judgment Day!
DON'T YOU BE FOOLED!

The herald consisted of an imprinted picture of a girl in a bath tub, with suitable "warning" copy on the outside. When the bath tub flap was pulled down it revealed, instead of what naturally would be expected, something entirely different, for what looked sensational changes to a picture of a chorus girl displaying her "hold everything" before two tired business men who are sitting at a night club table admiring the chorine's shapely pins.

A herald of this sort is always good for a real belly laugh and if distributed in plenty of advance time, is certain to be held onto and it does much toward bringing additional business to the box office. The novelty causing them to pass from hand to hand.

We're sure Mr. Anysh will be glad to supply any of you boys with a copy of the herald if you'll drop him a note at the Plaza.

Thank you, Anysh, for letting us see this one and don't forget to send in a picture of yourself when you send us the next news of your activities out in San Diego.

Pardon the Delay But Here We Are With Oscar Linn

We know we're late, Oscar; in fact, we're more than late in announcing that the Columbia Theatre in Bloomsburg Pennsylvania, managed by Oscar M. Linn, has inaugurated a sound and talking picture policy, in order to keep in step with the rest.

Anyway, we can say that we predicted a big jump in receipts because when we looked at the attractive newspaper ads you laid out for your new policy campaign we said "There's something that will sell them."

Oscar started off his campaign in the newspapers by using teaser ads requesting that the reader turn to page 10. The teaser carried a cut of a newsboy shouting his announcements and showing an open paper bearing the request. On page 10 a cut showed a man pointing to a sign announcing the coming of talking pictures at the Columbia.

On the opening day Oscar carried a quarter-page, well made up newspaper ad, announcing the opening attraction. The local newspapers commented editorially on the growth of the Columbia and their keeping step with the trend of the times. Much free publicity was also received.

We're sorry, Oscar, that we had to hold this up until now, but we've been so busy wading through material that yours must have been mislaid in the shuffle. By now you're probably packing them in and as the talkies are opening up greater avenues of exploitation we know that in the future we can expect a lot of good material from you. How about it, Oscar?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Pepping Up Charlotte (?) Quite an Art With Smart

Hugh J. Smart turned in several excellent stunts in an endeavor to publicize "Dynamite," playing at the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N. C.

One of the more important stunts executed by Smart was a tie-up with the Atwater Kent radio distributor in this immediate section on a ten-page section in one of the local papers—and a radio show.

Nine radios with small cards were displayed in the lobby and one on the mezzanine floor for one week. The theatre also ran in the newsreel a minute and a half trailer showing scenes of the Atwater Kent factories, how the radios are made, etc. In return the Atwater Kent gave the theatre a three-column cut showing a picture of theatre front billed for "Dynamite," on the first page of the radio section.

Practically every ad in the radio section carried a box announcing the "Dynamite" engagement at the Imperial. The theatre profited by about 90 inches of free space in the form of stories and boxes in the ads as well as being the recipient of an Atwater Kent radio which was given away during Imperial Gift Week, which was the same week.

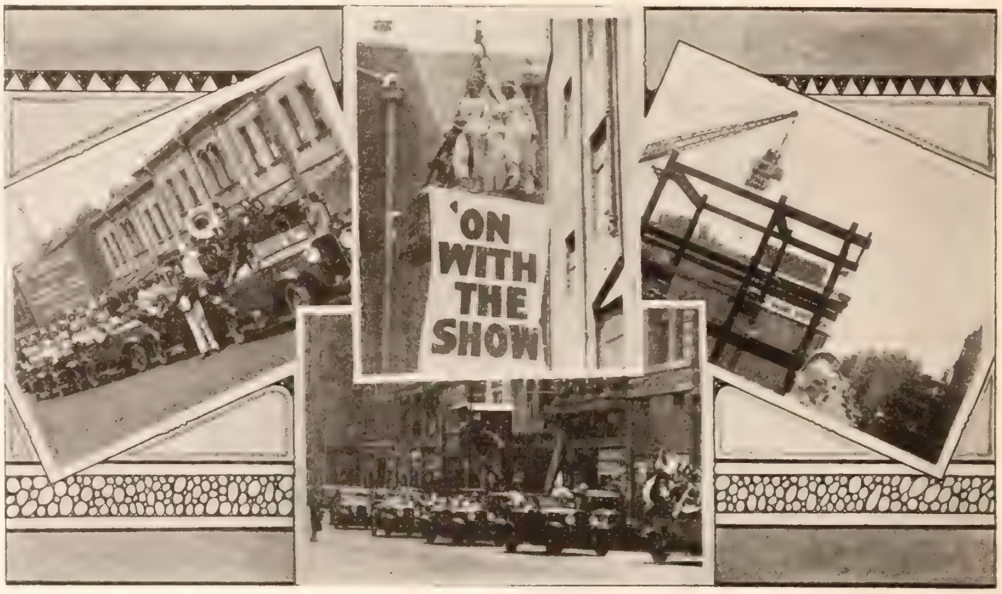
In trying to stimulate business during this unusually very bad week (Dec. 16-21) of the year, the theatre sponsored an "Imperial Gift Week." Six local stores donated one gift each which were given away from the stage; one each night between the first and second shows.

Patrons entering the theatre between six and nine o'clock kept one-half of their tickets; the other half being deposited in a special box. Lucky numbers were drawn each night by a local "dwarf comedian," who is very well known in Charlotte. After awarding the gift, the comedian told one or two jokes and mentioned the store giving the present and said a few words about the store, its merchandise, etc.

Smart tied up the classified department of the Observer which resulted in our getting a two-column, six-inch ad daily for a week in advance on "Dynamite." The newspaper is giving passes to parties taking want ads that run for a week and is a cash ad. Passes are limited to 20 a week. This tie-up is slated to continue for an indefinite number of weeks.

A special newspaper ad appearing in the opening day of picture was rather appealing. The ad read: "To the Citizens of Charlotte—Warning—You are hereby warned to take heed to the announcement that, beginning today and continuing for three days, Cecil B. DeMille's spectacular all-talking production DYNAMITE will be presented five times daily at the Imperial, etc."

All type in the ad was small except the lines, "To the Citizens of Charlotte," "WARNING" and "DYNAMITE."



The above layout of cuts clearly demonstrates the unusual methods which are being applied by the Capitol Theatre in Melbourne, Australia, to exploit the picture "On with the Show."

This type of exploitation is undoubtedly creating a tremendous amount of interest, and we would call your particular attention to the live figures on top of the hoist with the banner attached to it. You can see this on both the close up as well as a long shot from the derrick.

With this type of exploitation and showmanship being engineered we would welcome the opportunity of hearing more often from the group of men who are responsible for engineering this type of stuff. Here's hoping that they become steady and regular contributors to the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages in MOTION PICTURE NEWS from week to week.

Local "Shots" Proved B. O. Magnet for F. F. Smith

Manager F. F. Smith tied a local photographer to a stunt that reaped mutual benefits and especially to the theatre in publicizing "Marriage Playground" playing at the Publix-Melba, Dallas, Tex.

The checks were good for $2.50 on any order for pictures at the studio at the time of sitting. 5,000 of these checks were given out in the theatre a week in advance during Christmas week.

The upper part of the check carried copy, "This check, if presented at our studio at time of sitting, will be accepted as partial payment on an order of photographs amounting to $10 or more. And the lower part of the check carried copy about the picture, "Have your picture taken and see one of the most natural talking pictures ever made. A glimpse of real pleasure hunting men and wives. 'MARRIAGE PLAYGROUND' with Mary Brian and Frederic March—theatre, play dates."

The lower part of the check also had a notation to the effect "that the first 25 people to take advantage of this wonderful opporunity will be the guests of the Montgomery Studios at the Melba Theatre to see this emotional, all-talking, fascinating story of modern children and their parents."

If you are looking for a new angle on an attraction like the one described above, then here's something that we would recommend any day in the week to the real live-wire manager. Smith put it over because he used his showmanship sense and unquestionably you can do as well with it, if you take the little trouble it requires to put it over in the right way. Many thanks, Smith, and shoot along some more of your stuff as fast as you can get it together.

MORRIS SHULMAN says:

". . . but we will just have to tell you again and again how much we enjoy your weekly visit, via the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB, in MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WE TRIED IT ON A DOG

PROBABLY there aren't a dozen readers of this magazine who haven't at some time faced the problem of trying to house-break a dog.

We've gone through the experience at our house; and from our trials and tribulations we've learned something that may help you—as it helped us—not only in dealing with dogs, but in dealing with human beings.

We've had all sorts of dogs around our place, but the dog we all love most is Pat, a wire-haired terrier pup, which we got for our son. From the minute the boy selected Pat as his dog, the pup walked right into the heart of every member of the family. Pat was the cutest, most affectionate little fellow you ever saw.

This article is reprinted by permission of International Magazine Company, Inc. (Hearst's International combined with Cosmopolitan), published February, 1930. Copyright 1930.

To Ray Long, Editor of Cosmopolitan, we are indebted for allowing us to use this article. Its application to the theatre-game was so plain that we could not rest until we received Mr. Long's kind permission to use it. Read it over, line for line, and see if it does not carry a wallop like a pile-driver when it comes to handling employees. "Chick"

But he had one grave fault—one very grave fault. He was bright as a dollar in everything else, but all our efforts to house-break him seemed absolutely futile.

We tried all the old standard forms of punishment. No effect. We tried the new theory of reasoning with him. No effect. He'd be abject in his contrition, beg for forgiveness—and an hour later have the house in an uproar again.

We were in despair. Any suggestion of keeping him in the kennel brought an anguished protest from Ray Junior. Pat was his dog and he wanted his dog with him night and day.

The rest of us wanted him, too; but we got to the point where we were almost afraid we'd have to banish Pat altogether.

Then we had an inspiration. We decided to quit punishing the pup for his misdeeds and to play on his vanity by praising him effusively when he fulfilled the object of taking him for a walk. It worked! Worked like a charm! Today Pat is perfect. He is so greedy for that fulsome praise that he's almost humorous in his efforts to earn it. The household is happy again. I didn't realize until it was over what a very human situation we had gone through.

How often we try to get results from those with whom we work or live by raising Cain for their mistakes, and by being stingy with praise for their achievements.

One of my friends runs a business in Cleveland. His star salesman was one of the most likable men I ever met. He could sell more goods than any other two men on the staff. But he had one fault: he would go off on a bender every now and then. And when I say bender, I mean bender!

The boss threatened to fire him. His wife threatened to divorce him. But always he was so penitent that they never carried out the threats.

I told my friend about Pat.

He tried the scheme on his salesman. When this chap, sober, brought in an order, he made twice as much fuss over it as he would over an ordinary order. He told everyone on the staff about it. Once, for an exceptionally big order, he gave a dinner in honor of the salesman.

That man today can't be tempted to take a drink. In fact, he's become almost a pest to those who do.

There are a lot of Pats in the world—four-legged and two-legged. A cheer gets a lot farther with them than a call-down.

If you have one in your office—or your home—try this method on him. You may get results that will surprise you. R. L.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

— Thanks to Dave Davidson —

We have every reason to suspect that in the very near future the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages will be all the better for a most interesting series of instructions on newspaper advertising makeup through the courtesy of Dave Davidson who is connected with the Grey Davidson Company in Chicago, Ill.

According to one of Dave's recent letters, he has such a series in mind, and we have hastened to assure him that it will be more than appreciated, by not only the Chairman, but by every member and reader of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. Those of you boys who are always anxious and alert to improve your newspaper advertising should look forward to this series with as much interest as we at CLUB headquarters do.

Thank you, Dave, and here's hoping the answer to our letter arrives in the affirmative mighty soon. Regards to Jack Hess, Bill Adler and the rest of our friends out in Chicago, not to forget Hal Young and his "Bee-Hive" branch of the National Screen Service.

M. G. Lee's Student Tie-Up a Fine Gag To Boost Good-Will

Step up, fellows, and meet M. G. Lee, live wire General Manager of the Lee Amusement Co., operators of the Lee Theatre, in Eufaula, Ala., the Lee in Dawson, Ga., and the Lee in Cuthbert Ga.

For his initial contribution Lee has supplied us with an idea that listens good. He secured a tie-up with the schools in the three towns where the Lee theatres are located and arranged to furnish to the school teachers a card which was to be awarded to the students who were exceptionally well up in their studies and which would entitle the holder to a free admission to the local Lee theatre. And from the letters of commendation which Lee received from the principals and teachers the result more than justified the experiment, as the students became more diligent and consequently their marks went up. This is an excellent idea and we are very glad to have received it. It can be worked at any time and in addition it has the potent drawing power of good will that is always instrumental in swelling the box office.

Henriette Ray – Teacher
Coleman, Ga. School Jan. 10 and it will be accepted as one admission to Date
LEE THEATRE
DAWSON — CUTHBERT — EUFAULA
if presented within 30 days. Not transferable

We are reproducing a sample of the card which Lee sent to the schools. It is a neat looking card, printed in black and white and its beauty lies in the fact that it will be unnecessary to shell out a lot of dough to have them printed up. Remember this gag, boys—it's worth saving and using. In order to forestall any complications Lee sent a personal letter to the principals and teachers requesting their co-operation to the plan and asking permission to innovate it in the classrooms. The consent blank which was returned signed with the name and address of the teacher is another angle on Lee's showmanship methods, as they could be used by him to send a personal letter to the faculties whenever he was showing a picture of more than ordinary interest.

We are well pleased to hear from you, "M. G.," and we feel sure that the rest of the boys join us in saying "Howdy," as we welcome you into the Club, and we want to hear more of your livewire activities down in Georgia and Alabama.

Tom McDonald's Westlake Reacts To Montanans Biz.

It's been so long since we heard from our old friend Tom ("Mac")) McDonald, manager of the Fox Westlake Theatre in Los Angeles, that we were getting set to send out a searching party for him. And then he pops up with a bang and a couple of "yippies" (we know that's the theme song of Montana, Tom).

Mac informs us that he has been a very busy man out around the Westlake district, what with his newly acquired job of President of the Westlake Business Association. As if a theatre manager hasn't enough to do—he's still gotta be a president. Anyway, we want to pass on Tom's latest activity at the Westlake.

Each year a delegation of about two thousand Montanans visit Southern California, and they originally hailed from the American and People's Theatres in Butte, and the Great Falls and Shelby in Montana, he conceived the idea of being a personal greeter to Los Angeles and the Westlake.

He had a quantity of heralds, made up in blazing red, printed on a manila background which bore copy reading:

MONTANANS!
Welcome to Los Angeles.
DURING YOUR STAY IN OUR CITY—YOU WILL, OF COURSE, VISIT ALL OF THE FOX THEATRES.
PARTICULARLY THE
FOX WESTLAKE
Alvarado Street facing Westlake Park.
(Take S, R, or H Cars at 7th and Broadway, west to Alvarado)
Tom F. McDonald, formerly of Butte (American and People's Theatres); Missoula Grand and Isis Theatres); Great Falls and Shelby (Great Falls Tribune), will be at the door to greet you!
HERE IS THE LINE-UP FOR A COUPLE OF WEEKS:
Mon., Tues. and Wed., Jan. 20-21-22—GLORIA SWANSON in "THE TRESPASSER."

Through the courtesy of Mac's friend, Charles Wuerz, who heads the local Fox houses in San Bernardino, Calif., Mac was able to effect a tie-up whereby the heralds would be passed out at San Bernardino by boys and girls, who would meet every train and hand these "Heralds of Welcome" to the visitors.

Mac. used headline type to emphasize the highlights of his heralds. Another feature which he promoted at the Westlake in order to assure the patronage of the visitors who remain in Southern California till April 8th was a Montana night in which he featured many celebrities. The Chamber of Commerce sponsored a "Montana Dance of Welcome," and Mac tied in with them, being able to distribute plenty of advertising material.

There are many more novel features being planned for the visitors and Mac announces his intention of seeing that the Westlake is in on them all. Which is the type of aggressive showmanship that helps swell box offices and always results in salary increases.

Oak Mac, we're glad to have heard from you. And we want to hear some more about your friends from Montana.

"Proxy" Stunt Was A Knock-Out for Manager Solomon

Manager Solomon exploited "The Love Parade" in a big way when he promoted an itinerary contest for the picture when playing the Paramount Theatre, Youngstown, O.

Chevalier's "proxy" was built by the theatre sign artist and clothed by a Cleveland costumer. Two very pretty French girls were hired as escorts; the girls speaking both English and French fluently.

The local paper tied in on the stunt—calling it an "Itinerary Contest." The story and cut broke—asking for essays as to how Chevalier's "proxy" should spend the day as a guest of the city. Copies of this story were sent to all public officials and prominent business men. This was followed up by newspaper stories Tuesday and Wednesday. And on Thursday the winners were announced with the complete itinerary.

Contacts with merchants were made so that the visits could be anticipated. The merchants also exhibited cards in their windows signifying each visit as to time and place.

The day before opening of picture, Solomon took the "proxy" to Niles which is the nearest town to Youngstown. The "proxy" was placed in the care of his two young lady escorts and they boarded the train for Youngstown. Solomon and his crew hopped in a car and rushed back to Youngstown where he was met at the Erie station by a photographer, reporters, theatre staff and a host of people. Accompanied by the beat of drums, the parade moved slowly to the Ohio hotel, where a suite had been reserved for "Mr. Proxy." A lobby reception was followed by a visit to the Mayor, Police and Fire Chiefs.

The sign artist made a replica of a telegram which was received from Maurice Chevalier. This replica was carried with the "party" on the entire trip and read at every stop.

Crowds outside of theatre waiting for Chevalier's Proxy to arrive. Note display of French Tricolor and American Flags. A marvelous gag boys—read the story of how Solomon put this one over with a "bang".

The auto, chauffeur and incidental expenses were furnished gratis through the courtesy of Willys-Knight. Used a new 1930 sport model and had the car draped entirely on the outside with French and American flags.

At 5 P. M. the Boy Scout buglers greeted Chevalier's proxy in front of the Paramount Theatre. From 7 to 7:30 P. M., the Rayen High School Band of 67 pieces serenaded the coming of the proxy. The photo taken at Erie station of the proxy, two feminine escorts and official greeter at 10 A. M. appeared the same day in the next issue of the Telegram.

The itinerary contest proved one of the biggest publicity stunts ever pulled off in Youngstown and certainly proved an excellent medium in publicizing Chevalier in "The Love Parade."

STILL MORE ABOUT ORGANISTS!

Just as in the case of Trailers, we find ourselves in the midst of a most unusual turmoil about the cause of the poor abandoned organ, whose cause we so innocently championed.

But, right up to the moment that they "shoot the juice" into the electric chair and we take the count, we will continue to shout our faith in those things in which we feel that our faith is justified and in which our members and readers give us their moral support.

One of the "out-of-town" boys hit N. Y. the other day and I piloted him to a neighborhood movie palace. One of those 2500 seat babies that cost plenty to build but which was now running a plain "all sound" policy.

The show was great, but aside from an Italian band in the Movietone News, NOT A SINGLE BAR OF MUSIC was heard in that theatre during the entire program.

Sounds rather funny when you stop a moment to think it over. What do you say?

The theatre. A gathering place where music predominated for so many years, and here we sat and watched a show (interesting it's true) but without a bit of real music to break that awful monotony of "talkies-talkies-and-more-talkies."

On the way out we chatted with the manager, a peach of a chap, who volunteered the information that the theatre boasted a $26,000 organ. One of the finest of its kind. In fact he was all for using it regardless of the circuit's policy of "no musicians." But the home office said "NO." Unnecessary expense, and the other banana-oil that goes with a lot of home office baloney.

My guest heartily agreed with the manager and myself that since the cost of a regular orchestra was pretty much out of question, an organist would be a welcome relief to his shows and he'd certainly like to have one.

And that was our contention to a "T".

If you have an organ in your house, get a good organist and use it. Feature it. Plug it. Play it up in all your advertising. It'll bring you dough at the b.o. and it will lend a touch of entertainment and beauty to your shows.

We care not who gets mad about it. We insist it's Showmanship and damned good business.

Paul Sigler Joins Club and Will Be An Active Member

Paul Sigler, manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Elwood, Ind., for the F. J. Rembusch Enterprises, is one of the new members in the ROUND TABLE CLUB. Mr. Sigler is located in a community composed of ten thousand people and he tells us that he can use a lot of new ideas. How about it, boys? Got some material you can shoot down to Sigler? The Alhambra was recently wired, which shows that the Rembusch Enterprises believe in keeping up with the times.

We're very glad to welcome you into the Club, Sigler, and we want you to know that we'll always have our eye on you and the Alhambra. Shoot us a photograph with your next letter so that we can let the rest of the boys see what you look like. And we wish you lots of luck.

Brock's Two-Color Advt. a Novelty In Knoxville, Tenn.

William S. Brock, manager of the Publix Tennessee Theatre in Knoxville, Tenn., pulled a most unusual scoop in the line of newspaper advertising by arranging through his newspaper to run a two-colored ad on the regulation theatrical page.

This was decidedly unusual and we feel that it is worthy of more than passing mention. In showing the ad itself, the portion of the girl with checkered costume, holding the "Show of Show" sign, appeared in a bright red with the rest of the ad in black and white. This made a most impressive appearance, and while Bill did not tell us how he succeeded in selling the newspaper this idea, or whether it was very expensive, it is at least attractive enough to call for special comment.

Gelabert, Jr. Still Keeping Busy Down In Porto Rico

Pedro Gelabert, Jr., managing director of the San Jose Theatre in San Juan, Porto Rico, writes in to let us know of his activities out in the Philippines and, judging from the photographs and press matter he encloses, he must be very busy.

Among the photographs Pedro sends us is one showing a view of his office with his membership certificate in the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB, occupying a prominent place on the wall. Indeed, it is occupying so prominent a place that we can see it in two places. But upon looking at the photo more minutely we notice that it is a double exposure. You must think a lot of us, Pedro, to want to appear as if you possess two certificates. Why not send us in some stuff that would be worthy of two men. However, we want you to know that we appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending us in the photographs and we expect to hear more of your activities at the San Jose Theatre in your next letter.

Cigarette Co-Op Made Money For M. E. Remley

M. E. Remley, manager of the Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, Illinois, made a tie-up with the Liggett and Meyers Tobacco distributors for the free distribution of ten thousand Chesterfield cigarettes in his lobby, during the engagement of RIO RITA recently.

After arranging for the cigarettes, Remley engaged a girl entertainer for $5 per day, had her wear a Spanish costume and pass cigarettes to patrons as they entered the theatre. The girl was a clever conversationalist and according to Remley, attracted much attention and word-of-mouth comment.

Seems like the Chesterfield tie-up has become mighty popular lately, but if it is good patron reaction at the Box Office, then we can't help recommending it to our members and readers in the hopes that they in turn can benefit by the suggestion.

Thanks for your tip, Remley, and shoot along some more.

"Gelston Batting For Brown"—Not Bad For Liberty

When Dick Brown left the Liberty Theatre out in East Liberty, Pittsburgh, to take over the reins of the big de luxe Enright Theatre, he certainly left a great booster of his in the person of James P. Gelston, the assistant manager.

We were almost inclined to publish verbatim Mr. Gelston's first letter when Dick left for the Enright, but we kind of felt that it was written more in the spirit of a personal nature than one to be republished in print on our page, and we withheld it at that time.

We have now heard again from Mr. Gelston and from him we learn that Mr. E. J. Golden is now manager of the Liberty Theatre.

However, the purpose of this story was not to talk about the past doings of Mr. Brown or what Mr. Golden accomplished since he arrived at the theatre, because that information is something that we lack at this writing but we do want the whole industry to know how well Mr. Gelston fills Mr. Brown's shoes in between times when it was up to him to run the theatre after Brown left for the Enright.

He conferred with his sign man about the attraction "Two Black Crows" and they both got together with the result that the photographs show a long shot of the side of the marquee and a close up under the marquee as to how they dressed up the Liberty Theatre for this attraction.

You have probably seen many dressings and displays on these pages on the same picture but there is a certain attractiveness to what Gelston and his sign man accomplished that is really worthy of more than your passing attention. For this reason we are delighted to pass it along and to congratulate Jimmy on his versatility and ability to step into the manager's booth when he was given the responsibility pending the appointment of the new man.

You know, Mr. Gelston, that Assistant Managers are eligible to membership in the ROUND TABLE CLUB, and it would be our pleasure to have Mr. Golden propose you or certify you for membership in the CLUB. You are the type of chap that will get far in the show business or we are missing our guess by a long shot.

Thank you for your very thoughtful letters, and convey to our many friends out in Pittsburgh and the vicinity our kindest regards.

(Last Minute Note:—Just as we go to press, we received the membership application from E. J. Golden, new manager of the Liberty Theatre. We shall introduce him in a future issue on the Club pages.)

Moule's Marquee Expressed Greetings to Patrons

Ernie Moule, manager of the Brantford Theatre in Brantford, Ontario, Canada, has been considerate enough to forward us a photograph showing how he conveyed his theatre's Christmas and New Year's Greetings to the patrons of the Brantford as well as the residents of the town.

The marquee of the Brantford was attractively dressed with holiday greens, wreaths of evergreen were hung in the lobby, while the front of the theatre completely expressed the spirit of Christmas. Ernie used a novel touch on his marquee sign by dispensing with the attraction announcement and conveying his Christmas and New Year's greetings thereon. The sign read, "Season's Greetings," while directly above it another sign bore "1930."

As January will mark the tenth anniversary of the Temple Theatre, Ernie has arranged a neatly laid out black and white program which he used to carry a personal message from himself to his theatre staff and the patrons of the theatre and in which he pledges himself to secure the finest pictures and to maintain the excellent service the Temple has dispensed for the past ten years. The personal or open letter angle is an excellent idea, for not only does it show that a manager takes a decided interest in his patrons, but it also serves to gain the patron's confidence in the manager. In his program Ernie promises to furnish the residents with the latest in pictures and gives them a list of the treats in store for them.

We're glad to hear from you again, Ernie—and we hope you'll let us hear from you in the near future. And regarding my coming up and seeing you as I proposed doing some time ago, little did I know how I'd be swamped with material, and all the boys thoughtfully sending me more—of course, they'll never send me too much; but you can bet that if I can ever run up Canada way or anywhere near it we're going to get together and have that long deferred "palaver."

Marsline K. Moore's Tie-Up Brought Added B.O.Biz.

Marsline K. Moore used co-operative copy on stickers that made them go very fast. This was in connection with the advertising of "Dynamite," playing at the Worth Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.

Texas Christian University was playing its final game of the season, with Southern Methodist University. The Texas slogan as was evidenced on placards posted all over the campus and town was, "SMEAR S M U."

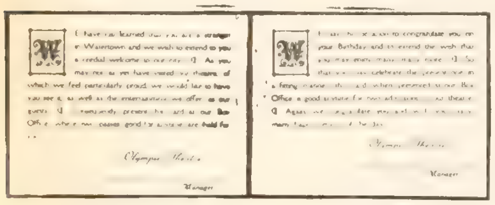
With this slogan in mind and knowing that not only the Texas students and the townspeople as well were imbued with the spirit that the winning of this game meant a great deal, Moore had stickers made up with copy reading, "SMEAR S M U and see DYNAMITE at the WORTH now."

Most everybody was anxious to get one of these windshield stickers on account of the "Smear S M U," but at the same time they were also advertising the picture.

"Kiddie Klub" a Wow for Tierney at Watertown

Among those successful in engineering "Kiddie Klub" ideas for the promotion of business in their theatres was F. W. Tierney, who manages the Olympic Theatre in Watertown, N. Y., for the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, and from all indications and reports he is doing very well at his task.

Among his other activities was an arrangement with the Chamber of Commerce whereby they furnished him each month with a list of out-of-towners who have moved into the city, and he immediately had the card which we are showing in the form of a cut with this story made up and mailed to these newcomers to Watertown. This is a marvelous good-will angle. And another that was equally effective was that of a birthday greeting which he sends to members of the local Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs.



We cannot stress too much the importance of these wonderful angles that Tierney has capitalized on for his theatre and circuit and we are certain that other members would do well to follow his example.

Getting back to the Kiddie Club angle, we can perhaps give you a better inside to what it is all about by showing you a reproduction of the front of the card which is delivered to the members of the Fox Olympic Kiddie Klub which meets every Saturday afternoon at the theatre.

Thank you, Tierney, and let's hope that these things are going over as big as we expect they would. It has all the earmarks of real business-getting angles and for that reason it should be bringing plenty into the Box Office in return for your effort.

Introducing S. F. Sutaria A Club Booster From India

It was only recently that we told you about S. F. Sutaria, manager of the Excelsior Theatre in Hyderabad, India, and keeping to his promise made in a previous letter, he has faithfully sent us his photograph which we had requested.

We are, therefore, pleased to have you make his acquaintance, via this photograph, and to feel that although he is located in a mighty far off spot, he is at heart one of the crowd, sitting around the ROUND TABLE each and every week in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The further activities of this showman as well as his brother managers down in India will be the topic of many interesting articles in the immediate future through MOTION PICTURE NEWS ROUND TABLE CLUB pages, and those of you who have found foreign suggestions interesting and profitable, will find that Mr. Sutaria's letters and stories are equally interesting and will make mighty good reading.

Wally Allen's Publicity Gave P. B. A Good Start

Wally Allen, in charge of exploitation and publicity for the Publix Theatre in Florida, put over a most remarkable campaign to inaugurate the gala winter season for the Florida Theatre down in the winter resort in that state.

The page on the left side of the cut was absolutely free of all cost to the theatre and yet it contained the theatre names and attractions currently showing. The second page on the right side is the paid ad of the Publix Theatres in Palm Beach and ties in very well with the entire section.

Looking through this section, we find some wonderful reading matter pertaining to the different theatres and the program and policy they will pursue during the coming season.

Its a fine piece of work, Wally, and it also works out along the lines that we often claimed it would. You're there with the publicity angle and you're giving the theatre plenty of breaks in this respect. Lets hear some more from you, but for God's sake stop telling us it is 81 degrees in Palm Beach, and that you're wearing a Palm Beach suit, while we're freezing to death and blowing our noses with colds in the head.

HERE'S A GOOD ONE:

"I have been an eager reader of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB pages ever since this wonderful section of the NEWS was started and I am glad to say that I have obtained lots of good ideas from other exhibitors through the CLUB pages. In fact, I think so much of the CLUB pages, that I have a file and this section is clipped from the NEWS every week and inserted in same for reference, which comes in mighty handy when there comes along a picture that the old 'idea factory' just can't put out an original on."

—TRAILERS AGAIN!—

Starting things seems to be a speciality with us these days and in this respect we might call attention to the box we recently ran about Trailers.

Back comes almost a hundred letters arguing the point pro and con and from all the mass of arguments we draw one conclusion: whose going to make up those attractive layouts and copy?

Well, we can't go into that phase beyond the point of saying that we KNOW of several trailer companies who are well-equipped to help you make your layouts and write your copy. You can even send them a rough draft of what you want to get "over" on your trailer message and they'll do the rest. That's service in any man's country.

Pay some more attention to your trailers and you're bound to create interest and respect for the messages you are trying to tell your patrons. But for the love-a-goodness DON'T use sloppy slides or cheap looking trailers or it will be a waste of time and money besides lowering the dignity of your house.

Maybe this will start another rumpus. Oke with us, says we, BUT what says you?

Waiter, another cup of coffee and a piece of "dunk."

Club Ideas Meant Money To Phil W. Kunze's House

Some of the CLUB correspondence contains some points that are so outstanding in our estimation as to warrant a real "rave" and the recent correspondence from Paul W. Kunze, who manages the State Theatre in Canton, Mass., was just one of those kind of letters.

One of the first things we would call attention to is the attractive circular which Paul turned out in connection with the inauguration of mid-week vaudeville at the State Theatre and how he made use of the batch of adjectives which were published as the first of a series in a most recent issue of the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages.

You will note the way he ties it in with this herald, and you can take our word for it, or else send for one of the heralds yourself, to prove our statement that it was the most unusual tie-up ever used along these lines.

The lay-out of various material used by Mr. Kunze at the State and shown with this article is self-explanatory and unquestionably speaks volumes for his ability as a showman, and his desire to capitalize on the experiences of his brother managers and members in the ROUND TABLE CLUB.

There were so many other outstanding angles to his recent activities that to attempt to incorporate them all into one story would mean an exclusive edition for his personal benefit, and that we cannot allow at this moment. However, we want him to know that we appreciate his thoughtfulness and we are glad to welcome him into the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB and look forward to his many future activities with a great deal of interest. His own photograph, however, is the only thing missing from this story and we hope he will rectify this delinquency by forwarding one by return mail.

Watch for some more information about this live-wire showman and ROUND TABLE CLUB member, and be assured that anything we have to say about him will be more than worthy of the time it takes you to read the story on these pages. There will be something of great importance about one of his recent stunts in an early issue of the NEWS, and until that time we will take leave of Paul and the State Theatre with our best wishes for his future success.

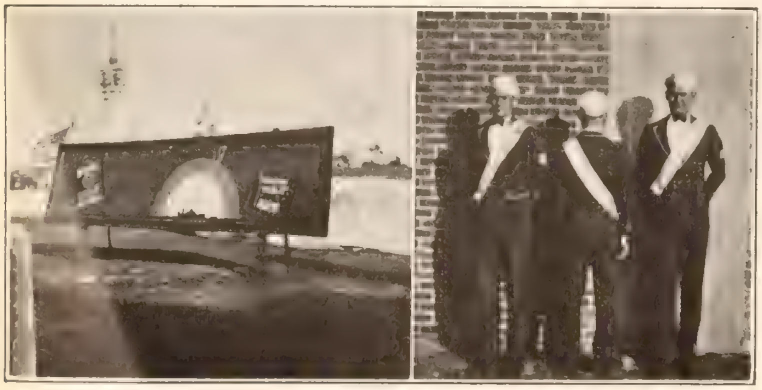
Local Tie-Up a Bid For Good-Will By Bolivar Hyde, Jr.

A tie-up with the local Chamber of Commerce was effected by Bolivar Hyde, Jr., enterprising manager for Polk Theatre in Lakeland, Florida, who secured permission from the local authorities to erect a huge billboard, in the heart of the Civic Center, which carried a message "The City of Lakeland Wishes you a Merry Christmas and A Happy and Prosperous 1930," and in addition, as you will note from the photograph it also served to plug the Polk's attractions for the week. The billboard of this type is an inexpensive medium of securing more than passing attention.

The other photograph accompanying this story is part of Hyde's exploitation campaign on "Navy Blues," for which he dressed his ushers with sailor hats and wearing banners over their uniforms, the boys paraded around the town plugging the picture.

Hyde was fortunate enough on the picture "Forward Pass" to enlist the services of the local high school football team, who had just won the State Championship, and who agreed to stage a parade down the street carrying a banner proclaiming their victory as well as the picture at the Polk. This proved a very effective aid toward swelling the weekly receipts. In addition to the football team tie-up, displays were arranged in sporting goods and hardware stores.



Thank you Bolivar, for being thoughtful enough to include a number of photographs with your material, and also for trying to get in touch with Wally Allen for us—but as you'll note on another page we managed to corner Wally; and believe us if he tries to hide again we'll have Philo Vance ferret him out.

Jack Marpole Now Pluggin' for Publix Out in Ogden, Utah

It gives us great pleasure to inform the boys that Jack D. Marpole has hooked up with the Publix outfit and is now the manager of the Orpheum Theatre in Ogden, Utah.

Good luck, Jack; we've been wondering what the devil happened to you and we were sure glad to hear of your good fortune and we know that you're going to give your new bosses the same kind of high-powered showmanship which characterized your work when you handled the New Tokay Theatre in Lodi, California, and took that house out of the red. And we want your brother members to know right now that you sure did work to put that house across, with you giving the residents of that town and the patrons of the theatre a type of service they hadn't come in contact with before. It's because we know the kind of outfit you're working for; that we can safely prophesize that if you continue with the good work, Publix is one organization that recognizes merit and a man's conscientiousness to his work, and before long we expect to see you up on top of the world.

It'll interest you to know that our mutual friend, Tommy Kane, is still bowling them over out in Redwood City and he is going to be as pleased as we are to know that you are again in the active field. You just give your new outfit the sort of work you did when you put over your Vitaphone newspaper tie-up in Lodi and we'll bet working with an "ace" guy like Division Manager Harry David your envelope will swell the way the box office will. So long for the present, Jack, and we're already waiting for your next letter because we expect to find some mighty interesting accounts of your work at the Orpheum.

Double Truck Carried New Trimmings For J. W. Creamer

John W. Creamer, live wire manager of the Palace Theatre in Muscatine, Iowa, has injected a new publicity angle in his newspaper advertising that for its copy novelty is well worth mentioning on these pages.

Creamer tied up with the leading merchants in Muscatine and purchased a full-page co-operative ad in the local newspaper, splashing the entire back page with "Glorifying the American Girl." We are unable to reproduce the full page here, but we'll try to give you an idea as to how his copy ran. Using a headline spread, he ran "Glorifying the American Girl" across the top of the page, then directly underneath it, centered, his theatre and the pictures' play dates. Together with selling copy. On the local dealers' ads, which were sectioned off, for each article of merchandise offered he ran a picture of one of the players in the cast. On the local florist's ad he ran a picture of a beautiful girl, captioned "Flowers Speak the Language of Beauty," and the copy runs on: "Flowers are unquestionably a most important part of the Ziegfeld production at the PALACE Theatre, starting Wednesday.

In addition to these tie-ups, Creamer arranged to have the local beauty parlor offer special rates for treatment during the run of the picture.

This type of co-operative advertising is much in vogue now and is undoubtedly an important factor to be considered in exploitation and its consequent box office results. And don't wait for a "Glorifying the American Girl" to come along. Step out and inject pep into any picture that merits the live exploitation treatment that a ROUND TABLE CLUB man can give it.

We're glad to hear from you, Creamer, and don't keep us in the dark about your future activities—send us some pictures of yourself and of the "gang" you have working for you at the Palace.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Ray Brown's Exploitation a Wow Out in Akron, Ohio

News comes into your Chairman that Ray Brown, one of the original Brown Brothers and manager of the Strand Theatre in Akron, Ohio, is knocking 'em dead out in that city with his snappy exploitation and showmanship on "Sally."

Ray tied up with Akron's largest ballroom, the East Marlet Gardens, and promoted a "Sally Night," and supplied a few additional surprises by announcing the receipt of a wire from the star of the picture, Marilyn Miller, which read, "Hoping Sally is a big success. Am sending pair of dancing pumps like I wore in 'Sally.'" The shoes were then put on display at one of the leading shops of the town, with a card bearing the play dates of the attraction. And as "Sally" was completing its run Ray pulled another fast one by advertising that the pumps would be awarded to the girl whose foot they would fit. This week of advance plugging. The contest was held on the stage notice spread like wildfire and was broadcast throughout the town, especially at the East Marlet Ballroom, which gave it a of the Strand with the twenty-eighth girl contestant walking off with the pumps.

Ray also tied up with the local radio stations, who broadcast notice of the Marilyn Miller contest with the local ballrooms also helping. The jazz orchestras appearing at the radio station also helped out by plugging the song hits from the picture.

Special pictures and stories in the local newspapers appeared, current and advance, while Ray arranged striking window displays in the leading dress, shoe and hosiery shops. Also tieing up with the local music stores. An interesting angle promoted by Ray was securing the co-operation of the most popular billiard parlor in town, and offering a pair of tickets for the Strand to the highest scorer in the city championship billiard tournament. This is practically undeveloped, though not new, angle, boys, that it would pay to look into. If they've got time to play pool they've got time to go to the theatre. Slam your attraction around there some place.

Thank you, Ray, for keeping us up on your latest drive, and we want to say right now that you sure are keeping up that "Spice and Pep" that we labeled you with possessing not so long ago. And we want to hear from the other two members of the Brown family, too. Don't forget to send us a bunch of photographs of these displays so your fellow members can see as well as read of your activities at the Strand. Give my regards to the Mrs. and also to the little fellow who, if his dad's plans formulate, will some day be a great big press agent and will handle his little sister's affairs. P. S.—What does the Mrs. think of it, Ray?

"Tod" Browning's Activities Carry a Wallop for Boston

A "natural" and a novel idea that sets the patrons to talking is the "Living Sphinx," on display at the Publix Metropolitan Theatre in Boston. According to our old friend and fellow club member, Harry "Tod" Browning, live wire publicity man for the "Met" outfit, the residents of the Hub are still mystified.

The "Living Sphinx" is a girl, mounted on a pedestal in the Met's grand lobby, who, having complete control over her facial muscles, stands expressionless for hours at a time. This is a great idea as it gets the crowd talking and is a certainty to bring in added box office revenue. The exploitation possibilities to this gag are many, as the girl can be placed on display at the leading business institutions as well as at the theatre.

Another interesting activity forwarded us by "Tod" was a tie-up with local Postal Telegraph offices whereby the theatre offered $100 in prizes for the most appropriate Christmas greeting, with the Postal offices displaying huge photostatic telegrams announcing the contest.

And we mustn't forget the presentation of a Publix Gold Pass, a gift from Sam Katz, president of the circuit, to former President Calvin Coolidge, and presented by J. J. Fitzgibbons, division manager for Publix.

Just to prove that he doesn't slip up on a single opportunity to grab some publicity for the Met, we are showing you a photograph which speaks (or cackles) for itself. However, if you don't get the angle, these show girls from the Publix Metropolitan Theatre took these prize birds to the poultry exhibit recently held in Boston and incidentally blocked traffic plenty on the way. As Harry so aptly puts it, this is the demonstration of "How and Why Chickens Cross the Road."

Good gag, Harry, let's have some more, will you? And for a certain chicken in that photo we'd cross the road, too.

Thanks a lot for keeping us up on your activities and we hope to be able to run up soon and see you and the "Sphinx." (Not Coolidge—we mean the girl in the lobby.)

Here's a line that's worth its weight in gold:

THIS AD IS NOT INTENDED TO SELL YOU BUT TO HELP YOU SELL!

And therein lies, not just a tale, but a couple of volumes.

What the hell do we care about advertising telling who is in the picture. What the plot is all about. Who wrote it. Who directed it. Who adapted it. And a lot of other "hooey" that is just "hooey" and nothing else.

We want advertising of the kind that won't sell us but will HELP US SELL.

How many of us, after all, can book the pictures we please? Doggone few! Either we buy them "block booking" or the home office does the dirty work for us.

But when a representative company like Paramount, thru Russel Holman, their advertising manager, hands out a couple of pages of advertising such as we raved about in last week's issue, then common sense demands that we take advantage of the situation and shout it from the housetops.

That's the stuff we want. But we want it from every company selling pictures.

We want them to "tip us off," in advance, what sales angles we will have to merchandise a certain production. We want to know, in advance, the possibilities of tie-ups offered by specific pictures. One may present one angle—and another a still different slant.

My prayers from now on are going to run something like this: "Oh, Lord, now I lay me down to sleep, hoping against hope that the film companies, their beloved advertising managers and all other interested parties, will give us, each week, constructive, educational advertising, dealing with how we can sell the pictures to the public. Help them to see the light. Amen."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Here We Are Again Says Weiss-Perlberg (Pep Inc.)

Stunts of the goodwill nature have been started by Al Weiss of the Publix-Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., that will undoubtedly impress not only theatre patrons but all people who wish to take advantage of the opportunities offered.

Weiss made a tie-up with the Maxwell House Coffee Co., and Goode's Bakery whereby they furnish two lady attendants and serve coffee daily to the patrons on the mezzanine floor from 2:30 P. M. to 5:30 P. M., except Sunday. This is not only an innovation for the theatre but has been made a very classy affair.

Some very fine tables and tea carts were procured from a local furniture company and other accessories such as electric urns, cups and saucers, etc. A nearby florist decorates the tables each day with cut flowers and in fact everything is carried out in keeping with the high-class service of the theatre.

The luncheon service was started on Wednesday (Dec. 5th) by making announcement in the newspapers, program, over the radio, trailers and sign in outer lobby of theatre.

As evidence of the popularity of this luncheon service, 250 persons were served the first day, 300 on the next day, 250 and 600, respectively. A lot of worthwhile publicity is bound to result from this stunt. And the Society Editor of one of the papers came over and stated he would run a reader together with a photograph of this idea. This luncheon service was continued until Christmas Day.

Another service that is available to the patrons and others was the erection of a booth in the outer lobby for the wrapping of holiday packages. The theatre had two large rolls of green wrapping paper, also green and red tissue paper, and accessories, which it furnished to patrons who wished to have their packages wrapped ready for mailing. The booth is attractively decorated with signs "SHOP AND MAIL EARLY" and many patrons are availing themselves of this service. Weiss has also placed 100 Santa Claus cut-outs around the business sections and Post Office, banks, and other shopping centres—copy reading, "Attend Shoppers Matinee Florida Theatre, Admission prices and institutional copy of the service."

Weiss also instituted another service for the benefit of his patrons. 10,000 postcards with views of the theatre were printed and placed on a spinnet desk, which was secured from a local furniture house, with a neat sign on mail-box on desk with copy asking patrons to drop a line to a friend or loved one and the theatre would stamp and mail them.

The Union News Company of Jacksonville, distributors of various articles including postcards, etc., have secured a quantity of the theatre postcards and have wholesaled them to various 5 and 10-cent stores and news stands as well as having them on sale at their own news stands.

This postcard idea has also received favorable comment and Weiss thinks that the serving of coffee, service booth in lobby and postcard stunts have gone a long way to stimulate business during the December drive.

Civic organizations and the Post Office department commented on these stunts at their regular luncheons and meetings and Weiss feels sure that the idea is excellent publicity for the theatre and will also be a good business stimulant.

On another occasion he used two excellent stunts in ballyhooing "The Virginian" playing at the Publix-Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., that got more than an unusual amount of publicity.

One of the street stunts used was that of a covered wagon drawn by a single horse, with the driver dressed in the costume of the period. An oil-cloth effect banner carrying copy about the picture, title, theatre and play dates were placed on each side of the covered wagon.

The other stunt that attracted more than passing interest was a cowboy riding one of his fiery steeds and giving rope exhibitions at different intervals. A banner on each side of the horse read, "The VIRGINIAN—Florida Theatre."

Weiss also used the lobby telephone stunt, having two girls phone different patrons while people in the lobby could hear the conversation too.

Whyte Cashed in on Star's Home Town With This One

W. H. Whyte, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Hartford, Conn, did not let the grass grow under his feet when he played Sophie Tucker's picture, "Honky Tonk."

Whyte learned that Sophie Tucker was a resident of Hartford, and he capitalized on the stunt to the extent of having her address a letter to the theatre so he could publicize the idea in all of his billing and lobby displays on this attraction.

In addition to creating a lot of box office value for this attraction, he crashed his alertness in seizing upon the opportunity of making capital for a picture that could stand a little aid when he came to putting it across, and whatever success it met with at the box office was because of his idea in connection with this picture.

Thanks for your letter, Mr. Whyte, and lets hear from you before very long.

EDDIE HITCHCOCK says:

"The manner in which you conduct your ROUND TABLE CLUB is sufficient in itself to keep any wideawake manager or press agent informed of real, up-to-date theatre exploitation."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Playing Up Talkie Shorts Proved Profitable to B. O.

Any opportunity that presents itself for us to pass comment on the exploitation of advertising of short subjects is always received with a hearty welcome and good cheer at CLUB headquarters. You probably all know by this time that this phase of your program can mean a whole lot at the box office, providing you are going about the exploitation of these short subjects in the right way.

On this particular subject, we would like to show you the lobby of the Orpheum Theatre in Los Angeles, which has been fixed up with a colorful and artistic hand-painted eagle displaying one of Everett Horton's latest Educational talking comedies, and if every other theatre were to play up these talking shorts, with the same prominence as their features, they would soon find this angle a most desirable asset to their program.

It is really a shame the number of theatres we have personally visited that have been showing talking shorts of real merit and not giving them the billing they deserve, because we feel by so doing they are losing out on a money and business-getting angle that could be built up to mean as much on their screen and to their box office as the feature attraction itself.

We are grateful to the management of the Orpheum for this photograph and we hope they will show us some more of their showmanship for use in the NEWS.

SELLING SOUND PROPERLY

We have never undertaken to eulogize or give a plug to any particular type of sound equipment, because it is not consistent with good trade publication policy, but we have been prompted to make the statement that one of the reasons why the Western Electric system is so popular is because the service they render is not confined to keeping the equipment in good mechanical condition, as witness the publication of a press book, for exclusive use of exhibitors and exploiteers dealing solely with the selling of sound and sound equipment.

Through the courtesy of Walter Eberhardt, Director of Advertising and Exploitation for Western Electric, we have before us one of these press sheets, and it contains a wealth of material for theatres with this particular type of equipment to use in connection with newspaper readers or advertising.

They are certainly deserving of a lot of credit for the showmanlike way that they are handling their affairs, and we would not hesitate one moment about saying the same about the other sound companies if they in turn could show us that they are rendering as good service in this respect as Western Electric.

Thank you, Mr. Eberhardt, and we are looking forward to the rest of the material that you promised to send us at an early date. In the meantime, our advice to all exhibitors, regardless of what equipment they have, is to make a request either direct to you or through the Chairman of the ROUND TABLE CLUB for a copy of your fine exploitation book on the selling of sound apparatus.

Dance Contest and News Tie-Up Great for Cohn

M. D. Cohn is responsible for a lot of newspaper space on "So This is College," playing at the Rialto Theatre, Denver, Colo., when he promoted a dance contest through the newspaper columns.

In order to acquaint Denverites with the campus steps, the Rialto Theatre arranged for free instruction prior to the Monday night competition, which was held on the Rialto stage.

The instruction was given by Victor Soderstrom, member of the Dancing Masters Association of America, who recently went to New York to become acquainted with the newest dance fad. The instruction was given gratis which not only helped to popularize the dance in Denver but assured Cohn of an unusually large entry list for the dance competition.

The "Rocky Mountain News" said, "Campus Capers is a variation of the Varsity, Charleston and Prep Step and seems to be one of those things that strikes popular American fancy. The step is introduced in the new Rialto picture, 'SO THIS IS COLLEGE'."

Numerous cuts of the instructor, his dancing partner and winners of the contest appeared in the paper together with stories that proved of invaluable aid in popularizing the dance as well as the picture itself.

Even persons not particular anxious to learn the new dance creation were, however, particularly sold on the idea (through the newspaper publicity) of seeing the picture as well as seeing the latest dance fad.

The contest not only popularized the dance step but sold many persons on seeing the picture which manifested itself in better than box-office receipts.

This is by no means the first time we have told you about Mr. Cohn's activities for the Publix outfit, out there in Denver, so you need not feel that he is a stranger to the ROUND TABLE CLUB by any means. We would, however, like to find the proper formula to encourage steadier contributions and more frequent communications from this active manager and showman. How about it, Cohn, you can answer it better than we can, and you know you are still one of the few whose photos have not been received at Headquarters. Better get busy, no use hiding because it will never get anything or anywhere in the show business.

Celoud's Stage Wedding Worth Its Weight in Gold

Frank J. Celoud's activities out in Sedalia, Mo., are wide and varied and cover a multitude of angles in the line of showmanship. It would take a good deal more space than we could ever afford to devote to go into the minute details of these various activities of this live-wire showman, but in passing we would want you to know that one of the stunts that he used for a New Year's Eve frolic, that could be utilized for most any kind of a special midnight show was a real negro wedding on the stage. The ceremony being performed by a negro minister. The cost to the theatre was a $25 present for the couple and the cost of the marriage license and the $10 for the minister who performed the ceremony.

In addition to all of this, he secured the co-operation of practically all of the Sedalia merchants, and practically every one of the stores fell in line, donating some form of present or other to the couple that would be useful in housekeeping. All they asked in return was that the presents be unwrapped on the stage, and the name of the firm be announced as having donated it.

This was a reasonable request, and unquestionably it lent plenty of advertising value to the wedding itself.

Frank surrounded this entire proceeding with all of the trimmings to make it a gala event, and everyone was in a wonderful frame of mind, by reason of receiving noise makers, serpentine and all the other doo-dabs that go to make these celebrations so happy and outstanding for the patrons. No doubt, they will recall it for many a month to come, the next time something special is staged at one of Frank's theatres.

THE GRAND PARADE

With Helen Twelvetrees--Fred Scott and 100 Others

"The Grand Parade" is the Grandest Parade of Them All

All Talking — All Music

The First Minstrel Musical Super Production to reach the talking screen---Hear the tuneful song hits "Molly," "Alone in the Rain," and "Moaning for You."

All Dancing — All Singing

Don't Miss This Great Spectacle---It Will Live With You Forever!

The opening splurge for "The Grand Parade," Pathe's Big Shot attraction, was a certain bet from all odds and angles the moment G. R. O'Neil decided to hop a train and "talk things over" with Fred Shanberger, Jr., managing director of the Auditorium Theatre in Baltimore, Md.

To give you some sort of an idea of how O'Neil and Shanberger went about their marvelous plans, we would want you to know a few details "toot sweet," so here they are: Twelve full window displays were engineered, and when we say engineered, we mean "put across with a bang," as witness one of the batch which we are reproducing on the bottom of this page. Animation and other unusual tricks were incorporated so that the fickle public would pay attention instead of passing up the displays as being "just another tie-up."

The radio gag was particularly interesting because it created a tremendous amount of interest in the entire proceedings and brought a mail response that went far beyond both O'Neil's and Shanberger's fondest expectations. We show just a few of the 15,000 answers received from listeners in on the air who guessed, correctly, the titles of the songs from the pictures which were being broadcast.

Fred Shanberger, Jr.

Perhaps one of the real outstanding bits of this great campaign, was the use of a minstrel band (costumes and other trimmings not missing), which played in front of the theatre and in the lobby and in this respect, we'd rather you let the photos talk for themselves. (Not a See & Hear gag either.)

Maybe one of the chief reasons for the success of the hard work put into this campaign was the fact that the picture itself, from all reports, was more than ordinary entertainment. All the better, says everyone concerned, including yours truly.

Another fine angle was the distribution of some 10,000 automobile and door hanger tags containing sales-getting copy and printed on deep red stock, with a STOP on the top line that would make a locomotive pull a halt to read on further. Not so bad, brothers, not so bad a'tall, a'tall.

To really get serious for a moment, we admit that this entire layout was so convincing, from start to finish (including their wonderful newspaper advertising), that we decided we had hit upon one of those "different" exploitation stunts. Not because what they accomplished was unusual. But because the things they put over were so thorough in every detail that success was almost assured before the opening title hit the screen for the first time.

There's a thought for everyone of you other fellows to keep in mind on any stunt you start to work out. It's not the originality of the gags you want to use that will count at the b.o., it's the showmanlike way that you succeed in putting it over with. The old sermon about the stunt not being married to the picture or the picture to the stunt is proven again. What O'Neil and Shanberger accomplished on their whirlwind Baltimore campaign, you can accomplish in Chicago, New York or Ginkville. Just put the "guts" into what you're doing and the results will shout your ability from the housetops (even if the boss insists the picture alone brought them in).

The finest tribute we can pay to this entire campaign is the mere fact that we devote this much space to telling you about it at a time when we are pinched for every inch we can beg, borrow or steal from the book, in order that we keep up with the mass of material lining up every day from our army of members and readers.

Join me, fellow members, in a toast to the fine stuff that Mr. O'Neil and Mr. Shanberger, Jr., put into a picture worthy of all the effort.

Meet Another P. D.

Ever since the ROUND TABLE CLUB proved its worth as an asset to Publicity and Exploitation men, as well as the house manager, we have been enrolling one after another.

The latest to "sign on the dotted line" was Larry Cowen, exploitation and publicity director for the Schwartz-Century Circuit located in Brooklyn and Long Island.

Of course, just enrolling a P. D. means nothing at all to us. The important point is: How active will said P. D. be as far as the Club pages are concerned?

On this particular phase we will let time speak for itself. So now, friend Larry, let's hear about some of the tie-ups you have engineered and put across for that circuit of yours.

Salmon's Fine Showmanship is a Credit to Macon

Monty Salmon used a mammoth auto tire which is claimed to be the largest in the world, in ballyhooing Maurice Chevalier in "The Love Parade," playing at the Capitol Theatre, Macon, Ga.

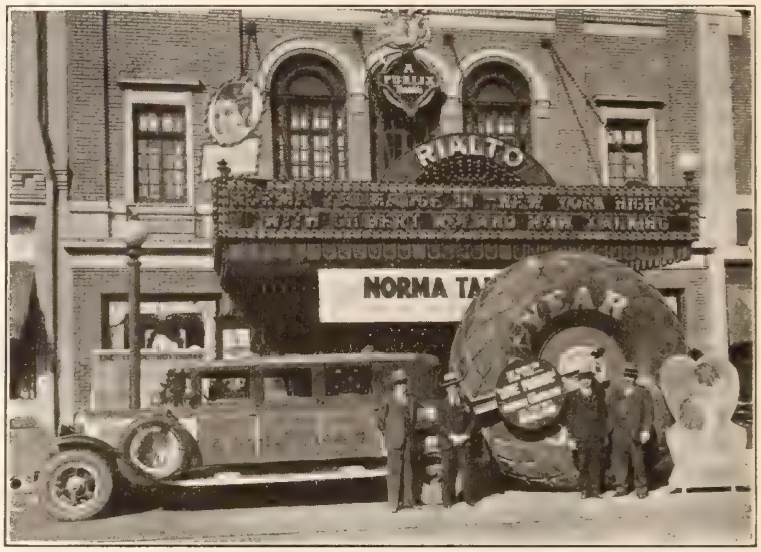
The mammoth tire arrived in the city two days prior to the opening of the picture. The local agent of Goodyear tires allowed Salmon to place a large sign in the center of the tire and also permitted the keeping of the sign on the tire during the Goodyear Tire parade.

The large size tire was the talk of the city and proved to be one of the best traveling "billboards" ever used in exploiting a picture.

The huge tire was also displayed outside the theatre for three hours on the day before opening, thus giving more time to people to read the announcement on "The Love Parade."

The tire was transported to and from by hooking it on the tail end of a Greyhound bus.

Salmon also used a contest that helped to publicize the picture. A telegram written in French by Chevalier was placed in the Macon Telegraph on Sunday. For the first correct translations a pass was given.



Holland Another To Cash In On a Radio Biz. Builder

A tie-up with the local radio dealer who arranged to furnish a radio free of charge enabled Manager S. Sidney Holland of the Rialto Theatre, Brockton, Mass., to attract some additional dough into the cash box, in addition to securing some excellent publicity.

A new angle on the free radio gag was innovated by having instead of a lucky number contest, a vote getting contest. Every purchaser of a ticket to the Rialto received a ticket which entitled the bearer to ten votes. And when the contest had narrowed down to five possible winners interest became more acute.

Especially since one of the leading contestants happened to be an employee of the local gas company and his boss urged the rest of the employees to back him up and help him win the radio. And when the other four heard this you can bet they stepped out and got all their friends to step in and help. With the five leaders urging all their friends to attend the show, and the newspaper ads giving the contest a plug, business jumped up considerably.

This "free radio" idea is always a business booster and can be used whenever things are in a slump.

Keep it up, Holland; we're glad to note that, in addition to being active, you have added a little originality to a good gag.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

More New Members!

DAVID S. MOLIVAR is entrusted with the important position of handling affairs for the Stiefel Amusement Enterprises, operators of a number of theatres, in Philadelphia, Pa., and from David's letter, which he sends us in rhyme, we feel sure that we can expect some snappy material from him as he's been in the show racket since he was knee high to a drinking cup, and, according to his letter, they're all sitting up and taking notice at the Empress Theatre in Manayunk, Pa., and the Roxy Theatre in Roxburgh, Pa. We are glad to welcome you into the Club, David, and we want to see a photo of yourself in the next mail.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

A. V. MADISON, manager of the Strand Theatre in Port Jervis, N. Y., and, according to the rousing send-off Sidney Finkelstein gives him, we may expect some great things from him. Keep us posted on your work at the Strand "A. V.," so that we can pass on your stuff to the boys. And send us one of your photos, too, will ya, so that we can publish it.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

W. R. ROWELL manages the El Dorado Theatre in El Dorado, Kansas, and we are looking forward to hearing of his activities out there in Kansas. How about it, "W. R."? Keep us posted on your doings in the land of tornadoes and you might send us in one of your photographs.

TOM DALEY is the manager of the Tivoli Theatre in Toronto, Canada. And as the Tivoli features a policy of long-run talkies, we know we can expect a lot of good things in the "long run" from Tom. And when a fellow like Jack Allan says we can, well—we're sure he's right. How about it, Tom? We're always glad to publish as much news as we can of our Canadian members' activities. Shoot us in a photo of yourself, will ya?

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

JULIUS PINCUS is the assistant manager of the Biltmore Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and though we know Brooklyn has a rep for being a bit "blase," we're sure Julius is going to show us son. fast stepping. Greetings, Julius, and in your next letter we want to see a photograph of yourself and a couple of pages of your activities at the Biltmore.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

BRADY H. BROWN is the manager of the Colonial Theatre in Takoma, Washington, for the Fox West Coast outfit and with such a snappy organization he should be able to keep us well supplied with news of his activities. We're right, aren't we, Brady? And don't forget to shoot us in a couple of photos of yourself.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

C. A. LUKE is the assistant manager of the Ritz Theatre in Brunswick, Georgia, and from a state like Georgia, noted for its peaches, we look forward to receiving some "peachy" stuff from Luke. We're glad to welcome you into the CLUB, "C. A.," and we'd like to publish your photo if you'll send it along in your next letter.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

FRANK J. CELOUD is city manager of the Liberty and Strand Theatres in Sedalia, Missouri, and with an important position like city manager under his belt we can expect to see some great stuff coming in from Missouri. Let's hear some more from you, Frank, and why not send us in a photo of yourself so that the rest of the Club can see what you look like.

——Wear Your Club Pin! ! !——

ROBERT SOFFER manages the Hollywood Theatre at Sixth Street and Avenue A in the "Big City," New York. Let's hear from you real soon, Robert, and send us some news of a Hollywood service at the Hollywood Theatre. And why not send us in a photo of yourself so that we can let the rest of the boys know what you look like?

ITS VALUE HAS BEEN PROVEN!

without
PENALTY OF COST

COLOR is the order of the day. Sonochrome brings it without the penalty of added cost. Sixteen delicate tints and a warm neutral tone are available at the same price as ordinary black-and-white. This, plus the fact that it gives really faithful sound-on-film, accounts for the success of this series of Eastman tinted positive films.

A NEW IDEA IN SOUND CARTOONS

By PAUL TERRY

And FRANK MOSER

THERE is a jazzy, lilting swing to a TERRY-TOON that makes it different from any cartoon you've seen before.

The long and splendid records of Paul Terry and Frank Moser guarantee the humor of this new series. Music furnished by Philip A. Scheib, with synchronization handled in a novel manner that brings the closest co-ordination of music and pictures ever achieved in a cartoon.

Each subject based on the popular music and customs of a different nation. "Caviar" starts the fun with more excitement than a Bolshevik riot. And after that there will be a new one every other week.

THE B.O. Natural FOR St. Patrick's Day!

HERE'S the one picture in all the world for the week of St. Patrick's Day! It ties up to the idea like a hot mama ties up to a sugar daddy. And WHAT a picture! Imagine the original "Cohens and Kellys"—all FOUR of them—bringing a branch of the cloak and suit business to the land of the bagpipe and kilts! Imagine the friendly enemies trying to put it over on a shrewd Scotsman . . . and doing it! Man, you've never seen the like of it. Besides being the funniest Scotch story ever told, it's the kind of a comedy that will keep the dollars rolling in for as long as you play it—any time, anywhere!

Universal's New Selling Season is on NOW!

10 REASONS WHY "The VAGABOND KING" IS THE GREATEST MOTION PICTURE EVER PRODUCED!

1. DENNIS KING. Showdom's greatest singing star. Sensation of stage "Vagabond King" (90 weeks on Broadway), Ziegfeld's "Three Musketeers."

2. ALL-SINGING CAST. Jeanette MacDonald. Lillian Roth, singing chorus of 1000.

3. FAMOUS TITLE. Book, stage drama, stage operetta. Known smash hit everywhere.

4. FAMOUS SONGS. "Song of the Vagabonds," "Only a Rose," "Huguette Waltz," by Rudolf Friml.

5. MOST PERFECT ALL-TECHNICOLOR to date.

6. MOST LAVISH PRODUCTION yet seen and heard.

7. MOST GIGANTIC ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN ever put behind a picture.

A. Saturday Eve. Post (Circulation 3,200,000). Four big smashes, practically all in color.

B. American Weekly (Circulation 6,000,000). Four-color seat-seller on March 9th.

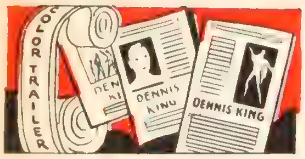
C. Five Radio Broadcasts—Columbia Broadcasting System, 60 stations. Paramount-Publix Hours, Feb. 15 (Dennis King in Person), Feb. 22, March 8; Endicott-Johnson, March 9; Philco Hour, March 12.

D. Billboard Campaign. 14,000 stunning colored 24-sheets in leading cities of the United States.

E. Giant Theatre Campaigns. Special large-space ads prepared by experts. Available to theatres on co-operative basis.



F. All-Technicolor Trailer. Golden glimpses of the picture, songs, action. Distributed by National Screen.

G. Philco Radio Tie-up. Your local Philco dealer is primed to help you sell seats. Ask him.

The New Management means business – business for Exhibitors – business for ourselves.

The fact that we own no theatres means that we must make pictures which will make money for theatre owners, and that means Business for both of us!

The initial reception of the first of our new product is a most gratifying indication of the ability and showmanship of our associated producers to make pictures of real box-office quality – a quality which we shall make every effort to maintain.

BARE KNEES AND A GOOD NAME

A producer who also distributes . . . you know him well . . . sat back in his comfortable office chair the other day and stirred about a trifle restlessly.

"What's on your chest?" we asked him.

He thought for a few minutes, apparently decided he'd feel considerably better if he unburdened himself and then said:

"I've been in this business most of my life. Trends, cycles, or what have you, have come and gone. Some developments appeared to me to be ill-advised; others short-lived as they eventually proved to be. But through it all, it was my conviction that exhibitors would go for high grade product regardless of chain hook-ups or competitive first runs.

"They Want Sex Stuff"

"But a situation new to me, old war-horse that I am in this funny business, confronts me today. This company has just finished a picture declared by all who have seen it to be rank with the best dialogue pictures made to date. My sales force knows about it. Yet, they wire me daily that exhibitors are completely apathetic to any but pictures in which dubious sex situations predominate. My picture is minus all that.

"I know it is hard to believe, yet my boys tell me this is the situation. They will do what they can, of course, to batter it down on behalf of the attraction to which I refer. They are, however, anything but optimistic."

What About Good, Clean Pictures?

This producer-distributor was looking for advice. He had an investment at stake and wanted to know exactly where he got off. Now it so happens that this writer has seen the film in the case. And he agrees with the unnamed producer that the attraction is there; that it deserves a break.

The backbone of the industry's theatre business is supplied by the families of America. It seems ridiculous to draw attention in this year of grace to a fact which is so fundamentally, yet so obviously, true.

It is true that in the last six months, Hollywood has gone a bit wilder than sane judgment should have allowed. Some things have happened production-wise which makes one speculate if the bars have not been completely let down. Exhibitors have made an age-old discovery that bare knees, if they are sufficiently bare, bring in the mob. So does burlesque, yet heads of families would hesitate before having their children sit through that type of show.

Films Are Family Entertainment

Like it or not, this business has been stamped as the family entertainment of the nation. That's the type of customer it must cater to if it is to maintain present and future prosperity.

To tamper with a known quantity is a dangerous procedure and bad business. Every time the suggestive finds its way to the screen, the industry, whether it understands or not, takes a slap in the face.

This argument is not a brief for the saccharine or the sweety sweet. Banalities in treatment, the impossible in stories have been ground out with an exact precision for many years. To achieve dramatic emphasis or to get over a laugh, the artisan skilled in his work need have no recourse to the questionable.

This entire situation has been seething under the lid for some time. If that lid is not to be blown sky high, the boiling will have to be checked. A simple scientific formula.

The Producers' Responsibility

Primarily, the safeguard of the industry's good name rests with the producer. Don't kid yourself into believing that the exhibitor fashions styles in production. That's rot. The producer makes what he thinks will sell, based on whatever precedent he can lay hands upon, and the theatre plays what is supplied to him.

Aside from all this and even if the exhibitor demanded smut in pictures, the producers . . . self-styled guardians of filmdom's reputation for artistic and wholesome entertainment . . . have it entirely within their power to vote any such suggestion down. Why don't they do so?

KANN

An Insider's Outlook

UNLESS the entire line holds the enemy is certain to break through. In St. Louis and at a theatre operated by Publix, which you would think, should know better, newspaper copy heralding the run of "The Love Parade" at the Missouri oversteps the line.

Taking up the cudgels at whose insistence is not apparent, the St. Louis Star editorially and in language that is open to but one interpretation tells this industry exactly where it gets off and points out—with entire propriety, we believe—that there are some left in farflung America in whom the sense of decency has not been ripped to shreds.

The copy, reproduced elsewhere in this edition and therefore subject to whatever opinion you may form of it, is to this writer completely out of order. And regrettably so, too.

The Hays association, we happen to know, is working diligently and in close touch with women's clubs, civic associations and better film movements with one express purpose in mind: to keep the level of production sufficiently high so that no finger of suspicion may touch it. In order to bring this about, considerable time and effort have been spent in building up a machine which would properly function.

Word Passed Along

In Hollywood, producers, following the precepts laid down in the inner councils of the Hays association, have passed the word on to writers and directors. They have been told this and that are out. And out they have been.

But this all-important job of keeping the industry's name clean is to no avail unless the practice is carried through and rigorously observed right down the line. The St. Louis episode is, therefore, extremely unfortunate.

It is difficult to imagine that Publix, as an organization, can be guilty of such bad taste. Sam Katz, we take it, is too familiar with the vital necessity of maintaining friendly relations with the public to countenance a breach such as this. Yet if it is a private in the Publix army who is responsible, fixing the blame doesn't absolve the general.

If any picture out of the Hollywood studios requires smut copy to put it over it seems to us better to keep it on the shelf. In the case at point, it so happens that "The Love Parade" requires no such treatment. The picture is delightful enough, box-office enough, to stand on its own without necessity for sensational ballyhood via the printed word.

Lummox

Ninety minutes of intelligent entertainment. Herbert Brenon, maker of good pictures, comes through with "Lummox" and thereby adds another laurel wreath to his crown of success. Easily one of the highlights of this splendid attraction is the performance of Winifred Westover. It is some years since she has appeared in pictures. Her work was never marked by the distinctive, yet in "Lummox" she enacts a role that ranks among the finest which sound pictures have thus far given the public.

"Lummox" is primarily a women's picture, but to those who are at all discriminating in the selection of their celluloid fare, the picture will stand out as unusual in every respect. It has a spiritual quality and a gentility in direction and performance—entirely because of Miss Westover—that removes the production far from the ordinary.

The Melody Man

A highlight of the week—easily. The picture about which Columbia has been throwing raves. So much so, in fact, that it became difficult to imagine any one production could be as good as its producer claimed.

No other course was open then but to find out what the shouts were all about.. We took a peek and this is what we saw:

A beautifully tempoed production, charmingly acted, and a vast, but never overplayed, sentimental appeal.

A slight enough story of a Viennese musician whose rhapsody leads to his arrest for the murder of the man who wrecked his home, while, at the same time, it brings happiness to his daughter and her sweetheart.

Adroitly directed, and handled always with appreciation, "The Melody Man" deserves a widespread play. Far removed from silly musical comedies and stories of backstage life, it further disproves an industry adage that a picture to get by must be loaded down with unfunny and unnecessary wisecracks.

Fox Receivership Seen Averted with Stockholders Slated to Approve Plan

Repeats Ulterior Motive Charge

Charge of ulterior motives was reiterated and the lie given to claim that William Fox broke the trusteeship agreement with John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart, by Samuel Untermyer in Federal court this week. Untermyer insisted that Otterson and Stuart abrogated the contract.

Asserting that the refinancing plan provided for repayment of debts to Electrical Research Products and Halsey, Stuart and Co., Untermyer observed that these firms "evidently did not want their money," and wanted something else, demanding to know their motives in blocking the refinancing plan. It was then that he revealed the 15-year preferential financing agreement he said existed between Fox and Halsey, Stuart and Co.

Receiver Lesser Evil, Conboy Says

Appointment of a receiver for Fox Film may be preferable to continuation of William Fox in control of the company, Martin Conboy, attorney for a Class A group of stockholders, asserted at Thursday's hearings. Conboy styled a receivership as possibly "the lesser of two evils." He attacked the proposed refinancing plan as imposing an excessive burden on the company, and served notice that he intends to fight it at the forthcoming stockholders' meeting, he declared.

Fox Sacrificing Own Properties

William Fox has shown a self-sacrificing spirit in the present predicament of his companies, and is arranging to transfer to Fox Film certain valuable properties he owns, including sound film patent rights, in development of which he spent $600,000 cash, states his counsel, Samuel Untermyer. Fox's chief concern has been his stockholders, says Untermyer, adding that Fox-Case properties, which Fox always has held, are included in property he intends to turn over to the company.

Synopsis of Refinancing Plan to Bring Fox Out of Difficulties

Fox Film Corporation is to issue the following securities:

(a) $40,000,000 of 10-year 7% debentures—each $1,000 of such debentures to have attached thereto warrants entitling the holder to purchase 25 shares of Class "A" common stock of Fox Film at the price of $20 per share for the first three years, $25 per share for the second three years, and $30 per share for the last four years.

The corporation will agree to set aside 20% of its net earnings, after dividends on the preferred stock, for the redemption of debentures, and all sums paid into the corporation upon the exercise of warrants are also to be used for this purpose.

The debentures are to be redeemable at $110 for the first three years, at 107½ for the next three years, and at 105 for the last four years.

(b) $25,000,000 of 7% cumulative preferred stock, convertible into Class "A" common stock at $20 per share for the first five years and at $25 per share thereafter, and redeemable at 110.

(c) The bankers are to underwrite the $40,000,000 of debentures and $25,000,000 of preferred stock at 91. In addition, the Underwriting Syndicate is to receive 65,000 shares of Class "A" common stock of Fox Film, and the bankers are to receive an additional 135,000 shares of this Class "A" common stock for their services.

(d) All the foregoing securities are to be offered to the stockholders of film, at par, who will receive either warrants or subscription rights thereto.

The 65,000 shares of Class "A" common stock to be received by the syndicate and the 135,000 shares of Class "A" common stock to be received by the bankers will not however participate in these subscription rights.

(e) From and out of the approximately $60,000,000 cash, net, that will be realized from the sale of the foregoing securities film will lend to Fox Theatres on approximately $18,400,000, in addition to the $18,000,000 that is now owed by Fox Theatres to Fox Film. In respect of this $36,400,000 Fox Theatres will issue to Fox Film, at 91, $40,000,000 or Theatres 20-year 7% debentures, convertible into Class "A" common stock of Fox Theatres, at $10 per share for the first year and at $15 per share thereafter.

Stock holders of Fox Theatres are to be entitled to purchase this $40,000,000 of debentures from Fox Film at par at any time within one year, and warrants for this one year privilege will be issued to the stockholders of Fox Theatres.

(f) At least 51% of the Class "B" common stock of Fox Film and all the Class "B" common stock of Fox Theatres is to be placed in a voting trust for a period of at least five years. If and when the film debentures and preferred stock are paid off at the end of the five-year period or thereafter the voting trust is to terminate. However, it is to terminate in any event at the end of a further period of five years, making in all a maximum of ten years.

$65,000,000 in Securities to Be Floated to Pay Off Company Debts

William Fox has been victorious so far, at least, in his fight to avert a receivership and it's a pretty safe bet the victory will be a lasting one, made so when a special meeting of stockholders is convened to vote on his favored plan of refinancing his enterprises.

The plan, drafted by Lehman Brothers, Dillon, Read & Co., and Bancamerica Blair, calls for the issuance of $65,000,000 of new securities to pay off the indebtedness of Fox Film and Fox Theatres, establishing of a trusteeship and relieving Fox of the trusteeship compromising himself, John E. Otterson, head of Electrical Research Products and Harry Stuart of Halsey, Stuart. This would be done through payment of the notes of these two companies.

Although it faces a stiff fight, approval of the plan at the forthcoming stockholders' meeting is forecast. No date has been set for the meeting, which will be "as soon as proper notice can be sent out." Meanwhile, the receivership actions against the company have been adjourned until after the meeting. If the plan, or some other satisfactory one, is adopted there will be no receivership. U. S. Judge Coleman, before whom the actions are to be tried, has indicated.

Halsey Stuart to Draft Plan

Halsey, Stuart, meanwhile, is preparing a plan for submission to the stockholders, although reputed refusal of Fox to deal with that company, and his insistence that he will not do so leads to belief that the Fox-favored plan will be adopted, as Fox can block adoption of any other plan, by virtue of his control of the company. Another factor is the 1½ per cent charge which must be paid to the underwriting syndicate in event the plan is not approved.

Decision of the court to adjourn the receivership proceedings until the plan had been submitted to stockholders, climaxed two hearings held during the week, marked by heated debate between attorneys for Fox and attorneys for creditors and stockholders. Charges of ulterior motives, untruths and arrogance punctuated the sessions.

Guard 15-Year Agreements

The hearings found Halsey, Stuart and Electrical Research opposed to the new plan from the standpoint of its provisions, as well as a determination to protect the 15-year agreements existing between Fox and the two companies, the first a preferential agreement on financing, the second from the standpoint of its licensing agreement.

The two firms and other stockholders and creditors opposed the financing plan on the ground the charges being made by the banking group are excessive and that the arbitration system, provided for in the plan, assures continuance of Fox control. This provides that claims and counterclaims aris-

Rival Wall Street Groups Continue Their Fight for Fox Financing Plum

Lehman Group Seen Favored in Refinancing—Halsey-Stuart Retains 15 - Year Option

With the plum now limited to the commission on the $65,000,000 in new securities to be floated by the company, two of the most powerful banking interests in America are continuing their spectacular battle in the Fox refinancing case.

Lehman Brothers, Dillon, Read & Co. and Bancamerica-Blair & Co. are holding the advantage in the financial battle which raged in two hearings in Federal Court during the week, marked by spirited skirmishing for position on the part of the two groups. They hold the advantage by virtue of the fact that their plan is to be the one submitted to stockholders at the special meeting to be called for consideration of the proposal, with indications that the plan will be adopted.

Halsey, Stuart, however, successfully repulsed during the week a proposal that they relinquish their highly-prized 15-year preferential contract on Fox financing, as provided for in the refinancing plan of the rival group. The unyielding position taken by Attorney Bogue on this proposal led to a waiving of this provision of the plan by Robert Swaine, counsel for the opposite group.

In a counter-offensive, Halsey, Stuart proposes to submit a plan to the forthcoming meeting of stockholders, insisting that the rival plan calls for excessive bonus payments and that its own is more to the advantage of stockholders. In this fight, Halsey, Stuart has the staunch backing of Electrical Research. The two are the largest creditors of Fox Film.

Counsel Swaine has insisted that his clients are not competing for the business of financing Fox and dramatically stated, in court, that their offer would be withdrawn if any other plan were presented. Counsel Bogue retaliates that his client's plan will be more beneficial to the company, and will not call for any bonus payment.

Stockholders at the special meeting will have to consider that the plan offered by the Lehman-Dillon, Reade-Bancamerica-Blair group is the one which has the backing of Fox; that he has insisted he will not deal with Halsey, Stuart, and that by virtue of his control of the company, he can block any other plan submitted. Then, there is that little matter of $975,000 said to be the amount the underwriters will have to be paid in event the plan is rejected.

Attorneys for minority stockholders have attacked the plan and are resentful of the stock bonus provision it contains for the underwriters.

Not to Levy on Judgment Until After Stock Meet

Although the court declined to ask creditors of Fox Film to withhold execution of judgments already obtained pending final outcome of the receivership hearings, Electrical Research Products voluntarily agreed to withhold execution pending outcome of the stockholders' meeting.

Untermyer's Slant on Bankers

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Fox, took several digs at bankers at the court hearing when he said that Fox showed no want of vision or judgment when he bought his Loew and Gaumont holdings, except, perhaps, he first should have had somebody sign on the dotted line. Experience, however, he added, has shown that it is difficult to make bankers sign, the dotted line in their case being only for the other end, since bankers always are careful to protect themselves.

This, he said, reminded him of a story about a friend who had a promise of $500,000 in commitments from a banker, but on presentation of them next morning was told they were not good over night.

"What bankers think and do," he observed dryly, "depends upon the market."

$22,000,000 Loew Offer For Wesco

Loew's, in which Fox has a 41 per cent interest, purchase of which was one of the steps which led to the present difficulties of the company, now wants to buy Fox's prize possession, Wesco. An offer of $22,000,000 made by Loew directors for Wesco, was rejected by Fox although it would have meant clear profit of $12,000,000 on the purchase. Fox Film is in only $10,000,000 on Wesco. The company was bought by Fox for $20,000,000 carrying with it the interest in First National, which Fox sold to Warners for $10,000,000. On top of that, the circuit netted $5,000,000 last year and is expected to net $7,000,000 this year. The figures are those cited in court by Fox's counsel who pointed out that Fox has no intention of selling the circuit.

Fox Meeting to be Real Thriller

That forthcoming special meeting of the Fox Film stockholders promises to be an interesting—possibly hectic—affair, if the indications given in the receivership hearings during the week are any criterion. No date for the meeting has as yet been set.

Fox's proponents will be prepared to do battle for acceptance of the financing plan proposed by the Lehman Brothers-Dillon, Read-Bancamerica-Blair group.

On their side they will have Fox's control of the company and the fact that if their plan is rejected, an added expense of close to a million will have to be paid to the underwriters.

Halsey, Stuart and Electrical Research, meanwhile, will submit a new plan to the stockholders, and will be prepared through it to continue the battle they have waged against the rival plan. In this, they will have the backing of a number of stockholders who feel that the bonus provided for in the proposed rival plan is excessive. They will find strong opposition from Fox, who insists he will not deal with Halsey, Stuart.

Says A. T. & T. Not After Fox Control

There is no desire on the part of American Telephone & Telegraph of Electrical Research Products to control one share of Fox stock in any manner, Attorney Pratt of Electrical Research declared in court Thursday in explaining his company's position in opposing the financing program favored by Fox. His company, he said, is interested chiefly in protecting its 15-year agreement with Fox for licensing sound recording and reproduction.

The proposed plan, he felt, would tie up the future credit of the company, a step which he termed unwise. More favorable terms, he said, could be arranged by financing through Halsey-Stuart.

In answer to a reminder by the court that Fox would not deal with Halsey-Stuart, Spratt said he did not believe Fox's determined stand should be permitted to block a beneficial plan. His company, he declared, wants to avert a receivership but did not intend to let Fox stand in the way of a satisfactory refinancing program.

Sentry Safety Control Brings Two Fox Suits

Two suits totaling $1,600,000, one against William Fox and the other against Fox and John Zanft, have been filed in Supreme Court by Sentry Safety Device Corp., which manufactures Sentry Safety Control, fire prevention device, and by Joseph E. Cohen, head of the company.

The action against Fox is for $1,300,000 based on an alleged contract under terms of which the Sentry device was to be installed in all theatres controlled by the Fox company. Fox was to receive a large block of shares for his services in closing the contract, it is stated. He received the shares, exercised his option to buy others and then repudiated the agreement, it is charged. The device was installed in but 30 Fox houses, it is asserted.

Cohen's suit is for alleged losses suffered in Fox's sale of stock, a transaction in which he names Zanft.

Warner Stock Rise Reported To Be Preliminary To New Paramount Deal

Warner Brothers Said to Want Share-for-Share Basis, So Prices Must Be Equal

Explanation of the current rise in the price of Warner Brothers' stock is scented in the rumor that it was planned as a preliminary to renewed negotiations for a merger between Paramount and Warners.

Reported consolidation of interests between the two concerns was said to have been discussed on the basis of one and one-quarter shares of Warner Brothers' stock for one share of Paramount. Objection was made to this, so the story goes, and Paramount officials and bankers cited the then-current quotations on the New York stock exchange as making any other ratio impossible.

Three Months' Record

When the reported merger was "called off," it now is said to have been with the statement to Warner Brothers that as and when their stock sold for a price equivalent to the quotations on Paramount, a share-for-share basis would be possible. One condition reported to be a part of that thought was that the Warner stock would have to reach the price level of the Paramount shares, and hold fairly to that level for at least three months to prove its strength.

Since the reported entrance into Warner affairs of the John J. Raskob interests, with $9,000,000 in quick cash as a condition of the retirement from Warner financing of Goldman, Sachs and Co., the stock has risen slowly but steadily from the thirties to the sixties, and is now within a very few points of current prices quoted for Paramount on the big board.

Whether the pending Government suits will prevent the renewal of Warner-Paramount negotiations, if the reports of the reason for the increased price of Warner stock are correct, probably is something that will be determined by the legal departments of the two companies, with the financial department of Warner Brothers ready with actual figures to establish the fairness of a share-for-share arrangement.

Paramount-Publix New Name

It will be Paramount-Publix after April 15, for stock holders of Paramount-Famous-Lasky are expected to approve the recommendation of their board of directors that the corporation name be changed.

The change will mark the dropping of Jesse L. Lasky's name from the company's corporate title, of which it has been an integral part since 1916, when Famous Players-Lasky Corp. was organized. The reason for the change was explained by Adolph Zukor as advisable to take advantage of the goodwill built up by Publix.

Directors at their meeting voted to raise the dividend to $4 annually from $3 and recommend increase in total of authorized shares to 4,000,000 from 3,000,000. There now are 2,700,000 shares outstanding, with 250,000 held in reserve for employes.

Los Angeles—Jesse Lasky, in making an announcement Thursday, said:

"Change in corporate name came from a desire to link all activities under one trade mark. I suggested we drop the Famous and the Lasky for that reason."

It was denied at the Paramount studio that friction was engendered between Lasky and Adolph Zukor over the decision, as was reported earlier.

Publix Planning First Run House at Washington?

Washington—Publix is understood planning a first run house here to provide an outlet for films and stage shows. The southwest corner of 10th and F. Sts. is mentioned as a probable site, as is an F. St. location opposite the Fox. The city now is regarded as overseated.

Paramount product here now is divided between Loew's and Warners, but the stage shows are out of the town, having until recently been shown at the Palace.

Nashville Opening Sept. 1

Nashville, Tenn.—Publix Sept. 1 will open the theatre being built on Church St. at a reported cost of $500,000. Kaiser-Ducett Construction Co., of Joliet, Ill., is building the house.

Pathe Completes First 52 2-Reel Talking Comedies

Pathe has completed its first program of 52 two-reel talking comedies. Producers of the comedies include the late George Le Maire, the Gleasons, Harry Delmar, J. Gordon Bostock, Charles B. Maddock, Frank T. Davis, Walter Brooks and Arch Heath.

Eastman Dividends

Rochester, N. Y.—The nineteenth annual wage dividends, representing a share in the earnings of the Eastman Kodak, this week were voted by the directors. The dividends, distributed among 15,841 employees, totaled $2,204,628.

Farnum Re-Signed by M-G-M

Hollywood—Joe Farnum, title and dialogue writer, has been given a new contract by M-G-M.

Warners, National Theatres Planning California Chain

Stockton, Cal.—Warners' proposed chain of Central California theatres is to be built up in association with National Theatres Circuit, in which Warners have an interest. A theatre here, at Oakland and Modesto are among those planned. Meanwhile, Fox is building the California, which opens in July.

Warners to Build Theatre in Beverly Hills Section

Hollywood—Warners West Coast theatre invasion will be extended to Beverly Hills. They will erect a 2,000-seat house opposite the Fox there, it was reported Thursday. Plans now are being drawn.

Noah Berry Seriously Ill Following Operation

Hollywood—Noah Berry is in a serious condition at Hollywood Hospital following an operation for appendicitis, it was reported Thursday. Berry, one of the screen's leading character players, was stricken recently while at breakfast with his family.

Leo McCarey to Direct Remake Talker for Fox

Hollywood—Leo McCarey has signed a term contract with Fox. His first assignment will be directing a talker remake of "Roadhouse," according to announcement. McCarey recently finished one for Paramount.

Harry Revier has completed the first group of six Novelty shorts at Metropolitan Studio, Ft. Lee, N. J., and will commence work on a second series next week.

3 Reel Comedies

Hollywood—Switch to three reels for comedies is declared being considered by a number of producers. Hal Roach is said to be in the vanguard of producers considering such a policy change. Shortening of features is the declared cause of the proposed change of the time-honored policy concerning comedies.

Editorial Aimed at "Gutter" Ad. Copy for Chevalier Film Arouses St. Louis

Exhibitors Disturbed Over Effects of Stand Taken by "St. Louis Star"

St. Louis—Exhibitors here are disturbed over the editorial stand taken by the "St. Louis Star," which in an editorial titled "The Gutter the Limit" takes exception to newspaper copy used by the Missouri theatre, a Publix house, for "The Love Parade."

"The Star," an afternoon newspaper, has devoted considerable space to motion pictures and its attitude has been considered friendly, but the outburst prompted presumably by the copy in question has caused considerable comment in exhibition circles.

A number of letters from St. Louisans, forwarded to the newspaper, endorse its stand. These were published by "The Star" under the heading, "Star Receives Numerous Letters of Congratulations on Editorial Scoring Movie Advertisement."

W. J. Edwards has forwarded a letter to Will H. Hays, the text of which is published locally. In it, Edwards says:

"As an ardent movie fan, please permit me to say that such advertising and means produced to get the crowd may accomplish its purpose for a while, but decent and self-respecting people who attend the movies regularly, and you know there are thousands, will soon get enough of it.

"While you may not control every local condition, a word from you, I imagine, will go a long ways in that direction."

Mrs. N. M. Windsor, president of the Child Conservation Conference, is another who wrote the newspaper, endorsing the editorial and declaring that "the theatres may feel that they have to make an appeal to the sewer-like tastes of some people, but eventually they will learn that the better element is in the majority and that culture and decency have not disappeared entirely."

Here's Text of Editorial

Reproduced herewith is the entire wording of a moving picture show advertisement which appeared in all St. Louis newspapers Thursday. It is a sample of how the great educational force of the movies is being used to drag the American mind down to a wallow of filth. This particular moving picture may not warrant the language used in this advertisement, but nevertheless the incident is indicative of a condition sadly in need of correction.

"The legitimate stage has gone through one of the worst seasons in its history following an epidemic of dirty stage offerings put out in the erroneous belief that the human mind in this age of so-called modernism has become a sewer that likes to collect dramatic dregs and refuse coated with a veneer of art.

"The theatre magnates have found out their error and have started out on a better tack with a trail of passed dividends, receiverships, and shrinking stock valuables to remind them how badly they erred in believing the background of decency behind American life and culture had disappeared.

"The moving picture interests have the same lesson to learn, and will, we believe, learn it soon. It may be true, as frequently urged by moving picture interests, that the American public now demands a certain amount of spice in a picture and that the box office receipts go up when they get it and down when they don't. If true, it is because their tastes have been educated that way largely by the movies themselves; but it does not follow that license is completely unbridled, with the sky or rather the gutter as the limit.

"Will Hays has been set up as a movie czar with one of his duties to keep salaciousness out of the films and advertising. How ineffective that work has been is beautifully exemplified here. Meanwhile movie magnates are headed blindly on the same path the legitimate show producers followed. In their own interests and in the interest of public decency, they should heed the warning afforded by the example of the regular stage and start restoring the moving picture industry to the high place that it deserves to occupy in enlightenment and entertainment."

Talkers Censored Under New Va. Law

Richmond, Va.—Providing for the regulation of sound films and their exhibition, the Virginia State Legislature this week passed a bill amending and adding ten new sections to the law governing censorship. The bill, originating in the lower house, was amended in the senate. One of the outstanding amendments is:

"In cases where both silent and sound versions of films bearing the same title are offered for license the two versions are not to be regarded as duplicated. Each version or print shall be treated as the original and examined by the division, and the fee for each original shall be $2 per one thousand feet or fraction thereof."

The bill also provides that censorship shall continue under the Attorney General's supervision. Other provisions are in substance:

Any permit or license issued may be revoked by the division five days after notice.

Violations of any of the provisions of the bill shall be punished as a misdemeanor, and on conviction, the person so convicted shall be fined not less than $25, nor more than $50, on first offense. Second and subsequent offenses carry a fine of not less than $50, nor more than $100.

RKO-Pathe Merger Deal Reported Set Despite Persistent Denials It Isn't On

N. J. Clearance to Be Tested in Suit of Exhibitor Unit

New Jersey exhibitors will be pleased to cooperate for a permanent solution of the arbitration problem, states Joseph M. Seider, president of the state association, who calls upon all exhibitors of the state to "live up to the strict letter of their contracts and avoid disputes." His statement was prompted by claims of distributors that exhibitors generally are disregarding contracts and "that they are swamped with bad checks."

Fight of New Jersey exhibitors against protection and enforcement of the guarantee and overage method of selling will be carried to a finish, according to Joseph M. Seider, president of the state unit. The association, which underwent reorganization at a meeting at Newark, charges that extended protection given to affiliated theatres is a conspiracy and is prepared to institute suit against the practice which "will be carried to the highest court," if necessary.

The New Jersey unit previously planned to start suit to determine legality of extended protection, but as exclusively published by Motion Picture News, refrained from doing so at the request of the Dept. of Justice, which was conducting its own investigation into the situation in the state.

Jersey Bill Seeks S. R. O. Sales Ban

Trenton, N. J.—Local option on Sunday shows, ban on S.R.O. sales and the printing of admission prices on tickets which cannot be sold for any other price are provided for in bills introduced in the New Jersey legislature. The local option bill would make it lawful to engage in any recreation on Sunday which is lawful on any other day of the week. The anti-S.R.O. bill, now in committee bans sale of tickets unless seats are actually available, and would ban advance ticket sales. Penalties of $25 to $100, 90 day jail term, or both, are provided.

Jersey Exhibitors Plan Fight on S.R.O. Measure

New Jersey's exhibitor unit is mobilized to back the Sunday option bill and oppose the anti-S.R.O. sale, county censorship and padlock bills now pending in the state. At the recent Newark convention the following were named to the legislative committee: I. M. Hirshblond, Toms River; Frank Warren, Princeton; S. E. Samuelson, Newton; Joseph M. Seider, president, and Leon Rosenblatt, secretary, are ex-officio members.

Arliss made this several years ago as a silent. The fact should help the draw of the new version.

Milliken Tells of Film's Part in America's Life

Important contributions made by motion pictures to the industrial, social and economic life of America were discussed this week by Carl E. Milliken, former governor of Maine, now secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Milliken spoke in Meriden, Conn., Brooklyn, N. Y., and Scranton, Pa. In Meriden he told members of the Foreman's Club of the Y. M. C. A. that "motion pictures are the ounce of prevention that exceed the pound of cure in effecting social and industrial health of the modern community."

New German Film Is Sordid Meller, Say Critics

"Caught in the Underworld" has an interesting theme, but it is not as well pictured as it deserved to be, New York critics declare in their reviews, excerpts from which follow:

American— . . . sordid melodrama . . . photograph is poor and direction amateurish. . .

Daily News— . . . With its drab, sordid story, its slow, trite performance and its jumbled mixture of events, it certainly leaves one in the Berlin underworld. . .

Graphic— . . . despite its obviosu age, it still has . . . a plot which holds interest

Herald-Tribune— . . . not very convincing in its logic. . . But insofar as its camera work, the lighting and the makeup . . . go it is an interesting and sometimes beautifully photographed picture

Journal— . . . while the picture is directed in a heavy-handed manner and the acting is somewhat stilted, the picture is not without interest because of its story and some good camera effects.

Post . . . heavily laden with . . . sentiment . . . as badly acted as its theme is artificial. . .

Sun— . . . its theme is interesting even though its production isn't . . . don't imagine that it has much chance in these loud-mouthed days of the talkies.

Telegraph—A lurid, bloodthirsty melodrama, directed with a heavy hand. . .

Telegram— . . . while the picture is directed in a heavy-handed manner, and the acting is somewhat stilted, the picture is not without interest. . .

Times— . . . a poor motion picture with a most interesting theme. . .

E. B. Derr Last Week Said 20 Year R-K-O Franchise Firm's Only Link

Despite repeated denials, report persists that a consolidation deal between RKO and Pathe is "in the bag," with only details to be worked out before announcement of the reported plan is forthcoming.

For several weeks there have been persistent reports that a deal was in work, but these met with denial.

Last week, E. B. Derr, executive vice-president in charge of production, stated on the Coast that there was no foundation for reports of an impending deal. The sole link existing is a 20-year franchise under which Radio-Keith-Orpheum plays the Pathe product.

Efforts to reach RKO officials for a statement proved unavailing Thursday.

Miss Greenwood Injects Pep Into New Vehicle

"So Long Letty" (Warners) is Charlotte Greenwood's picture. To her, the New York critics give high praise for a successful portrayal of the role in which she made one of her first stage appearances. In the review briefs, which follow, appear arguments pro and con, but, as a whole, the picture is accepted as peppy comedy:

American—A mad and merry comedy . . . harvesting a rich crop of laughter . . .audience . . . enjoyed every moment. . . .

Daily Mirror—Fast fun and plenty of laughs. . . .

Daily News— . . . If you're in a laughing mood, we'd advise "So Long Letty." Also if you're in need of a mirth tonic. It's the goods. . . .

Graphic— . . . laughs come' often and loudly. . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . Charlotte Greenwood . . . gives to the film its rollicking, bouncing pep. . . .

Journal— . . . Miss Greenwood's . . . comic moments animate the musical comedy situations and make the picture a fair screen musical. . . .

Sun— . . . "So Long Letty," unfortunately, is not much to stop, look at and listen to.

Telegram— . . . Even though the plot . . . is lukewarm by now, you will find the picture fast moving and generally entertaining.

Telegraph— . . . a lively and engaging farce done in the best idiom of the talkies. . . .

Times— . . manages to turn up as a cheery photoplay with many entertaining moments. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . Charlotte Greenwood . . . puts the piece over . . . with a gusto and broad humor which is sending Strand audiences into gales of laughter. . . .

World (Morning)— . . .funny—exceedingly funny —if you can overlook the too predictable plot and concentrate on the individualistic oddities of Miss Greenwood. . . .

Grandeur Films in Foxcolor is Next Step as Roxy Opens with Wide Film

First Regular Picture House to Adopt Grandeur Policy; Six More to Follow

Grandeur pictures in Foxcolor is the next step planned by Fox Films, following introduction Thursday of "Happy Days," first picture designed for Grandeur at the Roxy, New York.

These will be made in laboratories nearing completion in New York and on the Coast. The New York laboratory, to start operation next month, occupies the first and second floors of the home office building and annex.

The first Foxcolor Grandeur pictures will be "The Movietone Follies of 1930," "High Society Blues," and "Song of My Heart." There will be 16 on the 1930-31 program, according to present plans.

All Fox pictures of the future, starting with "Happy Days," are to be made with three negatives, Grandeur, standard size Movietone and standard size silent, according to Winfield Sheehan.

Introducing Fox Color

Foxcolor is to be introduced in "Song o' My Heart," which is to have its New York premiere March 17. The picture has been made on both standard-size and Grandeur film.

Six Fox Theatres Getting Set for Grandeur Machine

Grandeur projectors will be installed at once in Grauman's Chinese, Hollywood, and Fox theatres, in Brooklyn, Detroit, St. Louis and Washington. With the Roxy, New York, this will make six first-run Fox houses to be so equipped.

Three Grandeurs Ready

Hollywood—Fox has two pictures ready with Grandeur and a third, "Fox Movietone Follies of 1930" in work. The first two are "Happy Days," now current at the Roxy in New York and "Song o' My Heart," the John McCormack picture.

After a Color Process

Hollywood—Nathan Gordon, former theatre magnate of Boston, and J. T. Cosman, well known in the raw stock field, are on the hunt for a practical color process.

Grandeur Fine for Stage Numbers and Spectacle; Gives 3rd Dimension Effect; But Distortion Stays, NEWS Says

Grandeur, demonstrated as an experiment some months ago with "Fox Movietone Follies" at the Gaiety, New York, is now definitely in the ring for public favor. "Happy Days," first Fox picture to be filmed with wide angle cameras, made its debut at the Roxy yesterday.

In intimate scenes, impressive only in that it made the images larger—if impressive that can be called. Claims that distortion is eliminated were not borne out from where this reviewer sat, at least. In some instances, the sound was barrelly and smothered and the figures often amazingly tall and angular. From orchestra center, half way back; the picture lost what was often its unnatural proportions.

As soon as "Happy Days" swung into its full stage stuff however, the benefits of Grandeur became apparent. The first view of the curtain was majestic, carried a sweep unobtainable with 35 mm. film and conveyed a definite impression of third dimension. The sets assumed depth and height commensurate with their actual size. You seem to feel that you are looking at the real thing. Potentially that's very significant for it opens up a wide vista of possibilities. Particularly in the filming of sporting and news events will Grandeur prove of great value.

KANN

WIDER sweep for dramatic portrayals and a full stage effect are brought to the screen by Grandeur. The new wide film process gives the picture a greater definition and clearer sound reproduction.

The much sought-after third dimension effect is gained to a degree by Grandeur, although there is considerable to be desired from this angle. There is an improvement over the earlier Grandeur film shown some time ago. From a loge seat, the conclusions are that Grandeur's chief contribution so far is clearer sound reproduction and better definition. The future, no doubt will bring development of more comprehensive dramatic presentations, with the close-up replaced and resort to flashbacks unnecessary by reason of the opportunities offered for simultaneous presentation of the action. This is possible because of the panoramic values of the new camera which permits photographing of more action distributed over larger sets with the necessity of long and medium shots and the consequent interruption in dramatic emphasis eliminated.

HYNES

PROBABLY no other part of the theatre will benefit from wide film on a wide screen as much as the shelf where the balcany crowds may be expected to go for Grandeur in a big way.

The distance from the last row of the balcony at the Roxy to the screen is perhaps the greatest of any theatre in the country, yet Grandeur from all corners of it left little to be desired. The enlargement of the images of the players made the screen figures more definite to the eye and, therefore, more pleasant to watch.

The stage scenes and long shots in "Happy Days" benefitted far more than close-ups and medium shots. The close-ups created an impression of unnaturalness; entirely because of size.

Considerable must be done, it would appear, to relieve intimate shots of the emptiness of their backgrounds. There seems to be miles of empty pictures around the figures themselves.

From the extreme sides of the balcony, Grandeur appeared identical. The clarity of the dialogue, however, was often impaired from this post.

Coast Inventor Offers Wide Pictures Via Regular Film at Low Cost of $25

Wide Screen Coming Soon, Warner States

Hollywood—Warners will be found with the majority of picture producers on the exact size of the wide film that will eventually be used, declares Jack L. Warner, who asserted further that standardization of wide film to a specific size was imperative. He forecast the width would be somewhere close to 70 mms.

Hollywood—"The wide screen is coming, and coming right away," Jack Warner declared at a testimonial luncheon here to Oscar Strauss, when the Viennese composer arrived to begin work on a Vitaphone operetta. The new development will make possible the showing of action in two or more rooms at once, instead of jumping from one to another, he said. Up to now, Warner continued, the screen has copied the stage and the printed story, but henceforth it will lead and originate. Fifty newspaper and magazine writers attended the luncheon.

Warners Switch Vitaphone Production to 1st Nat'l

Hollywood—Production of Vitaphone Varieties has been moved from Warner to First National because of increased feature production at the Warner plant. Bryan Foy still continues as supervisor, with Herman Raymaker, Carter De Haven and Roy Mack assuming charge of various units.

Earnings of Warners Forecasts Record Year

Warner Bros. for the first quarter of its current fiscal year expects to show a earnings of approximately $5,500,000 after charges and taxes are deducted. This period includes the three months ending Nov. 30, 1929. Profits are expected to be the largest quarterly returns ever realized by the company.

Earnings, based on the above figures, would be equal, after preferred dividends, to slightly over $2 a share on the 2,627,005 shares of common outstanding at the previous fiscal year of company ending Aug. 31, 1929.

Hollywood—Fifty-two one reel comedies, 12 Potter series one-reel comedies, 12 musical and color two-reel comedies are planned by Warners for the coming year. Straight vaudeville turns are to be abandoned, it is stated. The one-reelers will follow the regular formula of film comedies with talk and sound added.

"Many of the points for which Equity fought have been granted in a large measure; in other words, they now recognize that those requests were fair and equitable," declares Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity Ass'n, in commenting on the new free-lance players' agreement adopted on the Coast. The new agreement would give justification of the Equity strike if any were needed, he says.

Twin City Open Shop Move Begun

Minneapolis—Open-shop move of a number of Twin City houses is slated to start Saturday when Franklin Amusement Co.'s Park abandons its union policy. The Franklin and La Salle are expected to follow suit, with other independents in the two cities slated to swing into line in the move, which had its origin in wages and number of men demanded in sound houses.

$200,000,000 Saving to Industry Claimed With New Device; Machine Change Abolished

San Francisco—Complete changeover of cameras and projection machines to carry wide films, estimated to cost $200,000,000 is unnecessary, according to Leon Douglas, who has developed a new machine which he claims will give wide film effect by means of standard width film at a cost not exceeding $25.

When Douglas gave a demonstration at his laboratory in Menlo Park, he revealed what he terms one principle of his new lenses, which are set in a copper frame, one screwing on the front of the camera, and the other on the projector. They are finely ground cylinders of glass, one concave, the other convex. The degree of curve—the diaptor specifications—were worked out after lengthy lens experimentation and following Douglas' mathematical formulae. The photographed image is contracted by two-thirds, with the new lens installed on a camera. Ordinary film is used, the image being contracted through a process called lateral condensation. No perpendicular contraction is provided for, as it is the desire of producers to merely widen the screen image to the full width of a stage, and retain approximately the present perpendicular dimensions.

The effect of the Douglas lens is claimed to give the camera a range approximately three times its present one, thereby providing for the photographing of three times the lateral area now caught by the camera and the contracted image is brought back to normal proportions by adjusting or correcting the lens in the projecting room. In other words, the image is first "packed" into the area of standard film size and then in the projector is expanded back to its proper dimensions. Eastman Kodak Co. is understood to be experimenting with Douglas' system for use on still cameras.

Kent and Myers to Meet Feb. 19 to Discuss Future of 5-5-5 Conferences

Opinion Declared Divided as to Feasibility of More Committee Confabs

Conference between S. R. Kent of Paramount and Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n to discuss possible future meetings of the 5-5-5 conferences is scheduled for Feb. 19. Kent, in a statement this week, says he will have nothing to say on the question of getting together until he has "talked with a few people on both sides."

While he has not completed a study of the decree, awaiting return to New York of certain members of the Paramount legal department, Kent apparently does not feel, as does M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president, that the Thacher decree has shut the door to future conferences of the 5-5-5 committees, so far as any chance for accomplishment is concerned.

Future Held Dubious

"No two people have the same opinion as to whether we can proceed from here," is Kent's way of putting it.

Meanwhile, a number of distributors are said to share the view that no collective action is possible by the various committees, so that further conferences would be unproductive. The conferences, which adjourned just before Christmas, were suggested by Kent in a move to bring about harmony in exhibitor ranks through proposed merger of the M. P. T. O. A. and Allied. Myers is in favor of continuing the conferences.

Myers for More Meetings

Kent, who returned last week from Europe, wrote Myers on the subject of future conferences, suggesting the two meet at luncheon to discuss the matter. A reply by the Allied leader, voicing his belief there should be continuation of the conferences, resulted in the setting of the Feb. 19 date.

Should the conferences be resumed, a preliminary meeting of distributors would be held to draft their proposals. This meeting was to have been held in January, but was abandoned when the Thacher decree upset matters.

Volunteer System for Okla. Seen

Oklahoma City—Voluntary arbitration, with resort to the courts as an eventuality, is seen here as a solution for the situation caused by the Thacher decision outlawing compulsory arbitration. However, relations existing between distributors and exhibitors are cordial and a majority of cases are settled amicably between parties concerned.

To Enforce Contracts for Prints

Enforcement of all contracts by institution of suits where necessary, and recourse to the copyright law to halt bicycling and unauthorized holding over of prints is understood planned by distributors to curb mounting difficulties caused by the abandonment of arbitration. Meanwhile, plans are being speeded to meet the situation through drafting of new contract provisions, providing in some instances for arbitration, in others for advance deposits.

In a statement on the subject, S. R. Kent points to the "certain amount" of contract trouble already evident, and says that Paramount is drafting its own form of contract. This is slated to have an advance deposit clause. Paramount "in some cases will arbitrate and in others do the best we can" Kent says

Philadelphia Zone Exhibitors Seeking Return of "Some Form" of Arbitration

Government Suit Blamed for Loss

Expensive and prolonged litigation with the government reflects an adverse effect on sales and earnings of General Outdoor Advertising Company for 1929, the company's statement shows.

Drop in sales last year represented the difference between $29,912,901 for 1928 to $27,597,278 for 1929. The decline represented 7.7 per cent. The drop is laid to the unfavorable effect created in the minds of advertisers by the litigation.

The effect upon net income was minimized considerably by a reduction of $1,000,000 in expenses. Although suit of the government was satisfactorily settled last year, the effect has been carried over into the first of this year, the report indicates.

Agitation against obliterating scenic beauty on highways by billboards has failed to develop injurious effects, it was stated.

Exclusive Society House to Present 20 Weekly Talkers

Twelve Thursday night presentations of American and foreign-made pictures are to be given by society's exclusive talker playhouse to be conducted by Cinema Guild, Inc., as the International Cinema Salon in "The Playhouse in the Clouds" on the 50th and 51st floors of the Chanin Bldg., New York. The Guild will restrict its membership to 100 leading lights of the Social Register, each of whom will be permitted to entertain one guest at the weekly showings. The group will subscribe for a series of 20 presentations, ten to be given starting late in March until June, and ten to start Sept. 15. There will be no showings during the summer. The Guild will have the auditorium on Thursday nights only. The balance of the week it will be available for trade showings and other purposes.

New Canadian Contract Is Reported In Prospect with 1-1 Arbitration Plan

Proposed New Contract Would Closely Follow British Pattern Is Claim

Toronto—Canadian exhibitors are to get a new rental contract, which will be more along the lines of the form of agreement in vogue in the British Isles, providing for a 1-1 system of arbitration, it is stated here. Under the plan exhibitor and distributor will name one arbitrator each, the third to be selected by the other two. The present system is 3-3 arbitration, the same as in practice in the United States, until outlawed by the Thacher decree.

Enforcement of awards in the British Isles is a matter for the courts, but in the Canadian contract this will be governed by rules and regulations embodied in the contract.

The decision of Judge Thacher against compulsory arbitration in the United States was based on the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, but there is no similar law in the Dominion. All Canadian provinces provide statutes for arbitration and there is, therefore, no necessity for dropping the compulsory arbitration clause in the Canadian contract.

Incidentally, the legal custom in the Dominion is to follow British judgments and interpretations and the new Canadian standard contract will be patterned more after the British rental form than previously, it is stated. There is every likelihood that exhibitors and distributors will agree to continue arbitration, as there is little or no opposition to it from any quarter.

Yes, Times Have Changed

The changing viewpoint in the industry as concerns talkers and their future is emphasized by Walter Ramsey in current issue of " Motion Picture Magazine." Here, for instance, are some leading viewpoints of two years ago:

Jesse Lasky: "Talky pictures would be impossible out-of doors. How ridiculous street scenes would be in which the only sounds were those of actors speaking!"

Sam Goldwyn: "When the large figures on the screen start to talk, the illusion of reality is decreased rather than increased. Talking pictures are too far off to be discussed as a practicality."

Cecil B. DeMille: "The fact remains that if I thought the development was at all practical I would have made time to investigate it."

Clarence Brown: "There is so much money invested in present-day silent equipment that there is really little danger of the big companies throwing out everything and beginning again on a talking picture basis."

Douglas Fairbanks: "Within the next ten years we may expect new developments in the picture business. Sound may be combined with motion, but not for a long, long time."

"I believe the so-called talking picture will serve simply as one more item, or feature, upon a program which is striving for variety." This from Hal Roach. Irving Thalberg added his crepe to the death-knell of the talkies. "They just aren't as enjoyable as silent pictures," said he. "Color and sound are, at best, fads!"

Lesser's Deal to Finance "Way Down East" Is Off

Hollywood—Although a deal has been under discussion between D. W. Griffith and Sol Lesser for the latter to finance a talker remake of "Way Down East," that proposition now is cold, it is understood. There never was a deal discussed for sale to Lesser of Griffith's stock or interest in United Artists, states Albert L. Grey, Griffith's business manager.

Publix Reported Taking Over Providence House

Providence, R. I.—Publix, it is persistently reported, is to take over the Strand, the only independent house of the city's "big four." Publix now has seven Rhode Island houses, the Laurie, Stadium and Bijou, Woonsocket; Strand and Imperial, Pawtucket, and the Paramount and Strand at Newport. The local Strand has a capacity of 2,200 and is managed by Edward L. Reed.

"Queen Kelly" Shelved Temporarily by U. A.

This week's change on "Queen Kelly" puts the Swanson vehicle on the shelf, temporarily, in favor of Josephine Lovett's "What a Widow!" United Artists has had the picture in work for more than two years, producing it first silent. Gloria was all set to make her talker debut in the closing reel, but this has been abandoned and most of the material shot will be junked for a new all-talking version, following the Lovett story.

Silent Shortage Impends; Worries British Showmen

London—Impending shortage of silent films is worrying British exhibitors. The subject is under discussion among various branches of the exhibitor association.

Sound Work Is Banned By Australian Musicians

Sydney—Australian musicians are forbidden to play for film synchronization under an edict issued by the musicians' union.

Ex-Mrs. Chaplin to Do Series of Talking Films

Hollywood—Lita Gray Chaplin will star in a series of talker feature comedies to be produced by Harry Weber, former vaudeville producer and manager.

Chevalier to Remain on Paramount Roster

Hollywood—Maurice Chevalier's new two-year contract with Paramount calls for eight pictures, four on the 1930-31 schedule and four in the following season. "Too Much Luck" is the first in the new group. Production will be in the East.

Asher Joins Universal as Associate Producer

Hollywood—E. M. Asher has signed with Universal as a producer. He formerly produced independently as a member of Asher, Small & Rogers unit.

R-K-O Shows Net Profit of $2,500,000 for 1929

Los Angeles—Net profits in January of Radio-Keith-Orpheum were approximately $800,000, according to an authorized statement here. The company, at the same time, made the statement that it would spend $10,000,000 this year in production.

Estimates indicate the company will show a profit for 1929 of more than $2,500,000, or nearly $1 a share on the 1,833,746 shares of common after preferred dividends.

Walsh Resents Report He Leaves Fox in May

Hollywood—Raoul Walsh has a real peeve over reports that he intends to sever his connection with Fox. The director's contract expires in May, but it is understood he has a personal agreement with Winfield R. Sheehan beyond that period. Walsh now is preparing "Oregon Trail."

Milton Sills Signs For One Picture with Fox

Hollywood—Milton Sills resumes film appearances following a year's illness and has signed with Fox for a featured spot in "A Very Practical Joke." Sills' agreement with Fox is for one production only.

Fox Goal 100 Houses Up-State; Goldberg to Handle Expansion

33 in New York State Now, But Chain Seeks More—New G. M. Goes to Utica

With appointment of Harry D. Goldberg as general manager up-state New York, Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., has set an objective of 100 theatres for itself in that territory.

Goldberg will be in complete charge of the development which is expected to get under way shortly after his transfer from New York to Utica early next week. At present Fox Metropolitan has 33 houses in its upper New York roster, these theatres, in the main, being the former Schine circuit. Out of his Utica headquarters Goldberg will general manage the entire chain and negotiate for additions.

His promotion comes as a result of his work in managing the Manhattan, Queens, Bronx and Westchester theatres of Fox Metropolitan. The 27 houses under his supervision have been heavily in the black since Goldberg took them over and are returning a greater weekly profit than any other division in the local chain. R. D. Kramer, long an assistant to Joe Leo, president of Fox Metropolitan, temporarily takes over Goldberg's duties in New York.

Powers Out of Fox to Join Schine Circuit

Albany—Walter M. Powers, district manager for the Fox theatres in northern New York with headquarters in Watertown, has resigned to accept a similar position with the Schine chain.

Powers was located in Watertown for about 18 months, coming there from Oswego, where he was manager of the Strand for nearly six years. When he came to Watertown he was made district manager for the Schine enterprises and was retained in the same position when Fox bought the Schine houses. Powers was at one time located in Albany. Gus Lampe, of Brooklyn, has been made district manager in northern New York for the Fox houses, succeeding Powers.

Another First Run Will Open in Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—Another first run is scheduled to be opened here when remodeling of the Knights of Columbus hall is completed. The proposed house will seat 2,000 and be operated by James S. Gladish and associates. It will cost around $250,000 and operate under a combination policy.

"Sally" Grosses $28,000 in 2-Week Providence Run

Providence—Four features cleaned up big in this town last week, "Sally," "General Crack," "Chasing Rainbows" and "Love Comes Along." Four downtown houses, the Strand, Majestic, Loew's State and Victory did capacity all week despite opposition from prize fights and plenty of amateur entertainments. "Sally" grossed close to $28,000 in two weeks at the Strand.

Pennsylvania Governor in Talker Praises Comerford

Harrisburg, Pa.—Gov. John S. Fisher, of Pennsylvania, through the medium of a talking film, paid a fine personal tribute to M. E. Comerford, of Scranton, Pa., pioneer motion picture exhibitor, which was reproduced in houses of the Comerford chain as a feature of the programs of the first week's celebration of the Comerford Silver Jubilee.

All of the two hundred and more affiliated theatres of the circuit participated in the celebration marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of Comerford's entrance into the picture business. The jubilee was planned to last throughout February.

Governor Fisher in his talker, said:

"It is a distinct pleasure to me, Mr. Comerford, to congratulate you and your associates in the motion picture business, on its great advancement. It is always a sound privilege for a Governor of Pennsylvania to congratulate one of his fellow citizens on the attainment of any element of definite leadership.

"The motion picture business is essentially American, both in its leading personnel and in production. I am advised that ninety-five per cent of all the better pictures are made in the United States, where hundreds of thousands of our people are employed. We are very mindful of the definite lines of service the theatre screens have given to the nation, state and community.

"On the occasion of this Silver Jubilee of your major theatre efforts, I sincerely congratulate you and wish you many more years of fruitful effort for yourself, your business associates, and our great State and its people."

Comerford made an appropriate response, which also was reproduced by sound devices in the theatres.

Attorney General's Report on RCA in Four Weeks

Washington—Study of complaint against RCA, parent company of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, RKO and RCA Photophone, alleging monopoly in the radio and allied fields in violation of the anti-trust lays, is being given "preferred attention" by the Dept. of Justice, which expects to report its findings in about four weeks, according to John Lord O'Brian, assistant attorney general.

Latin-American Countries Strong for U. S. Talkers

Hollywood—Theatre attendance has increased 50 per cent in Latin-American countries since advent of talkers, according to S. B. Fernandez Cue, Spaniard, who has just completed a survey of Mexico and South America. He assists in making Spanish versions of RKO pictures.

Walter with Pathe

Hollywood—Eugene Walter has been signed as a scenario editor and dialogue writer for Pathe.

Harry D. Goldberg, under whose direction Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., will increase its Upper New York State holdings to 100 theatres. Goldberg switches headquarters from New York to Utica next week.

Near Capacity Schedule Is Under Way at Warners

Hollywood—With four pictures in production, six preparing for immediate shooting, and the same number in the process of story development, Warner studios are hitting close to maximum production capacity.

"Viennese Nights," "Dumbells in Ermine," "Courage" and "The Second Floor Mystery" are currently in production. Pictures soon to start include "Those Who Dance," "Playboy," "Three Faces East," "Fame," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" and "Moby Dick." Stories in preparation include starring material for Al Jolson, George Arliss and Winnie Lightner.

Newest Link in Loew Chain to Open Feb. 22

Feb. 22 is date set for opening of Loew's new 175th St. and Broadway Theatre, New York. The 4,000-seater is to be named by patrons. The interior is of Indo-China design and the house has a double stage and three orchestra pit lifts. It will play stage presentations from the Capitol.

Wiring Unsound in 6-Day Town; House Is Dark

Whittemore, Ia.—Another testimonial to the inability of an exhibitor to net a profit in a six-day town is demonstrated with closing of the Princess here by Rice and Bandy. The theatre had been a moneymaker until the advent of sound pictures. Now, however, patronage is going to the wired house at Algona, where there are Sunday shows. Wiring of the local house is unfeasible, states F. R. Bandy, due to the "blue" law.

Radio Buys Gleason Story

Hollywood—Film and dialogue rights to "The Fall Guy," a play by James Gleason and George Abbott, have been acquired by Radio Pictures. Screen play goes into preparation immediately, with picture assigned to William Sistrom to supervise.

R-K-O Is Reported Associated with Al Boyd in Eastern Seaboard Offensive

Price Cut Causes Priority Jam of 3 Seattle Houses

Portland, Ore.—Price cut of the Music Box to 25 cents top has caused a priority complication here, with two suits filed by opposition exhibitors, to restrain service to the Music Box for the two-bit showings. Both petitions claim they have exclusive first run rights at the quarter admission.

C. M. Dunn of the Columbia and Capitol obtained a temporary order against Columbia, restraining delivery of 22 sound films, including "The Song of Love." This was argued in court here Thursday, with the picture permitted to run at the Music Box in a modification of the order. The contract concerned is dated to run from Sept. 1, 1929 to Aug. 31, 1930.

The other action is against Tiffany and is brought by Woodlaw Amusement Co., involving the same theatres and the same contentions.

The Music Box Jan. 17 dropped to 25 cents from 50 cents

Talker Limits Being Defined, Shubert Belief

Belief that "the limits of talkie competition are becoming defined" and intention to eliminate non-profitable theatres makes management of Shubert Theatre Corp. optimistic over the future of the circuit. Competition of talkers, light attendance caused by the stock market crash and difficulties with stage hands and musicians which kept theatres dark are blamed for the net loss of $972,055 for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1929. Operations have been profitable since the beginning of January, it is stated.

Trio to Be Tried Monday on 'Bootleg' Music Charge

Morris Shapiro and Samuel A. Cohen, owners and operators of Darby Press, and S. Paul, Monday, go to trial in U. S. District Court, New York, on a charge of violating the copyright law in the publishing "bootleg" song sheets, which are sold by street venders for five cents. The trio will be prosecuted by the U. S. district attorney's office. Their arrest is in line with campaign of the Music Publishers' Protective Ass'n, against this "racket," said to be seriously affecting sheet music sales.

Boyd Deal Discussed

There have been discussions toward Radio-Keith-Orpheum participation in the new Boyd circuit, B. B. Kahane, head of the legal staff, Thursday told Motion Picture News, adding, however, that he "didn't believe anything has been done" in the matter.

Paramount Won't Serve N. W. Unit Exchange Posters

Paramount will not serve the newly-organized exhibitor poster exchange at Minneapolis, Motion Picture News learns. The exchange is being operated by the Northwest exhibitor unit, headed by W. A. Steffes. Other exchanges there are selling paper to the exchange, it is understood.

Seating Industry Ethics Code Gets Gov't O. K.

Washington—Approval of resolutions adopted by the seating industry at its trade practice conference December 19, last, was announced by the Federal Trade Commission Feb. 11. The industry produces chairs for theatres, auditoriums, etc.

Fourteen rules were accepted by the commission as condemning violations of law, and a similar number as expressions of the industry. The first group covers all practices which are violative of Federal laws, while the second comprises the attitude of the industry toward practices which, while possibly not to be reached by law are, nevertheless, considered unethical.

Group I rules cover secret payment of rebates, sales below cost to injure a competitor, commerical bribery, threats of suit for infringement of patent or trade mark, false and misleading advertising, paying commissions to competitors' salesmen without their employers' knowledge, false and misleading promises of delivery and performance, false statement as to facilities, equipment and ability, disparagement of competitors or their products, inducing breach of contract, etc.

The Group II rules cover competitive bidding, piracy of design, giving of free samples, charges for warehousing, provision by manufacturers of expensive entertainment for prospective purchases, etc.

Lou Berman Circuit Sought as First Step in Building Up Chain

Philadelphia — Acquisition of the Lou Berman group of five houses is underway by the new Arbee circuit, just launched in this territory by Al Boyd as the first step in a program of acquisition, presumably in association with Radio Keith-Orpheum.

The Berman chain includes the Roxy here, three houses at Bethlehem and one at Shenandoah.

The new chain presages a merry theatre battle in this territory, extending into New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia, with a number of former Stanley executives leading an assault against the strongly entrenched Warner line. One of the features of the plan is understood to be a combination of local independent operators.

Frank W. Buhler and Louis N. Goldsmith, former Stanley executives, are associated with Boyd in the venture. Boyd in 1928 resigned from Stanley and built the Boyd, which Warners purchased prior to its opening.

No Indication of Relief from Tax

Toronto—No change in the amusement tax has been indicated by the Ontario legislature, now in session, and any reference to it was omitted in his speech from the throne by Gov. W. D. Ross. Incidentally, he is a former director of Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Burkan Granted Writ

Nathan Burkan, attorney for 22 song writers, members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, won a step in U. S. District Court when Judge John M. Woolsey, restrained the receivers for the bankrupt music publishing firm of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, Inc., from listing as assets the works of these writers. Attorneys for the Irving Trust Company, who are the receivers, are to appeal the decision. Al Dubin, now under contract to Warner Bros. and Sammy Fain, writing for Paramount, are two of the plaintiffs.

Hollywood Sees Foreign Stock Units As Way to Avoid Production Abroad

Spanish, German, French Actors Pro-Rated Among Studios the Answer, Is Belief

Hollywood—Producers intend making no pictures abroad unless all other methods fail. Companies thousands of miles from their base and the difficulties of producing under unfamiliar conditions fail to present a pretty picture to Coast executives.

They, therefore, will import Spanish, German and French players for foreign talker versions and pro rate the Coast among the studios exactly as exclusively outlined in MOTION PICTURE NEWS some weeks ago.

Producers planning Spanish versions are busy on the stock company plan, and, despite difficulties, may work it out in a practical manner. Spanish, as a matter of fact. seems to be Hollywood's chief concern at the minute with German and French straggling somewhere in the rear.

The Spanish-American Cultural Association, headed by James Sheridan, who is the local vice-consul for Brazil, has been formed to help producers obtain the correct dope for Spanish talkers. A meeting with Fred Beetson and Jason Joy of the Hays Association already has been held at which it was determined to use Spanish stage dialogue, rather than academic Castilian, thereby, it is hoped, removing obstacles thrown up by the use of various dialects in South American republics.

A registration bureau for Spanish actors has been opened at the offices of the M. P. Producers' Association and Hollywood byways are to be combed to secure information on performers who know foreign languages.

Hollywood Full of Players for Foreign Versions

Hollywood—While producers are groping for a solution to their foreign problems with foreign stock units in Hollywood looming as the answer, a long list of former silent players, most of them free lancing now, is available if the studios determine to use them.

Suitable for Spanish versions, for instance, are Antonio Moreno, Barry Norton, Gilbert Roland, Hector Sarno, Nina Quartero, Andre De Segurola, Maria Alba, Dolores Del Rio, Mary Forbes, Shirley O'Hara, Mona Rica, Raquel Torres, Don Alvarado, Ben Bard, Darcy Corrigan, Roy D'Arcy and Paul Ellis. Many of them are entirely suitable for appearance in English talkers as well.

German linguists along Hollywood's boulevards include Hedwiga Reicher, Rudolph Schildkraut, Lena Malena, June Marlowe, Albert Conti, Fritz Feld, Stuart Holmes Otto Lederer, Otto Matiesen, Adolph Milar Lucien Prival and Mary Astor.

The French-speaking contingent embraces Pauline Garon, Jetta Goudal, Rene Adoree, Ilka Chase, Julanne Johnson, Andre Beranger Jean Debriac, Armand Kaliz, Ivan Lebedeff, Mary Astor, Jules Raucourt.

Foreign Language Players Returning

Hollywood—It's hard to tell which way this business will jump. When the sound upset had its inning, players with even a trace of an accent—no matter what kind—were thrown hurriedly into the discard. But producers forgot about their foreign markets. Now that some of the excitement has subsided and those baritones overseas clamor for attention, Hollywood studios are making a quick about face and are hurrying to again hire the very performers they had no use for some months ago.

D. W. Griffith to Use 26 Principals in "Lincoln"

Hollywood—In producing "Abraham Lincoln" for United Artists, D. W. Griffith will assemble one of the largest casts of principal players and incidental characters that has ever been used for a talker dramatic production. The script calls for a total of 26 players in prominent parts together with those in the supporting cast, while 80 "bit" players will be necessary for incidental characters.

According to Griffith, this total, aside from hundreds of extras that will be necessary, exceeds the number of players used for "Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," or "Hearts of the World."

Mintz Moving Krazy Kat Staff to Coast Studio

Charles B. Mintz, president of Winkler Film Corp., is moving his Krazy Kat staff to the Coast. Among those leaving are the chief animators, Ben Harrison and Manny Gould, and Artie Davis, Al Rose, Harold Lieblich and Joe DeNat, the musical director. Mintz engaged a private car to accommodate the staff.

British Directors Won't Make Cheap Quota Films

London—Pledge to refuse to direct any film "for which the facilities were insufficient to assure production of a first class standard (having regard to the story concerned) or which was obviously designed to supply cheap quota," has been adopted by the British Ass'n of Film Directors. The resolution, it is said, is binding on all members.

M-G-M Starts French "Unholy Night"; Signs New Song Team

Film Congress in Brussels

Washington—The International Cinema Congress is to be held in Brussels from June 2 to June 7, according to information supplied by George R. Candy to the M. P. Division of the Dep't of Commerce.

Critics Knock Dialogue in Universals "Phantom"

"Phantom of the Opera" in its new part-talker form is put on the pan by reviewers in New York, who don't think the inclusion of sound has helped a bit, but, to the contrary, believe the action is hampered by dialogue. They all agree on this point, as is evidenced by the following catch-line opinions:

Daily Mirror— . . . Chaney's greatest old-time film has been fitted out with a new sound accompaniment. . . .

Journal— . . . The result is uneven, for the added dialogue slows up action. Good melodrama in its silent form.

Daily News— . . . It's the same gruesome mystery thriller . . . Men will enjoy it as much as ever. . . .

Post— . . . the eerie thrills . . . evaporate under the strain of a dialogue which is obviously superimposed, and which moreover constantly trips up the action . . .

Telegram— . . . Despite the addition of sound, the picture still remains one of the screen's best thrillers . . . dialogue tends to slow up the action. . . .

Times— . . . still remains one of the "shockers" of films, but would no loubt have been a lot better off without the addition of the talking sequences, which for the most part are slow and stupid. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . still as ghastly as ever. . . . But the addition of sound and dialogue has taken something away from it. Somehow it is not so convincing in its present state. . . .

"With sound added, it should click again, but must be sold properly," MOTION PICTURE NEWS points out in its review of "The Phantom," appearing in this issue on page 4.

Radiotone Offering Device on Rental-Purchase Plan

Radiotone Pictures Corp., New York, has evolved a new rental-purchase plan which allows exhibitors to install Radiotone sound equipment for a weekly rental of $25. At the end of one year, the apparatus belongs to the theatre, rentals for the 12 months converting the payments into a full sale.

Two machines are supplied, requiring a.c. current for the system, which, Radiotone claims, is powerful enough for use in houses up to 2,500 seats. The amplifiers are manufactured under RCA license. A service department teaches operation without charge.

British Films Set Over Union Chain in Australia

London—Regarded as the forerunner of similar backing for British films on the part of other Australian exhibitors, Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of Union Theatres, Ltd., has contracted for the entire 1930 output of British Dominion Films.

"Wedding Bells" Between Allied and M. P. T. O. Won't Ring, Cohen Asserts

Affiliated and Unaffiliated Exhibitors Cannot Mix, He Believes

By SYDNEY S. COHEN

ANNOUNCEMENTS have been made in the trade papers concerning a possible union between the two largest exhibitor organizations, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Allied States. But it is pretty well understood in informed circles that the gestures of courtship will not materialize in a "wedding." The two parties are eugenically unsuited for matrimony, and successful marriages are not founded on such differences as herein exist.

As is well known, exhibitors are divided into two distinct classes. Those where producers hold financial interest in part or in whole in the ownership of their theatres, and those who remain financially independent and unaffiliated.

During the four years that I was honored with the presidency of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, that great exhibitor organization represented wholly and exclusively the viewpoint of the independent (the unaffiliated) theatre owner. There were more of them then. During recent years producer-affiliated theatres have been admitted to membership in such increasing numbers that today finds it an almost representative affiliated exhibitor organization.

Difference Between the Groups

With respect to the public, the problems of affiliated and unaffiliated theatre owners are one and the same. Their viewpoints on the common enemy—adverse legislation and unfair taxation—are identical. It is only when their problem is that of an assurance of product sufficient to properly run their theatres that their ways diverge. For here the producer affiliated exhibitor has one less worry than his unaffiliated cousin, for he, at least, is sure of some quality product.

When the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was functioning at its best at the Minneapolis convention in 1921, where the lusty infant that came into being in Cleveland in 1920 had grown into powerful manhood in one short year, Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., appeared before the executive committee of the M. P. T. O. A. and later signed a contract as president of F. P. L. (which contract was witnessed by Elek J. Ludvig, then treasurer of F. P. L.) to discontinue the frontal attack campaign on their theatre owner customers by acquiring theatres.

It was at Minneapolis, too, that the celebrated case of Mrs. Dodge of Vermont was a highlight, as was that of an humble exhibitor in Connecticut, a Mr. Schwartz. Mrs. Dodge, as you will remember, was a poor little widow whose tiny motion picture theatre, her all, had been taken away from her by Famous Players New England subsidiary. A committee of the M. P. T. O. A. forced a settlement after several meetings in New York with Mr. Zukor and his associates. Checks were drawn for $5,019.52 and $3,500, respectively, to partially reimburse these two obscure exhibitors for what they had suffered, and these checks tendered Mrs. Dodge and Mr. Schwartz by F. P. L. were accepted for them by the convention in open session.

A strenuous effort was made at this convention by certain emissaries of the then First National Pictures Corp. to bring about a resolution boycotting the product of Famous Players-Lasky Corp. It was at this time that Mr. Connick, representing the bankers downtown, was sitting in a position of vast importance in the business activities of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., and a boycott, if voted and carried through, would have proven very disastrous for Famous Players-Lasky Corp. It was because of this that Mr. Zukor himself came to Minneapolis and pleaded for an opportunity of appearing before the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Eternal Vigilance, Price of Safety

Realizing the sinister purpose behind the activities of these people, who wanted this move made to help them in selling their franchises at their prices, and, because we were desirous of obtaining a constructive solution of this very vexatious problem, in view of the promises of Mr. Zukor, we prevented this boycott.

Marital Bliss Out

Since the Columbus convention, speculation has been rife whether or not Allied and the M. P. T. O. A. will merge and thereby bring an end to internal strife in exhibitor organization. In this article, his second, Sydney S. Cohen explains why in his opinion the match will never endure. The basis of his argument rests on his belief that the interests of affiliated and unaffiliated exhibitors are too far apart to ever bring about a friendly and permanent coalition.

After this momentous meeting, the theatre owners of the country heaped encomiums of praise and votes of confidence upon their leaders, not stopping to realize that "eternal vigilance is the price of safety," and it was only a "skirmish" that they had won, not a battle.

Instead, that was the time to have contributed real monies, to have gotten together a real war chest, to enable the organization to maintain proper offices, and to adequately compensate counsel and sufficient human units of ability to do the work required. In other words, to buy the aeroplanes and munitions necessary to have a standing army to see that the contract of peace was kept.

Though unaffiliated organizations have not been supported right financially, I take pride in stating that when I retired as national president of the M. P. T. O. A., all bills were paid, counsel fees and every other outstanding item, and we had in our treasury a surplus of some $20,000. This was made possible largely through Carl Laemmle's munificent gift to the cause of independence, though I, myself, and other leaders personally advanced large sums from time to time to keep things going.

The Allied leader, Mr. Myers, is freed from the weaknesses of former unaffiliated organizaers, but—contributed less money for the support and maintenance of their organization than during the year previous. They were lulled by a sense of false security, feeling that such a fight once won gave them perpetual immunity—tions; as there are no yearly elections of officers in Allied, thus obviating the possibility of producers or others creating dissension in the ranks; as well as the bitter heart-burnings of disappointed aspirants for office, and their attempts at retaliation even at the expense of the most constructive policies, that would protect the theatres of the unaffiliated theatre owners.

Such a Match Is Eugenically Unsuited, Former Exhibitor Leader Says

Another point which adds to Allied's strength at this time is the fact that exhibitors have suffered more in recent years (in the old days some of them had not suffered enough) and that makes them more amenable to reason now. They also realize the great cost to them of the changed conditions of today, and many a one in reminiscing is saying in effect: "Why didn't we stick?" "Why did we let them fool us?" "What might have been!" etc.

But the weakness of any unaffiliated theatre owner organization is the fact that there is no real control over their members, nor can they in any way compel them to abide by resolutions or agreements made in their behalf.

The unaffiliated theatre owner fears to express his views too loudly lest film will be withheld from him. He is constantly beset with the thought that he will be penalized. An unaffiliated theatre owner organization has no film to give its members or other theatre owners.

Theatre owners have had to temporize with expediency, and must still do so. The gasoline which keeps the business machine going is pictures. Product is the control of the industry. The distribution angle is the most important one. This business is not like any ordinary business, as you are dealing with controlled merchandise, and, aside from that, the manufacturers of this merchandise operate retail mediums in competition with their customers.

Home Offices Control Affiliated

The government copyright and patent laws help this situation, but from the experience I have had before the Patents Committees of the House of Representatives and the United States Senate, it is my opinion that the makers of these laws never intended them to be used as they are now.

The affiliated theatre owner's situation is different, as the home office in New York controls their activities, and dictates the policy of the member throughout the country.

The M. P. T. O. A. officials and the Allied theatre owners' officials have been meeting during the past few months with the producers' organization. It has been referred to in the trade press as on a 5-5-5 basis; but that is all wrong. One has a howitzer gun, one a 16 centimeter, and the third, a mere toy pistol. No union, no marriage, can take place here, it would be unnatural—almost inhuman. The only problems they are all commonly interested in, although one greater than the other, is that of the blue law menace, and antagonistic, hostile and destructive legislation and taxation.

The prices for film plus score charges, for the little man today, are too high. Everything possible should be done to keep him in business, especially the theatre owners in the neighborhood section of the big cities or in the small communities.

My experience in securing the very helpful co-operation of the theatre owners in the passing of the Sunday opening bill in New York State, the deposit bill (segregating the funds of theatre owners taken as deposits), the children's bill, and later at Washington in the removal of the seat tax and of admission taxes up to $1, as well as in making contacts with various departments of the government, proved that the so-called little man was the big fellow insofar as his legislator was concerned. He

Red-Hot Dogs

If you're in the market for something new in short subjects, drop in at your M-G-M exchange and take a peek at "Hot Dogs." After you see it, you're going to book it. It's one of the most entertaining two-reelers of this, or any other season.

Zion Myers and Julius White directed an all-canine cast of fifty in a night club setting where the dogs wine and dine, put on a show, and behave in a manner which is unique. A two-timing "wife" is caught by her "husband" in the cabaret, and a battle follows, with the "husband" dropping from a bullet. A court room scene follows—with a dog-judge, jury, and prosecuting attorney, and it's a wow. Humans double in voice.

CUNNINGHAM

Fast Work

When a comedian of star rating sat in on the story conference to prepare his next picture, he decided the story was worthless, and told the studio head immediately. After a brief argument, the comedian walked out and disappeared. Calls to his house the next day found him "not in." On the second day, the studio detailed a sentry to watch the comedian's house to catch him going out or in. But this proved fruitless.

The studio head was plainly worried, when one of the company officials in New York called him up to say that a current Broadway stage hit had been purchased as the next starring vehicle for the comedian, and no further work should be done on the first story. The Coast executive explained he had been trying to find the comedian for three days without success, but would try to locate him to tell him of the story change immediately. He got a high voltage shock when the eastern man said, "That's not necessary, he's sitting in my office here right now."

The comedian had hopped a plane to New York when he left the studio.

What a break for Don Gillum of Fanchon & Marco, who was assigned to show the sights of Los Angeles to the 30 beauties chosen by "The New York Evening Graphic."

Gilbert vs. Tully

Los Angeles—In this corner, John Gilbert, dashing hero of the screen. In the other, Jim Tully, writer and hobo extraordinary. The place, a Hollywood cafe.

"I don't care to talk about it," says Gilbert questioned concerning the reported exchange of blows. "I did only what any man would have done under the circumstances."

"I did what you or anyone else would have done if a man had come charging across the room at you," said Tully, "I got up and knocked him down."

The reason? Well, some of the newspapermen dug up that old "Vanity Fair" yarn Tully wrote about Gilbert two years ago, but the rail birds are whispering there is a more recent cause for the clash. Mebbe so, mebbe so.

Oakie Taking It On the 'Chin' in Ruggles Battle

Hollywood—While Jack Oakie is arguing with Wesley Ruggles over the term contract the latter holds on his services, Paramount is saving more than $1,000 a week on Oakie's services, at the latter's expense.

Oakie came to the coast to enter pictures in 1928. Ruggles was directing at Universal, and engaged Oakie for a featured spct. Upon completion of the film, Ruggles saw possibilities in Oakie and offered him a term contract calling for play-or-pay salary starting at $100 a week, and graduating upward over a period of years. Oakie signed with the director, and it was up to the latter to keep him working to cut down the net of salary going out. After a few parts at Paramount, the latter made a deal with Ruggles for the player, with salary starting at $250 weekly.

A succession of excellent parts that rapidly brought Oakie into featured rating, definitely made the player worth more than Ruggles was receiving for Oakie, and what the latter was being paid by Ruggles. The player entered into negotiations to cancel his contract with the director so that he could secure a contract from Paramount on his own. Ruggles finally countered with a proposition which would give Oakie a net weekly salary of $1,500, and Ruggles would then make a new agreement with Paramount, which is reported to be willing to sign a contract for Oakie's services at a figure reported to be $1,750 a week. The player has balked at this arrangement, and feels he should make a direct deal with Paramount for a new agreement—with Ruggles entirely out of the picture. In turn, the director figures he should profit from his original investment and plugging.

Oakie, on the advice of friends, does not feel he wants to make anything else but a new deal without Ruggles cutting in. The player has appeared in about 12 talkers during the past year.

Yost Heads Story Dept.

Hollywood—Robert Yost is new head of the story department at Fox, succeeding Harold Lipsitz who has been promoted to head the production department in charge of outdoor romances. E. W. Legit Doomed by Sound Films, Anderson's View

Passing of the legitimate theatre, due to the sound picture development, is forecast by John Murray Anderson, who now is finishing "King of Jazz," starring Paul Whiteman, as his first picture. Compared with sound films, which he terms "the ideal medium of theatrical expression," the legitimate stage "fades into utter insignificance," he says.

"Even at its present development, the sound screen eclipses the stage just as completely as the old modern motion picture has eclipsed the old Punch and Judy show. Nor is the comparison at all far-fetched, for when contrasted with the vast possibilities of the 'talkie,' even the most pretentious production of the theatre is limited to just about the same comparative size as the little booth at the country fair.

"At the present time the legitimate stage has literally ceased to exist outside of New York. There is no 'road' any more. This fact is due, of course, to the movies—and, no matter what may be said about or against them, to the excellence of the entertainment which they bring to the masses at a moderate price."

Delmar Original Titled

Hollywood—"Come Easy" is the title of Vina Delmar's original screen story for Warners. Lotti Loder, discovered in Europe by Darryl Zanuck, will be featured with Archie Mayo directing.

U. A. Contract Is Canceled George Cohan Asserts

Chicago—George M. Cohan, whose personal American flag has been flown at half mast since signing with Joseph M. Schenck, ran the banner to the top when, he announced smilingly, that the seven-day-old contract which would have netted him in the neighborhod of a cool million for writing, directing and acting in United Artists' pictures, had been cancelled. And, sez George, at great trouble to himself. He was the person who had it cancelled.

"I belong to the stage," was the only explanation he would offer.

Schenck signed Cohan here a week ago and continued on his way to Hollywood. Georgie reconsidered and asked to be excused, via long distance. Schenck tried to dissuade him. George phoned his own —and Schenck's—friend, Dennis F. O'Brien, who represents U. A. Now Cohan says he "was out of pictures for keeps and the happiest acting man on any stage."

He is scheduled to play "Gambling" here two or more weeks and then head for Boston via St. Louis and Buffalo or Detroit. The California engagements are out. A new play is said to be smouldering in Cohan's mind, and without "Gambling" and four other productions to be made ready for the screen, without a "songie" for Jolson to turn out, he is ready, he says, to roll up his sleeves and write it—and act it on his chosen stage when it is written.

"I don't need the extra million, anyhow," Cohan commented on the cancellation of his contract.

U. A. Signing Benet?

Hollywood—United Artists is endeavoring to sign Stephen Vincent Benet to a term contract to write adaptations of pictures. Benet, winner of many literary honors, recently came west to prepare the story of "Abraham Lincoln" for D. W. Griffith's production of that name.

M-G-M Buys "New Moon"

Hollywood—M-G-M has purchased screen rights to "The New Moon," Broadway musical success now on tour. Preparations are already under way to get the picture into production as soon as possible for early release.

New Anti-Chain Organization Mapping Drive Against Circuit Operation in Ohio

Hollywood—When Mae West was playing in her stage show "Diamond Lil" on the coast, she asked a well known film star just what he thought of the play for picturization. Without hesitation, the player replied: "Better ask Colonel Joy of the Hays association about that."

R. Blair Heads Publix Houses in Pacific N. W.

Seattle—Upon their arrival in this city this week, Ralph E. Crabill, western division manager of Publix, and Charles E. Kurtzman, Publix's Pacific Coast chief, appointed Robert Blair as Pacific Northwest director for the circuit. Blair has been managing director of the Seattle for more than a year.

In his new capacity he will have jurisdiction over the Seattle and Metropolitan here and the Portland and Rialto in Portland. He is being succeeded at the Seattle by William A. Hartung, for the last 25 years with Orpheum in Seattle, Vancouver, Denver, Salt Lake City, Kansas City and Chicago. Hartung resigned as manager of the New Orpheum in this city about two months ago.

Mrs. Crisp, Hays Aide, Decorated by Alfonso

Washington—Mrs. Irene C. Crisp, assistant to Burt New in the Washington office of the Hays Ass'n, has been decorated by King Alfonso of Spain with the cross of Lazo de la Real Orden de Isabel la Catolica.

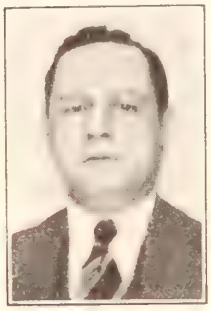
The presentation was made in the Spanish embassy personally by Ambassador, Don Alejandro Padilla, in the presence of a number of high Spanish officials. In the formal letter which accompanied the presentation, Ambassador Padillo declared it was in recognition of the "interest and activities" shown by Mrs. Crisp "in attending to requests against the reproduction of films which were misleading about Spain."

Derr Lining Up Writers Under New Regime

Hollywood—With definite production policies outlined for the coming year, Pathe is building a scenario and writing staff. E. B. Derr has signed Eugene Walter on a term contract as editor of dialogue.

Other additions include Josephine Lovett, Clara Beranger, Clare Kummer, Armitage Trail, Sada Cowan, Russell Medcraft, Paul Schofield, W. C. Tuttle, Lynn Riggs, and James Seymour, Rollo Lloyd, A. A. Kline and H. Schwartz. Tay Garnett, under contract to Pathe to write and direct, has been assigned to write two originals for William Boyd and Eddie Quillan.

Rosenberg with Sono-Art as Head of Western Div.



Ben F. Rosenberg

Offices under his supervision will include: Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Salt Lake City, Butte and Denver. Rosenberg is going to the Coast via the southern route, planning stops at Miami, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas.

Chevalier Paid 25 Grand for 1 Week at 'Frisco

Hollywood—Record salary of $25,000 for one week's personal appearances was paid by the San Francisco Automobile Show for Maurice Chevalier. The star was the attraction for one-half an hour twice daily during the show last week and drew tremendous crowds.

The $25,000 for a single week is understood to top any figure yet paid for an individual performer or star for the same period of time, and tops the record figure of the San Francisco Auto Show by $8,000, when $17,000 was secured by a well known band for the annual show.

Waverly, N. Y., Gets Sun. Shows After Referendum

Rochester, N. Y.—One more Western New York village got Sunday shows while the lone manager in another turned them down voluntarily. Waverly, a place of 5,000 population, saw its first Sunday film after the board of trustees had passed an ordinance in line with an overwhelming referendum vote favoring the action. William W. Farnum, owner and manager of the only house in Avon, 1,500 population, told leaders of a similar move there he was not interested in Sunday shows.

Allens Remain Important Factor in Canadian Field

Toronto, Can.—Premier Operating Corporation, Ltd., of which Jule Allen is manager, now is operating 16 theatres in Canada.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS wishes to correct the impression given in the published story last week that finis had been written to the exhibition career of the Allens in Canada.

In addition to operating 16 theatres in Canada the Allens are affiliated with the Amherst and Westmount in Montreal.

Legislation, Publicity Among Means to Be Used to Protect Independents in State

Columbus, O.—Chain theatres are under fire in this state, along with chain enterprises in other lines, with the Merchant Minute Men of Ohio formed to combat them. The new association plans a campaign of legislation, publicity and education in an effort to protect the independents in all lines, including the theatre. Dues are $10 annually.

Ten per cent of all theatres in Ohio are chain-operated, the association contends, and these houses do 50 per cent of all business done by theatres of the state.

Radio broadcasts, newspaper publicity and advertising and speeches before trade associations are planned to present the plight of the independent exhibitors and retailers.

Australian-Made Talker Not Liked in Singapore

Washington—Audience reaction to an Australian-made talker, shown via Australtone equipment at the Eu Tong Sen Theatre (Chinese), Singapore, was unfavorable, Assistant Trade Commissioner Donald Smith, stationed at Singapore, reports to the M. P. Division of the Dept. of Commerce. The film now is being shown at Johoro.

Government Activities in New Educational Subject

Washington—Western Electric is cooperating with the Commissioner of Education on production of "Administrative Work of the Federal Government," to be used for educational purposes.

The picture is part of a general program to develop sound films in education. The film is designed for high school use.

Just Imagine

Dublin—Irishmen here found surcease from fighting among themselves when they staged a near riot at the Savoy, all because "Smiling Irish Eyes," was not to their liking, and in their opinion "grotesque and insulting." The film, which stars that doughty little Turk, Colleen Moore, was pulled off.

RCA Type G for Houses Up to 1,000 Seats Via New Policy

Company to Devote Chief Efforts to Small House Equipment Under Plan

Type G RCA Photophone equipment Saturday is being made available to theatres up to 1,000 seats, under a new sales policy just adopted. The equipment heretofore has been available only to houses up to 500 seats. The new policy calls for limitation of output to three types of equipment, giving the exhibitor optional right to cancel, obligation to receive and pay for serving after two years. RCA henceforth will concentrate on small house equipment.

The new policy, made public by Charles J. Ross, executive vice-president of the company, is part of an expansion program, undertaken with launching of the Type G equipment, which is to comprise the company's chief output in future. On this equipment in small theatres, the exhibitor may select motor generator operation.

The Type G, heretofore, has been available only to theatres up to 500 seats, and theatres between the 500 and 1,000 classification required equipment costing nearly twice as much as the Type G. This now is revised to make the price uniform up to 1,000 seats.

Type G was launched under terms of a deal made with Allied States Ass'n. Nearly 200 models have been constructed for and shipped within the last 30 days, according to Ross. The other two types the company will continue are Type B, for theatres above 2,000 capacity and Type C for theatres between 1,000 and 2,000 capacity.

Impetus to Wiring Small Houses Seen by Abel

Inclusion of 1,000-seat houses in the price range formerly established for 500-seaters, decision to limit output to three types of reproducers and optional provision for cancellation of service charges after two years were described as changes which will prove revolutionary in a closing talk Thursday to the eastern sales convention by Sydney E. Abel, general sales manager of RCA Photophone.

The Type G equipment has speeded up wiring of small theatres since launched a few months ago, and extension of it to 1,000-seat houses should give even more impetus, Abel declared.

"We stand back of the claim we make in our new trade-mark, 'The Emblem of Perfect Sound,' and in carrying the message that phrase conveys to the exhibitor, we hope he will make it the symbol of his theatre," he said.

During the four-day meetings at the home office, talks were given by Charles J. Ross, executive vice-president; A. E. Reoch, vice-president; J. W. Rafferty, assistant sales manager in charge of the educational and industrial division, which is introducing the new portable sound reproducing equipment; L. B. Morris, general counsel; C. C. Chappelle, treasurer; H. L. Sommerer, manager of the recording department; M. C. Batsel, chief engineer, and Gerald K. Rudolph, director of publicity and advertising.

Charlestown, S. C.—The Majestic at Camden, the Rex at Sumpter, the Casino at Clinton and the Capitol at Laurens have purchased Western Electric sound equipment.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

NOTHING is impossible nowadays. No sir, no mam. Imagine us taking the B. M. T. at Times Square and arriving in the wilds of Canada in 20 minutes. And if you had seen the set for "Dangerous Nan McGrew" at the Paramount Long Island studios, you too would say, that "thar's right smart diggins out yonder in Astoria."

TWO carp, each about two and a half feet long, which were to be used in one of the scenes, were supposedly dead, and when Ray Cozine, Paramount director, suggested putting them in a tub of water, they stole more laps than there are in a six-day bike race, and in the first two rows in a burlesque show.

BETWEEN shots, Primrose, the equine who will contribute a few neighs in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," went through his paces for the special benefit of George Folsey and Joe Ruttenberg.

MORRIS KATZ, projectionist at The Paramount Long Island plant, tells us that "Ginger" Rogers, who plays a part in "Young Man of Manhattan," now in production under Monta Bell's direction, hired an ambulance to take her from a West 48th St. theatre to the Brooklyn Paramount, where she was due to sing for the radio. She got there in ten minutes or so.

EVERYTIME that we've seen him during production, Norman Foster, who plays the male lead opposite Claudette Colbert in "Young Man of Manhattan," imitates the "swallow." Last week it was rye (fact is we know it was merely ginger ale) and this time milk (fact is we're sure that this was milk). Maybe the theme song is "How Dry I Am."

EARLE DEWEY, rotund comedian who recently completed roles in "Fancy That" and "So This Is Marriage" for Pathe, is a relative of Admiral Dewey.

MONTA BELL, who is directing "Young Man of Manhattan," was so intent on finishing a certain sequence that it was a late lunch the folks ate. The theme song of the occasion was "When Do We Eat?"

GLENN TRYON shortly is to start work on Universal's production, "The Little Accident."

LUCIEN LITTLEFIELD has a featured character role in the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell production, "High Society Blues," for Fox. David Butler is directing.

JEANETTE LOFF soon will be starred by Universal, according to Carl Laemmle, Jr. Miss Loff appears in Paul Whiteman's picture.

GEORGE ARCHAINBAUD will direct Bebe Daniels in her third Radio Pictures production, "Smooth As Satin," adapted from Bayard Veiller's stage play, "The Chatterbox."

RALPH HAROLDE, stage player, has been cast in Radio Pictures' wide-film musical romance, "Dixiana," composed by Harry Tierney and Anne Caldwell. It will be Radio's first production filmed by the Spoor-Berggren stereoscopic wide-film process.

LEE TRACY has been cast in "Born Reckless," Fox Movietone picture built around Donald Henderson Clarke's novel, "Louis Beretti." Edmund Lowe heads cast. John Ford will direct.

Enterprise

"Tony" Williams, new district manager of Warner's Hudson County theatres, Tuesday was quick to take advantage of the box-office possibilities of newsreels of the burning and sinking in the Hudson River of the German liner, Muenchen. Apprised of the blaze, he summoned a cameraman to the scene, personnally picked up the finished prints at the laboratories and was showing the pictures at 7 P. M. Tuesday night in houses under his wing.

Griffith to Leave United Artists is Report on Coast

Hollywood—Rumor has it here that D. W. Griffith is leaving United Artists after completion of "Abraham Lincoln." Griffith, it was said, will retain stock in the company.

Griffith is reported negotiating with Adolph Spreckles, millionaire sugar magnate and capitalist, of San Diego and San Francisco, for financing of future productions. This will eliminate the present United Artists' financing. A new release also is believed in the cards.

W.C.T.U. Opposes N.D. Sunday Shows

Bismarck, N. D.—Petition movement calling for a referendum on the question of Sunday shows for North Dakota is being opposed by the Women's Christian Temperance Union. The American Legion is declared to be back of the move to open the state on Sunday.

Brock Producing Series of Comedies for R-K-O

Louis Brock is producing a new series of four two-reel sound comedies for RKO. The first will be "Barnum Was Wrong," to be directed by Mark Sandrich, and will be produced at the Metropolitan studio in Fort Lee.

Brock has just compled a series of 12 2-reelers under the general title of "Ginsburg, the Great," which RKO also distributed. He expects to resume work at the RCA Gramercy studio in New York when that plant, as is expected, reopens shortly.

Better Films "Crying Need," Indiana Theatre Leader States

Essential for Exhibitors Who "Hang on with Eyebrows," Metzger Avers

Indianapolis—Better product is the crying need of exhibitors today, particularly the "little fellow," declares Charles R. Metzger, attorney for Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. Theatres located in the poorer districts, he says, have been hardest hit by business depression, with many exhibitors "hanging on by their eyebrows." Competition of the radio and automobile have hurt, also, but the bettering of quality is the big need.

"I talk with hundreds of theatre owners each month," Metzger told MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "and they are all crying for better product. The general feeling seems to prevail that we are not getting product of the quality we got a few years ago.

"One wave does not make an ocean and neither does one good picture in a block of 45 give us product that we can run with profit during the season. It would seem that the crying need of the moment is for more care in making pictures and a uniformly better product. Merely putting a ballad or a chorus with a little jazz music in the middle of an otherwise inane talking picture, no longer brings in the business. Our exhibitors feel that they need more interesting product of a uniformly better quality that will have similar drawing power to the general good product of four or five years ago."

Morality of Pictures Is Upheld in School Debate

Harrisburg, Pa.—Pictures were upheld as beneficial to the American public in a debate between teams composed of students of the Catholic High School. The wording of the subject for debate was "Resolved, that motion pictures as they are now conducted in the general average are detrimental to the American public," and the negative side won. The victory for films morality was all the more significant because the debate was held shortly after the Rev. Dr. Clifford G. Twombly, of Lancaster, widely known crusader against alleged immoral pictures, had made a vigorous and much exploited attack on them in a public address in Harrisburg.

"Pagliacci" in Talker Form for Independent

Using the studio of Audio Cinema in Long Island City, Picard Studios, Inc., will produce Verdi's "Pagliacci," starting work on Monday under supervision of Fortune Gallo, grand opera impresario. Manuel Salazar, Metropolitan and La Scala star, will sing the title role, supported by Alma Novello, Nino Fucile and the San Carlos Opera Co.

Paul C. Mooney and Louis Jacobson head Picard, which plans release on the state right market.

Color Skyrockets '29 Net of Technicolor 675 Per Cent

Intake Reached $1,223,186, Compared With $46,190 Deficit in 1928

Technicolor M. P. Corp., in on the ground floor when producers started the wild scramble for color, grossed a net of $1,223,187 in 1929, or 675 per cent more than 1928, when the outfit netted $18,106, but showed a deficit of $46,190 in the consolidated profit column.

Indication of the rapid and tremendous growth of the new field can be gleaned from the following figures on the company's monthly net intake last year:

January	$ 29,556.13
February	41,123.95
March	62,667.07
April	75,051.60
May	71,449.78
June	73,544.54
July	87,614.72
August	101,142.35
September	123,602.04
October	158,464.75
November	194,102.47
December	204,816.97
	$1,223,187.37

	Year 1928	Year 1929
Technicolor M. P. Corp. Net Profit before Taxation	$18,106.90	$1,223,187.37
Consolidated Pro- (*Deficit)	*46,190.02	1,173,980.36

Eight months ago, "On with the Show" started the ball rolling for all-color. Dr. Herbert Kalmus, Technicolor president, estimates that in 1930 at least one hundred features will use Technicolor.

In the report accompanying its current yearly financial statement, Technicolor states plants and equipment now in construction will have a total capacity of 100,000,000 feet of positive prints before March 1, 1930.

Comparison of all financial items with corresponding items one year ago further indicate the financial reaction of color development on the books of Technicolor.

Fox Receivership Seen Averted

ing out of working of the plan shall be decided by a committee named by Fox Film and Fox Theatres, the two naming the third arbitrator.

The fight against limiting plans to be considered to the one approved by Fox centered around the 1½ per cent charge on the $65,000,000 in new financing which must be paid if the plan is rejected, amounting to $975,000. Fox's insistence he will not deal with Halsey, Stuart practically forces stockholders to accept his plan, it was charged.

The court declared that with Fox in control of the company no other course was possible, since any plan submitted must be so submitted at the invitation of the company.

Skeptical

One hour after a certain independent distributor piped the yarn about Broadway gross intakes in Motion Picture News, he was camping on the doorstep of a main stem theatre manager, demanding to see the books.

He played three pictures at the theatre last year on percentage. And the weekly totals submitted by the manager at the pay-off differed from The News figures by many hundreds. Said distributor asked the theatre manager, "How come?"

Effort Again Made to Levy Tax in Canada

Ottawa—Whether Canadian exhibitors are to pay a performing license on copyrighted music controlled by the Performing Rights Society, depends upon fate of an amendment being proposed in the House of Commons by L. J. Ladner, M.P. from Vancouver.

At present, the society is required to register every selection individually if it wishes to collect the fee, a situation which in effect makes the music "tax free, so far as royalties are concerned. The amendments were sidetracked about a year ago.

Sutherland Turns Story Into Entertaining Film

New York newspaper reviewers agree that Paramount's "Burning Up" is weak, with reservations. They credit Director Edward Sutherland with a fine job in taking a time-worn racing-hero theme and turning it into entertaining program material. Excerpts from the reviews follow:

American— . . . Sutherland has done a highly creditable job with the scant material offered . . . audience seemed satisfied.

Daily Mirror Good. And three laps ahead of any other race track film. . .

Daily News— . . . offers thrills galore and a delightful flavor in humor . . . never a moment is it dull. . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . would be utterly conventional in story, but it is so pleasantly acted and so smartly directed that it manages to become an entertaining, if rather undistinguished photoplay. . . .

Journal— . . . Even the familiar story of the speedway hero can be turned into good entertainment is well handled and directed. And this one is. . . .

Post Considering the trite story and subject matter . . . turns out to be well handled and more than ordinarily entertaining. . . .

Sun— . . . Manages to be good entertainment. .

Telegraph— . . . a diverting and entertaining but unimportant little piece. . . .

Times— . . . This may be trite and slapstick, but it proved immensely funny to yesterday's audience . . . light-spirited and agreeable entertainment. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . Nothing sensational, but a good program story. . . .

World (Morning)— . . . It is a weak sister. . . .

High and Low Along Music Row

THIS new "100 songs for five cents" racket is getting serious, not only to the music publishers but also to the safety of officials of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and Music Publishers Protective Ass'n. According to U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, millions of dollars a year are made by this bootleg music.

OUTSIDE of his regular duty as announcer over N. B. C., talking for the newsreel, filling engagements on concert tours, making personal appearances at public functions and covering important sporting events, Graham McNamee hasn't a thing to do.

THE poor songwriter is getting plenty of competition from the actor for whom he hoped to supply with music. The latest screen star to write music for the talkers is Ernest Torrence, who years ago left the concert stage. His latest composition, "What An Irishman Means by Machree," will be sung by John McCormack in his first production.

EDGAR LESLIE and Walter Donaldson have turned out a great love song in "Romance," which is the theme song for the Fox production "Cameo Kirby." Donaldson, Douglas and Gumble are publishing this song.

MAX RICH has been turning them out by the dozen or so, it seems. Besides four numbers which he wrote for Belle Baker's Columbia picture, "Song of Love," he composed "M-A-R-Y, Mary, I Love Y-O-U."

REPORTS from Philadelphia, where Lew Leslie's "International Revue" opened recently, have it that Shapiro-Bernstein & Co., Inc., have a flock of real hit songs in this new show. The three outstanding numbers are "Exactly Like You," "Cinderella Brown" and "On The Sunny Side Of The Street." All the lyrics and music was written by Dorothy Fields and Jimmy McHugh, who have trek west to start work on music for the "singies" for M-G-M.

ROBBINS MUSIC CORP. has added to its standard catalogue the march and two-step song of the navy, which was composed by Charles A. Zimmerman, musical director of the United States Naval Academy. MANY moons ago, Jake Wolff, octogenarian of Broadway, while in to see Mike Morris, told us that he was soon to recover some treasure. Recently the building was torn down and Jake got permission to transport his property to his hotel, proving the old adage "everything comes to him who waits." PINCUS called him by his first name, and was able to meet him on the ground floor. He did the trick. All that was required was mobilizing the forces.

In New York during the Sunday opening campaign we found the manager of one of the big Broadway theatres did not at the time know who the legislators from his district were. Perhaps it was just as well, as the legislators knew that the customers of this particular theatre were not voters in the district, that they came from different parts of the city and were mostly transients from outside the city.

Since the affiliated exhibitors have benefited by the services of able lawyers with practical political experience, they have seen to it that they, the affiliated exhibitors and the men and women of the boards of arbitration, know who their legislators are; and they have done splendid work for the producers with their legislative, taxation, etc., problems, using the little man wherever possible. Also in their working with state theatre owner organizations, seeing that the proper people were encouraged to oppose the exhibitor leaders that the producers wanted opposed.

Producers Are Able

The producers are far abler than the theatre owners. There are only four or five men to be considered (who can meet in one small room if necessary), with money literally pouring in on them from all over the world. It is like a printing press making money, except they print on celluloid to exchange for the continental money. They have a well financed and smooth functioning organization, adequately manned, and no matter how they may fight among themselves for dominance and control, it is easy for them to work against all others. It is easy for them to create dissension amongst unaffiliated theatre owners.

The same holds true in some of the state organizations. The biggest and best financial supporters were affiliated theatres who furnished the money to conduct their organizations within the state; they circumscribed their organization's actions and with the affiliated theatre owner on the board of directors with the unaffiliated theatre owner, it did not take very long until the unaffiliated man started to disappear from the board, and one by one their theatres were taken over by the affiliated theatre owner member.

Some months ago when it became known that a Mr. Gannett, who owns a chain of newspapers in Rochester, N. Y., Brooklyn and elsewhere, had obtained a few million dollars loan from the representative of the International Paper Company allied with the International Power Company, all the first run opposition papers, led by the powerful Hearst chain and New York World chain, exposed the situation, kept it on the front pages of their papers, bringing pressure to bear in the United States Senate. A committee of that body investigated the situation, found the facts, and within a few weeks after the exposure and pitiless publicity, the loans were returned to the International Paper Company and the business understanding that this paper company had with this group and other groups was terminated.

Like Situation Cited

The same situation existed in the motion picture industry when the Famous Players-Lasky decision to embark in the theatre business was made, in "retaliation" for the First National group of theatre owners who had embarked in the production business. But had the First National theatre owner (who occupied the same comparable and representative position as these first run newspapers) joined with the M. P. T. O. A., then a powerful militant organization, with the purpose in view of keeping the producer in the producing business and the theatre owner in theatre business, they would have stopped this frontal attack and this theatre owning encroachment. They would have become the "Roxy's" of today all over the land and still be in business; and independent producers would have been encouraged and enabled to progress in the manner which was their due, and thousands of theatre owners who passed out of the industry would still be functioning.

The full story, told somewhat in the trade press, regarding the activities and methods employed by some of the producer theatre owner organizations in acquiring their business strength through theatres and otherwise, has never been told to the women's clubs of America, ,to the public or to the national and state legislators. Everything should be done to prevent this being told, as the mountain of gunpowder upon which the industry is sitting is larger and more dangerous than ever, and the enemy without the gates is ever present.

Doubts Friendly Union

But even though, for the many reasons I have set forth, there can be no union at this time—no wedding bells—insofar as Allied States and Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are concerned; I do believe that committees from both organizations should sit around a table, be it square or round, and immediately draw up a simple contract as nearly in the terms of the bills of sale in effect in other industries as possible, and containing mutually agreeable provisions for arbitration; also to work in fullest co-operation against all those forces outside of the industry that seek to harass it in any manner whatsoever. Therein they have a common meeting ground against a common enemy.

Missed By a Mile

Hollywood—A romantic film star and a decided flop in his first two talkers, was lunching with an internationally known concert singer who had been brought to Hollywood for appearance in one production.

The star poured out his troubles on the broad shoulders of the singer and explained in detail how introduction of dialogue in pictures had ruined his entire career.

Finally he asked the singer, whose single concert figures rate well in four figures, "Have you ever felt the pain of dropping from the highest pinnacle of popularity and success to failure?"

"I've never climbed far on the ladder of success," naively replied the singer, whose golden voice is known in every country of the world. The star, confirmed egotist, missed the point entirely.

Late

George M. Cohan says the talkies haven't ruined the theatre.

No. The ticket scalpers and the producers were too fast for them.—Ted Cook in "The N. Y. American".

Harrisburg Showman Bankrupt

Harrisburg, Pa.—Bankruptcy papers are being drawn for George M. Krupa, who has been operating the Rialto and National, now dark. Several years ago, Krupa is said to have received $450,000 from the Stanley company for theatre properties at Lancaster. Since, he is said to have met reverses in the stock market. Another house dark here is the Civic, owned by W. R. Jones.

Acoustical Row Far from Ended

Far from being "cleared," the situation brought about by the objections of the Chicago fire prevention bureau to certain accoustical materials being used in theatres here, seems to be becoming more involved daily.

The first batch of cases involving houses whose accoustical insulation has been tabooed by fire bureau inspectors is before City Prosecutor Peska and will be prepared for trial in the near future. Owners and addresses of these houses are: Jacob Chutkow, 3145 South State St.; Max Serperstein, 5406 North Clark St.; Louis L. Simon, 1611 Roosevelt Road; Louis F. DeWolfe 1641-49 Roosevelt Road, and Joseph Pasteur, 1125 Bryn Mawr Ave.

Additions to the list are being made regularly, Chief Egan of the Fire Prevention bureau, states. In the same breath, he denies that either his office or himself had "approved" 25 specific materials as "satisfactory," was has been published.

"We cannot make the fire prevention bureau an advertising department for accoustical materials manufacturers," he said. "For all I know, there may be 2,500 materials which would prove 'satisfactory' for theatre insulation purposes.

"We are not interested in what they are, nor are we interested in the theatre owner who is using them. Our job is only to detect and have condemned the inflammable materials in use. The only test for these is fire. If they burn, or even smoulder enough to fill an auditorium with smoke, they must be removed."

Swedes Prefer Silents to Sound Films, Poll Shows

Stockholm—Silents are preferred to talkers in Sweden, it is shown in a poll conducted by a local newspaper. Ninety-two per cent of those participating in the debate on their preference voted for silents, while the eight per cent voting for sound films were from rural districts and complained of the lack of good music in country theatres.

It Comes to This

Not content with victories in other fields, women have now begun to invade production and it is perhaps only a matter of time before the bones of the last male director will be on the way to the Museum of Natural History to be mounted as an example of an extinct species, at least "Screenland", so opines.

With "Sarah and Son" on the Paramount lot, says the publication "production is for the first time in history given over almost entirely to women. The only two important jobs in the outfit handled by men are held by Charles Lang, chief camera-man, and Earl Hansen, sound technician. B. P. Schulberg, production head, declared women ought to know more about the mysteries of mother love than men, so he was going to make this a woman's production. Ruth Chatterton is the star; Zoe Akins, author of the stage play "Declasse" and others, wrote the screen story; and Dorothy Arzner is the director.

Disarmament Confab in Order For Bloody Brooklyn Battle

Downtown Theatres Raging for Business—Midnight Shows New Gag

And the battle for nickles and dimes in the city of churches continues on its murderous way.

Brooklyn was a peaceful little town until Paramount and Fox horned in, many months ago, with de luxe downtown stands. The Mark Strand, and a few others, were reaping a harvest in the crowded amusement and shopping centre, but when Fox and Publix opened, a keen competitive battle started, reaching its height in a vigorous tilt to coin the sheckels at midnight shows.

Just to be different, Paramount hit upon the idea of a revival of old, outstanding silents, playing Valentinos, Swansons, and other big-name successes every Monday night, starting at 9:30. Two weeks later, Fox fell in line, but the gag didn't click and they dropped it. The Publix house continues, plugging the revivals hard in all billing.

Now the Albee and Orpheum theatres enter the ring with late performances, starting this week, and forcing the entire downtown line-up—already at loggerheads—to prime the guns for what promises to be a stiff battle.

In most cases, a show ends at eleven. From that hour until 11:30, they screen shorts, while the ballyhoo "generals" outfront hook the customers for the midnight screening.

Midnight Shows Launched

When "Sunny Side Up" opens on Feb. 8 for a week's run at the William Fox Academy of Music, Audubon and Croton, it will inaugurate for the first time the policy of establishing a Saturday evening midnight presentation at these houses. Extra showings have also been added, running continuous performances of four deluxe shows daily with five showings of the picture.

M-G-M Lot Active, with 20 New Features on the Fire

Hollywood—M-G-M enters the last half of February with 20 pictures preparing, shooting or in the cutting rooms. Nine units are crowding the 11 silent and 14 sound stages at Culver City. The technical staffs are on a 24-hour basis, with 53 writers at work on new material, and 16 composers and lyrci writers pounding out new melodies.

Louise Dresser in Town

Louise Dresser, Fox contract player and her husband, Jack Gardner, casting director at Fox, arrived in New York on Wednesday for a vacation. While in town, Gardner will scout for talent for the Fox stock company.

Through with Fox

Hollywood—Fox has not re-signed Dorothy Burgess. Her year's contract has expired.

Musical Interpolations Hamper Action in "Kirby"

There is beauty and "easy-going charm" in spots in "Cameo Kirby" (Fox), it is agreed by a majority of critics on New York newspapers, but the picture as a whole is dubbed "outmooded," "mildly diverting," and "not intensely gripping." Many reviewers blame the slowness of the vehicle to musical interpolations. Opinions of the critics follow:

American— . . . While oodles of production value are apparent . . . slow charm of the Old South is somewhat too greatly accentuated and the action is in no way speeded up by the interpolation of musical numbers.

Daily Mirror—Charming, but not intensely gripping. A fine production of a fair story. . .

Daily News— . . . doesn't strike us as especially impressive audible celluloid. Just a fair program talkie. . . .

Graphic— . . . For those who . . . can still get a kick out of the bloodhounds tracking down the misunderstood man, "Cameo Kirby" may have its entertainment value. . . .

Journal— . . . The crinoline and Mississippi river-boat backgrounds are pleasantly effective and the film, which moves very slowly, because of the many vocal interpolations, is mildly diverting. . . .

Post— . . . owes what interest it has to the able direction of Irving Cummings, who has managed to give it more life than the subject matter deserves. . . .

Sun— . . . isn't a bad film, but it is certainly not very interesting at this period in the development of the talkies. . . .

Telegram— . . . a delightful and moderately entertaining program picture, but nothing more. . . .

Telegraph— . . . not only fails to rise above the average in entertainment value, but often sinks to new levels of mediocrity. . .

Times— . . . There is an easy-going charm about the scenes . . . affords genuine entertainment with its colorful glimpses of life in 1850 in New Orleans.

World (Evening)— . . . beautiful in spots. But the contents . . . are rather out-mooded. . . .

World (Morning)— . . . There is picturesquenesss in the costumes and atmosphere . . . and the latter half . . . at least, holds a good plot interest. . . .

"Although finely done, this picture demonstrates that it is not practicable to attempt a musical background for a straight dramatic story," in the opinion of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which reviewed "Cameo Kirby" on Dec. 7.

Stays with Pathe

Hollywood—E. H. Griffith, Pathe director, has been given a term contract. First assignment under the new agreement will be "The Big Shot," an original by Ben Hecht.

Farms Out Jack Benny

Hollywood—Jack Benny was borrowed by Tiffany from M-G-M to assume the featured spot in "The Medicine Man." George Stone and James Dugan have also been signed.

"Czar of B'way" for Craft

Hollywood—William James Craft will direct "The Czar of Broadway" for Universal. Story is an original by Gene Towne.

Watch Your Step!

A new bill introduced in the New York Assembly makes the "circulation of any statement, rumor or intelligence as to stocks, bonds, or public funds, not knowing same to be true, punishable by a fine and imprisonment," while another makes it "a misdemeanor to circulate false statements or rumors as to stocks or bonds derogatory to financial condition or affecting solvency or standing of a corporation or person issuing such securities for sale."

'Rogue Song' Tops Week's List in L. A.

Los Angeles—Lawrence Tibbett continues as a Hollywood sensation. "The Rogue Song" led the list this week, its fourth at the Chinese, with a gross of $35,500, or 122 per cent over normal business at that house

Second is Loew's State with "The Cock-Eyed World" at popular prices. The picture did $34,000, which earned it a rating of 128 per cent. At the Carthay Circle, "Devil-May-Care," in its second week, played to $14,300, which is 14 per cent over normal business at that theatre. "The Locked Door," at the United Artists, ended its second week with $11,500, or 15 per cent under normal.

Chevalier's "Love Parade," current at the Paramount, rolled up $23,000, or almost average business. Its exact percentage was 92. "Wedding Rings," at Warners' Hollywood, took in $16,000, or a rating of 114 per cent. "Anna Christie," in its third week at Fox's Criterion, did almost twice normal business, the total being $18,200 and the rating 182 per cent.

Rudy Vallee proved a draw at the RKO in "The Vagabond Lover," grossing $22,500, or, in percentages, 141. "Son of the Gods," Dick Barthelmess' latest, is pulling them in at Warners' Downtown. Its second week ended with a gross of $30,700, which is plenty of money for that theatre. In percentages, the figure proved to 205. Norma Shearer, a local favorite, did $12,900 at the Egyptian with "Their Own Desire," while "No, No, Nanette," at the Orpheum, played to $15,000.

The weather was fine through the week. Vallee's draw came from the women, but business generally held up on the strength of the line-up at all houses.

U. S. Leads in Singapore

Washington—American films lead in Singapore, as evidenced by report of the local censor for 1928, which shows 1,621 pictures were passed, according to the annual report forwarded to the Dep't of Commerce. One hundred and forty-seven were held to be unsuitable and banned.

Paramount Re-Signs Wallace

Hollywood—Richard Wallace, who finished his Paramount contract with "Two Black Crows in the A. E. F.," has signed a new agreement. Wallace will make a four months' tour of the world before resuming work.

Decision to Cut 1930-1931 Programs Seen as Break for Ind'p't Producer

N. Y. Critics Loud in Their Praise of Davies Vehicle

The Sun and Morning World are the only two dissenting voices in praise of "Not So Dumb" (M-G-M), by New York newspaper critics, who proclaim the new Marion Davies vehicle a comedy wow. They don't spare the adjectives in their reviews, brief excerpts from which follow:

American—A constant laugh from first flash to fade-out . . . audience enjoyed every moment.

Daily Mirror—An uproar. The merriest entertainment of the season . . . excellent cast. . . .

Daily News— . . . thoroughly entertainment . . . one continuous round of giggles. . . .

Graphic— . . . hilarious entertainment . . . more good movie stuff for the hordes of Davies fans.

Journal— . . . the comedy high-spot of the season.

Post— . . . flows along at a fast clip. . . .

Sun - . . . mildly entertaining.

R-K-O Plans Invasion of Jackson, Miss., Is Report

Jackson, Miss.—Radio-Keith-Orpheum is considering invasion of this Publix town, where the local houses are owned jointly by Saenger Amusement Co., Publix subsidiary, and R. E. Kennington, local businessman. Request for information on the local situation has been made to the Chamber of Commerce. Some time ago, it was reported the circuit might seek lease of the city auditorium for use pending construction of a house.

Another for San Luis

San Luis Obispo, Cal.—Fox West Coast Theatres, interested with W. B. Martin in the Elmo and Obispo, will build a 2,000-seater in association with Martin.

Actor's "Lines" Resented

A prominent Coast actor had trouble getting a telephone number. Angry words with the operator, who politely resented insinuations about her hearing. The actor concluded the debate by saying:

"Keep your shirt on, girlie, and get my number."

Several days later he received a letter from a Telephone Company executive, admonishing him for using an "improper" phrase to the operator. The actor called the Company and asked to talk to the particular operator. Getting her on the wire, he said: "I'm sorry if I insulted you when I told you the other day to keep your shirt on. You can take it off, if you want to. Goodbye!"

Plumb Forgot

Hollywood—The Fox studio had been held up on a picture four days because Stepin Fetchit, complexion slightly dark, had failed to appear. When a studio scout finally caught him at home, Stepin was found scrubbing floors. In his garage were three Cadillacs.

"What's your reason for holding us up," he was asked.

"No special reason, boss. I just plumb forgot," was the reply.

One-Cent Verdict Sets Mark in Law Suit

Boston—Litigation over the use of a Photophone non-synchronous projection machine recently established a record verdict calling for execution of one-cent damages. It represents the smallest execution of verdict in the state of Massachusetts.

Harry Cohen, doing business here as the Photophone Company of New England, it was alleged in the complaint sworn out by Cohen, installed a projection machine in the Photoplay Theatre in Adams, owned by H. E. Haff. Under the alleged agreement Haff was to keep the machine for a month's trial and, if satisfactory, pay for it. Cohen alleged Haff kept the machine from Jan. 1, 1929, to June 1, 1929, returned it and refused to pay for it or its use.

Opposition to Winchester Theatre Project Renewed

Boston—Residents of Winchester are continuing their eight-year-old opposition to a picture house. Chief objection is said to be that they believe the proposed house wouldn't pay and soon would deteriorate into a fifth rate house, but what is meant by a fifth rate house remains a dark mystery. The Winchester newspaper contends that there are too many theatres in the vicinity, adding that "nothing is worse than a dead theatre," which is declared closed half the time and either is "an eyesore," or is given over to "inferior pictures."

P.F.-L. Breaks Flat-Term Rule to Sign Astor for 2

Hollywood—Mary Astor has bene signed by Paramount for featured spots in two 1930-31 releases. Agreement is on the basis of a flat sum for each production, and allows the player to accept engagements at other studios if they do not conflict with Paramount assignments.

This is the first flat rate contract made by Paramount with a player for term appearance in that company's productions. All other stars and featured actors are on a weekly salary basis, although the flat rate agreement with lpayers has been used for some time by many large producers.

Elimination of "Program" Material Next Season Expected by Many

Revived interest in the long dormant independent production field is the quick reaction to announcements that Pathe and Universal were to discontinue program pictures for 1930-31, in favor of "specials," as well as to slash their output.

Other major producers are expected to pay more attention to fewer specials than quantity programers next season, giving a long-awaited break to the independents.

Universal, as announced exclusively in Motion Picture News last week, will cut from 55 features to approximately 18. Lou Metzger, "U" general manager, will determine the exact number next week, in Coast conferences with Carl Lammle and Carl Laemmle, Jr. A scarcity of Westerns on the company's '30-'31 program is expected, leaving the market open further for independent units.

Pathe's plan is for 30 "specials" and 450 shorts, dividing the season into three periods. All Pathe production will be centered on the coast, in charge of E. B. Derr.

M-G-M, Universal Sign New Casting Directors

Hollywood—Ben Thau has been brought from New York and installed as head of M-G-M casting department, replacing Fred Beers. Thau is new to picture casting, coming from the RKO home office. He was With Harry Garson transferred to the production department, Universal has engaged Phil Friedman as casting director.

Paramount Signs Sloman

Hollywood—Edward Sloman has been placed under contract by Paramount as a director, and moves over immediately upon completion of his current assignment for Columbia, "Soldiers and Women." Sloman directed "The Kibitzer" for Paramount six months ago, and more recently directed Harry Richman's picture for United Artists.

Spokane on F. & M. Route

Spokane—Fanchon and Marco have closed with Ray Grombacher to route a stage unit to the American, one of Grombacher's chain of five. The new policy will be split with sound pictures.

F. & M. Now in 45 Cities

Los Angeles—With addition of Grombacher's American, Spokane, Fanchon and Marco units now play 45 houses.

Moray Appointed

N. H. Moray has been named national chairman of the Sam E. Morris Month drive. Harry Neil appointed national chairman of the Vitaphone Varieties drive.

Shorter Features Are Causing Worry to Some Exhibitors Due to Higher Nut

Patrons Declared Educated to Hour Show and Added Use of Shorts Is Costly

Swinging of the pendulum to short features, as a result of the sound picture development, is causing a squawk from exhibitors in some sections. Exhibitors, who in the silent days had been crying over what they termed the excessive length of features, now have put reverse English on their complaints, due to the short footage of talkers.

Early breaks of shows due to short features is causing concern, many feeling their patrons have been educated to the two-hour show and that to set in the necessary shorts to bring them out even on running time, will run the nut up to an excessive figure.

In combination houses the situation is declared even more serious, due to the cost of acts. The fact that most producers of features now are making shorts as well, is seen as an important one in the tendency toward short features, although dialogue replaces action and thus cuts down footage.

Hollywood—John McCormack received $50,000 a week for ten weeks to appear in "Song O' My Heart" for Fox, according to stories in circulation here.

There is no other contract like it on record.

"Second Wife" Is Second Rate to Most N. Y. Critics

Many reviewers on New York newspapers let "Second Wife" (RKO) down pretty hard. They call it "silly," "second-rate stuff," "dreary and unimportant." The Times, Telegraph and others, however, give it a fair break. A consensus of opinion follows:

American— . . . Unpretentious and never quite believable . . . nicely played . . . difficulty is that not a great deal happens in the story. . . . audience wasn't enthusiastic. . . .

Daily Mirror—Pretty good picture for women. . .

Daily News— . . . has been tastefully produced and nicely cast. But it isn't an unusual talkie piece . . . Just a fair program picture. . . .

Herald-Tribune— . . . a far cry from the sophisticated "movie-goer's" choice. It is slow, without a believable situation, antiquated in dialogue and direction, and dull. . . .

Journal— . . . Both Miss Lee and Nagel offer alequate performances in a plot which is all right as far as it goes, but which, through lack of character development, doesn't go far. . . .

Post— . . . Although the story suggest a movie version of an early Ibsen play, some genuine moments are contributed by Lila Lee and Conrad Nagel. . . .

Sun— . . . Here, it is gratifying to state, is a talker with an adult idea—if not precisely a new one. At any rate, it is satisfying as a show. . . .

Telegram— . . . might have been made entertaining by less conventional treatment on the part of the adaptor and the director . . . as a result the film is slow-moving. . . .

Telegraph— . . . just as dreary and unimportant in pictures as it was on the stage. . . .

Times—Although the direction is not especially gifted and the dlaiogue is often a little rustry. "Second Wife" . . . at least possesses the virtue of being . . . much more intelligent than the general run of films. . . .

World (Evening— . . . second-rate stuff . . . has little to recommenl it to discriminating audiences.

World (Morning)— . . . It is pretty silly. . . .

In a review of "Second Wife," which appears in this issue, on page —, MOTION PICTURE NEWS says "the picture is handled with conviction and sincerity."

Reubenson Active

Reg Reubenson of London and New York is en route to the coast on a quick trip, after which he will return to New York and then sail for London, returning here in April. He has taken over foreign sales agency for Audio Cinema and has already sold 26 Terry Toon cartoons for a number of territories. Reubenson also handles the Fitz Patrick output abroad and has sold the Horoscope series to the Schlessingers for South Africa and the Travel Talks for the same territory to Kinemas, Ltd.

Wyler Victorious

Hollywood—Chalk up a victory for William Wyler, director of "Hell's Heroes." Wyler felt he had earned the sound remake of "The Storm." Universal officials apparently thought otherwise and looked around for a director. Now it seems Wyler gets the assignment, with Joseph Schildkraut starred and Monte Blue, borrowed from Warners, as second male lead. All of which would indicate that Wyler won his point.

Pinchhitting for Mrs. Gentry

Los Angeles—Emma Abplanalp, secretary of the Buffalo Film Board of Trade, is pinchhitting as secretary of the Los Angeles Film Board during illness of Lola Gentry.

Arliss vs. Arliss

It's Arliss vs. Arliss on Broadway, with opening Thursday of "The Green Goddess" at the Winter Garden, thus pitting two George Arliss vehicles against each other. "Disraeli," current at the Central, is rounding out its twentieth week on Broadway.

Production Schedule Is Speeded at 1st National

Hollywood—Hal B. Wallis and C. Graham Baker, production executives at First National, are again operating at close to its capacity, with a number of productions being filmed and others scheduled for immediate shooting. Among productions in work are "Jail Break," "Sin Flood," "Sweet Mamma," "At Bay," Mlle. Modiste," "One Night at Susie's," "Heart of the North," "Under Western Skies" and "The Dawn Patrol."

The coming six months will bring the first of the original compositions by Oscar Straus. Otto Harbach and Jerome D. Kern will be among other contributors during coming months, which will also see completion of Victor Herbert's operettas, "Mlle. Modiste" and "The Fortune Teller."

There will be another Marilyn Miller all-color film to follow the "Sally" and a picture for Otis Skinner soon to start.

Salesmen Officers Installed

J. J. Felder has been installed as president of M. P. Salesmen, Inc., New York. Other officers are: Jack Ellis and Matty Cahan, vice presidents; Saul Trauner, treasurer; H. H. Markowitz, recording secretary; L. Lawrence Baren, historian; H. J. Carlock, recording secretary; J. J. Dolan, sergeant-at-arms; Max Fellerman and N. Union Scales at Chicago Highest In U. S. Theatres

Chicago, reputedly the most highly organized labor city in the country, pays for the distinction. Not to wander outside the theatrical labor field, local exhibitors alone are estimated to be paying annually $1,000,000 more than exhibitors in other cities for identical services as a result of the thorough unionizing of theatre help here. For instance:

Operators' wage scale is from $2.54 to $3.60 per hour; an average of almost a dollar an hour more than in other cities.

Stage hands collect $104 a week; an appreciably higher figure than is standard throughout the country.

Musicians are paid $1.84 to $2.20 an hour. The top in most cities is seldom over $2.00.

Theatre scrub women here have been admitted to the ranks of the Theatre Janitors' Union. One of the first moves of the organized mop and brush wielders was to seek a new agreement boosting the present wage from $20 to $35 per week, a figure that is above average in ten other representative cities. The top in St. Louis and Detroit, where the bucket girls are also organized, is said to be $28.50.

Local exhibitors are not complaining—yet. They do, however, view the future somewhat apprehensively. There is left, still, the cashiers, ticket takers, ushers, doormen and assistant managers. But for how long? is the question they are asking.

Wabash Ave.—South

THIS age in which we live is flimsy, fickle, and our world is unsteady. Where is the teamio who drank buckets of ice-cold beer to lay up a little warmth against sub-zero blasts? Where are the "temples of the silent drama"? The radiator gets the alcohol now, and silence is no longer golden in the picture palaces. Each morning, or afternoon, as the case may be, we awake to new and startling changes. Old gives way to new, and new to improvement. Familiar objects disappear, habit is relegated, custom sacked. Now, it appears, that venerable old routine of visiting filmdom in Chicago may go by the boards.

Though parks were built on the north side, boulevards on the south, speakeasies opened on the west and the lake filled in downtown, the path of the migratory big shot from the La Salle Street station to the Blackstone and thence to the Dearborn station did not vary. The day may come, however, and we may live to see it, when the lords and ladies of the moom picture industry will be seen on State Street, and as far north as Randolph, and trains for the east and trains for the west may depart without them.

This revolutionary change hinges on the success of a social idea, and in view of the changeability of our times it may take place. Chicago exchange managers and their business associates contemplate a screen club which, if it materializes, will recognize as a major function the reception and entertainment of filmdom's aristocracy while in the city. It would have the fittings and the deportment calculated to lure these personages away from the south edge of the Loop and, perhaps, inveigle them into missing a train or two.

The Wonderland, Mid-City, State, and Argmore are being wired. It looks as if that sign on the house in Madison Street will have to come down eventually. It reads: "Silence speaks louder than words."

Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe, was in town closing deals with Jimmie Coston and Floyd Brockell on Pathe product for next year.

Sam Krimstein of the newly opened Essanay Art Studio in the Standard Oil building is claiming the newest and finest son in Chicago.

Dan Roach, publicist for the Chicago Pathe branch, spent the week in Michigan launching "The Grand Parade." Reported to have originated some nifties that will be used with the production nationally.

John Clarke, Chicago Pathe manager, has locked himself up to work out the details of a new selling idea. Expect to hear from him soon.

The Century, remodeled, refurnished and widely ballyhooed, has opened as the new Publix-B. & K. "Cathedral of Talking Pictures" with "Flight" as the feature and Henri A. Keates as organist. Acoustics are said to be "knock-out" at the house, which was formerly Ascher's Diversey. Bobby Burns, supervisor of projection and sound for Publix middle western theatres, personally okayed them. "Disraeli" is scheduled to follow "Flight."

Chicago Film Row May Organize Its Own Film Club

Launching of a Screen Club similar to the New York Motion Picture Club is being contemplated by Film Row. An initial meeting at which the project was discussed resulted in adoption of three major policies on which the club, if launched, will be based. They are: selective membership, substantial dues and the maintenance of a club atmosphere of respectability.

"In explanation of the latter," said a spokesman for the group, "we do not mean that oppressive formality or false dignity will be the objective. We have in mind a gentleman's organization whose quarters will at all times provide a suitable meeting, dining and entertainment spot for members and their wives, business friends and visiting celebrities.

"A prospective member must be approved by a membership committee. Dues will be, probably, $75 per year, with an initiation fee of $100."

The second floor of the Woods Theatre building, formerly N. V. A. quarters here, has been mentioned as a possible location.

Attending the first meeting were: Clyde Eckhardt, Eddie Grossman, Felix Mendelsohn, C. C. Wallace, Jack Miller, Max Stahl, Carl Lesserman, Ben Judell, Aaron Jones, John Clark, E. C. Wright, William Benjamin, Irving Mandel and H. M. Herbel.

The co-operation of managers of all local exchanges and allied offices is being sought. Invitations to attend the second meeting in ten days have been extended to Neil Agnew, Phil Dunas, P. Smith, Henri Ellman, Hal Young, R. Schurley, and others.

Membership, it is planned, will be limited to executives of motion picture and allied trades, although representative business and professional men and civic personages may be admitted later.

Film Row Thrills to Rescue Scenes in Fire

Spectacular rescues added to the thrill Film Row received when fire broke out in the Gunther Bldg., which houses numerous film enterprises. Firemen assisted girl employes from floor to floor on the outside of the building, and everyone on Film Row watched several spectacular leaps from the upper stories to the spread nets on the street. Pathe News cameramen, whose headquarters are directly across the street from the scene of the blaze, obtained some excellent shots. Occupants of the building include the Fulton Supply Co., the headquarters of the newly formed Illinois Independent Exhibitors' Ass'n, and others.

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

EASILY one of the finest talking pictures to date. A poignant, stirring and touching story of a woman, magnificent in spirit and work-a-day in gesture. An achievement for Herbert Brenon, who produced, and for Winifred Westover, long off the screen but now back and with this single performance up in the front ranks of film actresses.

This is the story of a servant girl, an inarticulate woman in whom are unexpressed yearnings for music and the aesthetic things of life. She has an affair with the young master of the house in which she works, bears a child, is forced to relinquish the boy, then finds herself on the fringe watching him grow until he becomes one of the leading pianists of his day. It is that unexpressed something in her soul that gives her son his genius for music, just as it was her contact with his father that inspired him to contribute to contemporary poetry what is considered a classic of the time.

Directed and acted with restraint, sympathy and a fine respect for the story.

Light shorts preferable, but be careful selection does not mar the effect of the feature.

Produced by Herbert Brenon, distributed by United Artists. From story by Fannie Hurst. Directed by Herbert Brenon. Adaptation by Elizabeth Meehan. Edited by Marie Halvey. Length, 7533 feet. Running time, 1 hr., 20 minutes. Release date, Jan. 18, 1930.

Absorbing Crook Programmer

(Reviewed by Alvin Meyers)

"FRAMED" is good. Wherever crook mellers go this will please them plenty. It is full of action, punch and entertainment. And it is graced with the best rounded cast you have seen in many a day. The story is concerned with a girl who dedicates her life to avenging her father's death at the hands of the police. Accordingly she frames the police inspector's son, only to find that her revenge is a hollow thing.

Evelyn Brent, in a typical Brent role, is convincing; Regis Toomey handles his none too heavy part well; Maurice Black and William Holden, in widely divergent characterizations, are excellent But Rolf Harolde is the stand-out; his work in this is splendid. The direction is deft and pleasing. In the hands of George Archsinbaud the picture never lags and what is more important, is always appealing.

Depend on this to be well liked—and make promises for plenty of entertainment. Nothing heavyweight about it, but a rattling good programmer. And it's not a backstage story. That should mean something to those tired of theatrical life yarns.

Use musical or broad comedy shorts.

Produced and distributed by RKO. Story and screen play by Paul Schofield. Directed by George archainbaud. Dialogue by Wallace Smith. Edited by Jack Kitchen. Photographed by Leo Tover. Length, about 5,780 feet. Running time, 1 hour, 8 minutes. Release date March 16, 1930.

Pioneers of the West

(Syndicate Pictures—Silent)

Average Western

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THERE is the background of a train robbery and a father's sacrifice to give this variation from the usual western themes. It serves as a good vehicle for Tom Tyler and will satisfy his following. It is up to the average of silent westerns and the star has draw.

J. P. McGowan is the engineer, who goes to prison for the robbery of his train by his son. The latter is killed in attempting later to recover the loot in the mystery which Tyler has solved.

This has the advantage of a good plot as contrasted to many other westerns of its type, and it holds the interest. Tom Tyler is a virile chap and gives a good performance in this latest outdoor offering, which holds the interest throughout. Dorothy McClure is a good heroine, and the remainder of the cast satisfactory. This series of Tyler pictures seems to be striking a fair average of program releases and there are plenty of fans remaining who like their western action laid on thick.

Silent houses catering to western clientele will find this to their liking as a program western which will please the kids and grown-ups.

Suitable for usual double-feature bill, or with some snappy shorts.

Produced and distributed by Syndicate Pictures Corp. Story by Sally Winters. Directed by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by Hap Depew. Length, 4,262 feet. Running time, 60 minutes. Released, Dec. 1, 1929.

Caught in the Berlin Underworld

(State Rights—Synchronized)

Rates Forty Per Cent

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

THE theme itself, coupled with one or two good characterizations partially redeem the amateurish handling of this pensive tale. Martin Berger, a German producer-director, failed miserably in his efforts to build up film material convincingly enough to help the premise upon which the piece is built—that is: a man is as wrong as his environment and, conversely, as right as his fellow men will allow him to be.

The action is slow—very slow, struggling with mixed events throughout most of the footage. Hans Stuwve and Maly Dalschaft appear as parents of Fritz Kortner, who was abandoned as a youngster because the stigma of being a convict's son convinced his mother that his opportunities in life would be limited. In later years, as a self-respecting citizen, he learns that his mother is living in poverty. Enemies threaten Kortner's marital bliss by revealing the story of his birth. The girl stands by the lover and points the way to a happy ending. There is very little of Berlin's underworld, despite the dime-novel title, although they spend considerabe time in showing some effective shots of a new German prison building; handled very well photographically. The few underworld gutter sets appeared to have been slapped together in a hurry.

Might get by on a double feature bill, provided the running mate is good.

Produced in Germany (silent) by Martin Berger. Running time, 63 minutes. Released date, undetermined.

Sell This Right

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

"THE PHANTOM" was a sensational money-maker when released some four years ago, and with sound added should click at the box-office again. However, it must be sold properly, otherwise there will be a kick-back from patrons. The picture is the old version reissued, with dialogue scenes added, some of it by retakes, and some by dubbing. Any attempt to sell it as anything but that will cause a squawk, and to try and put it over as a new picture or as an all-talker will prove fatal, for the age of the film is apparent.

The wallop of the climax in the original version is still there, in fact that part of the picture has been only synchronized. Some of the dubbing misses, particularly the scenes showing Miss Philbin singing. No effort is made to make Chaney talk, although there are a few spots where he is supposed to be doing the off-stage talking. The few color shots still stand up.

A sound cartoon or one reel sound novelty with this.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Directed by Rupert Julian (original version) Edward Sedgwick (supplementary sequences of present version) Edward Laemmle (sound sequences). Story by Gaston Leroux. Photographed by Charles Van Anger. Length, 8382 feet. Running time, 1 hour, 30 minutes. Release date (original version), October, 1925 (present version), Dec. 15, 1929.

The Melody Man

(Columbia—All Dialogue)

Excellent

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

CHARMING in tempo, appreciative in treatment and dignified in performance. Add to these fundamentals in picture-making, a dramatic story bolstered by a high-grade of direction and the answer is an approximation of "The Melody Man."

Here is the picture which represents a high mark in Columbia's long career as a producer. Its motif revolves around a rhapsody and how its lovely melody leads the Viennese police to the composer charged with murdering the interloper who wrecked his early family life. Against this theme is written the love story of the musician's daughter for a jazz band leader and how the unpublished music played at the Philharmonic without the old man's knowledge leads to his apprehension and his implied release.

Roy Neill never directed a better picture; John St. Polis never outstripped his work in this. Alice Day is delightful as the daughter and Buster Collier as the jazz musician is fine. Nothing hot or jazzy in "The Melody Man," but, despite that, a fine motion picture.

"Screen Snapshot" will fit in well. Also sound cartoons.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. From stage play by Herbert Fields, Lorenz Hart, Richard Rodgers. Directed by R. William Neill. Continuity and dialogue by Howard J. Green. Mounted Stranger

(Universal—All Dialogue)

Good Hard-Ridin' Westerner

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

HOOT GIBSON'S naive western droll when dealing with two-fisted men and pretty women, makes this "tried-and-true" formula for western drama sure-fire. In no type of drama does sound and dialogue lend itself with more bracing vigor than to the hard-ridin', straight-shootin' variety. This one offers good types, fast action, smoking guns and typical hero stuff.

The son of a sheepherder vows to "get" cattleman who killed his father—and does. Not before, however, he does a lot of hard ridin' and meets the girl of his dreams. Hoot, as Buddy Hunter, marches right into the arms of gun fire time after time but always is standing when the smoke clears.

Particularly interesting for its excelent types—all western, of course. A round-up camp scene gives the director a good chance to drag in some Jews-harp music which lends novelty, if not good music to the sound element. The dialogue deserves mention because it never is forced but is heard in typical western style—seldom and with plenty force behind it.

Sound acts O.K. here.

Produced and distributed by Universal; directed by Arthur Rosson who did adaptation from story by H. H. Knibbs. Edited by Gilmore Walker. Photographed by Harry Neuman. Running time, 1 hour and 10 minutes. Length, 5,784 ft. Release date, Feb. 8.

Wedding Rings

(First National—All Dialogue)

Very Dull Fan Fare

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

THERE might have been some merit in "The Dark Swan" as a stage play, but the film adaptation titled "Wedding Rings" is very dull and entirely too talkative. The picture is heavy with dialogue and lacks the necessary amount of action to be acceptable.

The cast struggles through entire series of uninteresting sequences, and does the best it can with the material at hand. Olive Borden is particularly good. William Beaudine provided as much freshness as possible to the very dry story.

The theme details the encounters of two sisters—one rather wild and the other aristocratic. The former takes all her sister's boy friends away from her, finally marrying a rich bachelor. Then the quiet one starts to battle for her man—eventually winning.

"Wedding Rings" is a below average program picture, and will attract only on the names of Lois Wilson, H. B. Warner and Olive Borden.

Plenty of support needed here with excellent "draw" comedies and shorts.

Produced and released by First National. Story by Ernest Pascall. Directed by William Beaudine. Adaptation by Ray Harris. Photographed by Ernest Haller. Running time, 70 minutes. Length, 6,646 feet. Release date, Dec 29, 1929.

Second Wife

(RKO—All Dialogue)

Domestic Drama Well Done

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

STAGE material adapted to the screen with sound and handled with conviction and sincerity. Domestic drama, nice subtleties of which may go over heads of some. Discriminating audiences will enjoy every foot of it. Nicely timed denouement with no anti-climax to deflect interest. Voice recording fine. Principals all gifted with speaking voices of quality.

Young advertising man takes second wife in defiance of second wife's "friend's" advice A child by first marriage is an obstacle. Child born to second wife when mother-love realization brings eternal love and understanding.

Conrad Nagel, Lila Lee and Hugh Huntley lend real artistry to the talking screen. Mary Carr has been seen to better advantage. Freddie Burke Frederick, a youngster, gives promise.

Running dialogue far above average. Entire action confined to interiors. Lila Lee, whose sense of repression is surprising, gives a performance as the wife that might be envied by many stage actresses.

Comedy shorts and out-door stuff will fit nicely.

Produced and distributed by RKO. Adapted from an original stage play, "All the King's Men." Directed by Russell Mack. Adaptation by Bert Glennon. Photographed by William Marshall. Length, 5058 feet. Running time, 1 hour and 8 minutes. Release date Feb. 9, 1930.

Burning Up

(Paramount—All Dialogue)

Noisy and Dull

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

TO compare this racing story with one of the many Wally Reid did with such snap and charm is not so odious. To compare Richard Arlen as the star with Wally is as odious as comparing service in the Ritz Gold Room to that received in a Bowery cafeteria. The roar of unmuffled motors is deafening. The story is flimsy if there be a story at all.

Two racing drivers, enemies, of course, battle for supremacy for no other reason than to win Mary Brian's hand. Tully Marshall's always fine work fails to lend much to this noise drama. Good recording of dialogues saves this one from utter oblivion as anything but noise.

Sam Hardy in a role only a bit more prominent than the smallest bit makes of this bit a piece of villainous artistry. Francis McDonald, another villain is good. Charles Sellon lends some good comedy moments.

This will ring the bell on any program where noise—and more noise—is required to satisfy.

Comedy shorts O.K. here.

Produced by Paramount. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. Story and dialogue by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt. Photographed by Allen Siegler. Length, 5,251 feet. Running time, 1 hour and ten minutes. Release date, Feb. 1.

Corking Comedies Highlight Shorts

"Giovanni Martinelli"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 932)

A Splendid Duet

MARTINELLI, splendid singer and stagey actor, does fine work here. He and Livia Marracci sing the duet from "Martha." The rendition is impressive. As is usual in opera, the artists are not always young or preposessing in appearance. To intelligent audiences this will prove no handicap and it is to that type of patron that numbers such as this will appeal. Running time, about 10 minutes.

Fits with any feature where opera is appreciated.

"Gettysburg Address"

(Pathe-Sound—1 Reel)

Lincoln's Birthday, You Know

FEBRUARY 12 always stirs up thoughts of the Great Emancipator, George Billings, noted for his impersonations of Abraham Lincoln, reincarnates the Civil War president and his Gettysburg address. Scenes at Gettysburg; the store where Lincoln clerked, his last resting place in Springfield and the Nation's tribute to him, the Lincoln Memorial in the Capital City.

No comment necessary; it fits on smallest or most elaborate program.

"Hot Dog"

(M-G-M—All Talker—2 Reels)

They'll Go Wild Over This

ACE-HIGH entertainment. Fifty well-trained dogs are featured. And it's their show. The two highlights are staged at a cabaret, where the dogs are guests, and a courtroom scene. In the latter, the "wife" of a jealous canine "husband" is "up" for murdering the old-man, who caught her two-timing. Don't let this get by. Your audience will remember it as very fine film fare. Zion Myers and Julius White directed. They rate medals. Running time, 18 minutes.

Fine contrast for heavy type feature.

"Cover Charge"

(Pathe—Sound Topics—1 Reel)

Flat

"NIFTY," the dummy, and the "professor" run through another one of those dry spiels, culled from material appearing in the humor columns of the nation's newspapers. "Topics" in their old silent form had a much better appeal. Their new form just doesn't click. And this one is no exception. Van Beuren is the producer. Running time, 8 minutes.

Soft pedal this. Strength of feature, any type, essential.

"Family Next Door"

(Paramount—Talking Comedy—2 Reels)

Charles Ruggles May Save This

WHY a comedian of Charles Ruggles' calibre should be required to get pifflicated in order to be funny is not quiet clear. It happens in this one, however. Not only Charles but three others stagger through almost a reel of film. It takes the other reel to get 'em drunk. If this be comedy, then you have a

Fine Comedy Numbers Among Week's Short Subjects; M-G-M Releases Good

"Family Next Door"

riot here. Two families living across the hall from each other get together to straighten out each other's difficulties. They get drunk—all four of 'em and then get their wives mixed.

Needs support with any kind of feature.

"Crinoline Classics"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

Good Song Number

TWO girls dressed in Colonial costumes sing an operatic version of the "St. Louis Blues," topped off with "Song of Songs" and couple of other popular numbers. No excuse for the costumes. Would be a better blackface act, especially since the girls go through considerable facial calisthenics in half closeup shots.

Will get by on a bill with a heavy feature.

"Pathe Audio Review—No. 6"

(Pather Talker—1 Reel)

Splendid Subject

THERE is plenty of material crammed into this subject, enough almost for one of the backstage features which have been epidemic. It starts out with an exposition of what the well dressed "he man" wears at home, and then offers a fine example of the dances of various nations, as seen by Hollywood. It's a splendid subject. Running time, 10 minutes.

A bet for any bill.

"The Danger Claim"

(Universal Pioneer Kid Series—Silent)
2 Reels)

Good Silent Western Kid Stuff

THE kid hero in Western drama is something new under the sun. Universal has turned out one here that offers nothing else but action, hard riding and gun play minus sound. Bobbie Nelson, a Buster Brown type and age, rides through this one with all the abandon and bravado of a Bill Hart, saves his father's gold mine from claim jumpers and paves the way for his sister's romance. Here are two reels of western drama that offer everything the lovers of this brand of hard riding, fast shooting screen entertainment devour. Children will love it and Bobbie's pony.

Will perk up a slow-moving feature.

"Niagara Falls"

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 3778)

Human Interest, Plus Pathos

HELEN JEROME EDDY and Bryant Washburn relate the consuming ambition of a couple to visit Niagara Falls on their honeymoon. For 25 years they attempted to make the trip, but something always happens to prevent them. They finally gave it up after their son is saved from prison by using the money they had saved for the trip. Running time, about 10 minutes.

Where nicely timed pathos is needed this one will click.

New Reviewing Gag

Paramount is bringing in reviewers from a number of cities for premiere, Feb. 19, "The Vagabond King," at the Criterion, New York. The reviewers are to remain in New York two days. The picture is the first all-color Paramount production, which the company says is its most elaborate one to date.

"Broadway Folly"

(Universal Sound Cartoon—1 Reel)

Oswald Fans Will Accept This

OSWALD, the animated rabbit, crashes into a cabaret and a good time is had by all. Good animation, music and "animal dialogue." The animal orchestra is there and there is some wild dancing staged impromptu and otherwise. Oswald always stirs up a good time wherever he goes and he hasn't missed fire in this one.

Will fit where animated cartoon is needed—that's with any feature.

"Impressions"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

Odd Comedy Short

ALBERT CARROLL does four satirical impersonations of prominent stage stars. The best two are of John Barrymore and Fanny Brice as Hamlet and Ophelia. His nervous Mrs. Fiske will give the audience the jimmies. It's passable filler material if the rest of the program is strong.

Can be used with any sort of feature.

"Johannes Brahms"

(RKO—Sound—1 Reel)

Gem for Music Lovers

CONDENSED into approximately ten minutes of running time, the life and music of Johannes Brahms, composer, offers both instruction and dignified entertainment. The one romance in the great bachelor-composer's life is reenacted in a gypsy camp. Brahm is shown at his favorite pastimes—smoking cigars and playing chess. His "Cradle Song" is played, as are snatches from his other immortal hits.

Even a Bowery audience will lend attention to this one.

"Radio Riot"

(Paramount Talkertoon—1 Reel)

Very Amusing

WHEREIN a goldfish, a 'cello and three mice are brought to a bad end after listening to the strains and cavortings of a radio that goes cannibal. Very amusing. Directed by Dave Fleischer. Running time, 8 minutes.

Hardly

It was in Famous Players' cafeteria. Clara Bow was choosing her dessert from a tray of French pastry when Jack Oakie called from the next table. "Careful, Clara," he warned her. "You can't have your cake and have 'it' too."

—Motion Picture Magazine

"Bear Shooters"

(M-G-M—All Talker—2 Reels)

"Our Gang" Put It Over

HAL ROACH and his "Our Gang" troupe in another funfest. The second reel makes up for a little lagging at the start. The "gang," off on a picnic, pitch their tent in a far-away nook used by a rum-smuggling outfit, which dresses one of its members as a gorilla to scare the kids from the spot. Lots of fun. Fine stuff for the youngsters. And there's enough laughs for the grown-ups, too. Robert McGowan directed. Running time, 20 minutes.

Good with any feature.

"Crosby's Corners"

(Pathe—All Talker—2 Reels)

It Clicks

UNLIKE many of its predecessors in the "Rubeville" yarn series, this one gets off to a flying start and maintains a rapid pace throughout. Philip Tannura directed Reg Merville and Felix Rush, and a group of the hick folk, in a fire-barn setting which offers pleasing entertainment, topped off with a few songs, dances and pieces by the town's brass band. Running time, 18 minutes.

Use a dramatic feature here.

"Traffic Troubles"

(Universal—Sound—2 Reels)

Old, But Uproarious

AMATEUR musician disturbs his neighborhood with varied instruments, takes a wild ride with his best girl on which there are traffic difficulties. He impersonates the girl's grandmother to smooth over the traffic violation. Thieves enter the scene. Much excitement to end. Slapstick comedy with sound and dialogue that will click where low comedy is relished. Cute girl and would-be comedian resort to some old but always uproarious low comedy gags.

Average comedy—you'll know best where to fit it in.

"Jack Buchanan"

(Vitaphone Varieties—1 Reel)

Amusing

HERE is a light song number with four pretty fair voices doing "Sweet and Low" and other typical glee club selections. Jack Buchanan pulls some typical English musical hall slapstick, being always out of step. It's well done.

Balances well with feature and newsreel.

"Wanderlust"

(Paramount—Bruce Scenic—1 Reel)

Nice Photography and Dull

OTTO FRIES has some difficulty in putting boy to sleep so he can indulge in the wanderlust that claims his soul. Not so with the audience. Anna Chance sings "Sweet and Low" while hubby slips away and their boy stays watchful 'till the bitter end. Nicely photographed and dull. A Bruce scenic. Running time, 11 minutes.

Standard of Sound Shorts in Current Lineup on Upgrade

"The Shrimp"

(M-G-M—All Talker—2 Reels)

Fine Stuff

HARRY LANGDON is right up to snuff, with a bushelful of laughs in a two-reeler centering around a timid boarder, much abused by his room-mates, who is the subject of an experimental operation performed by a big scissor-and-knife man. He claims to have discovered the secret of transplanting the fighting spirit of a bulldog into man. And he succeeds. Langdon runs right back to the boarding house and does his stuff. Good comedy; moves at a fast clip. Directed by Charles Rogers. Running time, 20 minutes.

Enough comedy here for your bill, so use a short talker sketch.

"Room 909"

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 921-22)

Real Comedy About Coffins

ROBERT EMMETT KEANE and Claire Whitney of vaudeville repute actually make playlet written around funeral preparations funny. Keane is a salesman for his father's company of coffin makers. Claire is a chambermaid in the hotel at which he stops. It is honest-to-goodness comedy. Approximately two reels.

Nice contrast for heavy feature.

"Splashing Through"

(Pathe—Sportlight—1 Reel)

Better Than Ever

GRANTLAND RICE, in this all-talker "Sportlight," teaches how to swim. He uses undersea shots to show how it's done under water, following up with diving and stroke instructions by experts along the Florida shores. A beach club at Coral Gables supplies some lively tunes. First-rate entertainment and educational for non-swimmers. Running time, 8 minutes.

Short comedy and dramatic numbers will go well.

"Getting a Ticket"

(Paramount Talker—1 Reel)

Cantor Sends It In

EDDIE CANTOR is pulled into Court for making love to a girl in the park and squeezes out of that one with a gag. Then he is pinched for speeding and entertains the cop and the audience with a resume of his relative's peculiarities, some old wheezes on the stock crash, and finally sings a song in his best manner hoping to dodge the ticket for speeding but he gets one for disturbing the peace. Last half of the song might be objected to in family circles. Directed by Mort Blumenstock. Running time, 11 minutes.

"A Night in the Shooting Gallery"

(M-G-M Colortone Revue—2 Reels)

Very Smart

HARRY RAPF, directing, made a fine job of this. Technicolor enhances the beauty of a smart stage revue, but at spots it is too dazzling. Five dancers and one song and dance number are offered in a very elaborate setting. Enjoyable entertainment. Running time, 15 minutes.

Good with a light feature.

Partners

Hollywood—When Doug and Mary were in Shanghai on the last lap of their world tour, a mutual friend introduced them to bright lights in the local amusement world.

"Meet Mr. Backhouse," the introduction ran.

"How do you do, Mr. Backrouse," said Mary.

"The name is Backhouse," said the punctilious Englishman. And said he, "I should like you to know my partner, Mr. Low-Can."

By that time Doug was approaching the stages of open laughter.

"I suppose," he said later, "if those two boys had a third partner his name would be Commode."

"Blotto"

(M-G-M—All Talker—2½ Reels)

Great Comedy Stuff

STAN LAUREL and Oliver Hardy in 30 minutes of fun. There's a laugh every second, it seems. The pair is at its best.

Laurel and Hardy put one over on Stan's wife when they break away from the old fireside to attend the opening of a new night club. They brought along a bottle of "real" pre-war,' stolen from Mrs. Stan, who had heard of the date and refilled the bottle with a mixture of hot sauce, pepper and tea. The boys think it's great and finish the stuff which has the same effect as liquor. Laurel's better half follows the duo to the club with a double-barreled shotgun—and it's all over. James Parrott directed. Running time, 30 minutes.

Use a novelty short, that's all.

Audio Review, No. 7

(Pathe—Sound—1½ Reels)

Hits the Half-Way Mark

FAR below the standard of the Audio Review group. Includes three units: "We Knew Them When," being a selection of front-page personalities taken from the Review's library, and fairly interesting; "Land of Yesterday," some more shots of Newfoundland, and "Whiskey Johnnie," which is the title of an old-time sailor song, sung by the Review quartet. (Terrible.) This reel will just about get by. Running time, 10 minutes.

Give it plenty of support; use a good comedy.

"Sky Skippers"

(Pathe—Sound Cartoon—1 Reel)

Fast Moving and Funny

VAN BEUREN turns out a good sound 'Fable' in "Sky Skippers," concentrating the action on air travel, with the whole gang of Al's animal friends in all sorts of contraptions doing their stuff away up in the clouds. They'll like it. Running time, 5 minutes.

Cartoons are usually adaptable to any type feature.

Another Bow Navy Film

Hollywood—"True to the Navy," all-talking film planned as a companion picture to "Fleet's In," has been selected as Clara Bow's next vehicle. It will be directed by Frank Tuttle.

Switching Post

NANCE O'NEIL is the newest add to Novarro's "Singer of Seville," Charles Brabin directing.

* * *

Dodge Sisters, recent stage importations, under contract to M-G-M, have been assigned a team spot in the modern section of "March of Time," next M-G-M revue.

* * *

Arthur Stone is supporting Warner Baxter in "Arizona Kid." Others include Mona Maris, Wilfred Lucas, Hank Mann and Walter Lewis. Alfred Santell is directing for Fox.

Milton Douglas, former soloist with Roxy's "Gang," will make his screen debut in "Viennese Nights."

* * *

T. Roy Barnes will appear in the Marie Dressler-Polly Moran comedy, "Margin Mugs" (M-G-M).

* * *

Inez Courtney is slated for the featured spot in the first Fox directorial assignment for Chandler Sprague. "Solid Gold Article," by Richard Connell, is the vehicle. Harold Atteridge is at work on the dialogue.

* * *

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has cast Jeanette Loff opposite John Boles in "Moonlight Madness." John S. Robertson will direct.

* * *

Leila Hyams is working in "Father's Day," Sam Wood directing for M-G-M.

* * *

Warners is casting "Playboy," Frank Fay's first. Michael Curtiz will direct. The support to date includes Beryl Mercer, Bella Lugosi, Florence Eldridge, Marion Byron, Flora Finch and James Bradbury, Sr.

Arthur Hammerstein continues "Bride 66" casting, signing Carroll Nye and John Garrick.

Abe Lyman's band will provide musical accompaniment for Nancy Carroll's number in "Paramount on Parade." Lyman is doubling from Grauman's Chinese, where his band is the stage attraction with extended run of "Rogue Song."

* * *

Constance Bennett's next starring vehicle for Pathe will be an adaptation of H. L. Gates' novel, "Lipstick." Clara Beranger is putting the finishing touches to the adaptation.

* * *

Screen rights to "The New Moon," now on tour after a long run on Broadway, have been purchased by M-G-M. No cast has been chosen.

* * *

Columbia has bought screen rights to "Soldiers and Women," stage play by Paul Hervey Fox and George Tilton.

* * *

Owen Davis has been assigned the work of adapting "So This Is London" for Fox.

* * *

Chester Morris has been signed by M-G-M for "Big House," a story of prison life which will be directed by George Hill.

SYNCHRONIZED TURNTABLES

Two Syncrodisks, two Pick-Ups and Fader, Complete for only

$500

Built by Weber, whose tradition is Precision —the Turntable with Spring Suspension.

Syncrodisk is vibrationless—a quality achieved only by Weber whose reputation is great in the field of sound. It reproduces all tone with bell-like clarity at high or low volume—because it is built by men of real skill who know what it's all about.

It is engineered, tested, developed and produced by experts—not bought and assembled at a price from a jobbing mechanic.

It is compact, designed for convenience in the projection room; has two pockets for needles built into the metal guard which surrounds the disk and a nickelplated, adjustable lamp to illuminate the needle track —a slick little feature that is most helpful.

Syncrodisk is quickly and easily attached to any make of projector, therefore, it is unnecessary to junk your present equipment.

Dependable, smooth, quiet, day-after-day operation is its essence.

Ad Tips—With Marion Davies as star, this was a "recommended feature" and the response was excellent. Gave due emphasis to French strain throughout because of considerable proportion of local French patrons. The fact that it was a post-war comedy with Paris as the locale helped considerably. It was a different type of talking and singing comedy, and the six song numbers were enumerated in the advertising. Announcement was made that it was the first talking feature for Miss Davies. Reference was also made to Cliff Edwards and his ukulele because of his popularity here. The feature has wide appeal, pleasing old and young.—Don Stapleton, Mgr., Centre, Ottawa.

Ad Tips—If any Hearst newspapers are in your town be sure and get your portion of national advertising campaign. In your billing and newspaper ads use name of Marion Davies large with figure or head. Especially in newspapers, use full length figure in ballet costume running right side against a ¾-inch border of black, checked and lined bands. Up left of this run copy and at top to left use signature. Tell them it is from the stage success, "Dulcy," and name other prominent members of cast. Say: "She's back, the screen's merriest star in the year's smartest comedy." Audience appeal is very strong for all classes and it pulled many laughs from audiences.—Howard Price Kingsmore, Gen'l. Mgr., Loew's Century, Baltimore.

Ad Tips—Bill King Vidor as director above players, and hilarious foolishness as the whole theme of the picture. Marion Davies and Elliott Nugent equal billing. Fun— fun— fun. Appeal is to all classes, all ages.—W. V. Taylor, Mgr., Loew's State Houston.

Ad Tips—Featured Marion Davies and strong cast. Taken from stage farce "Dulcy" and proved to be a riotous comedy talker with good box-office. Always reliable entertainment. Theatres inaugurated "Come Down Town Week."—Floyd Maxwell, Mgr., Fox Broadway, Portland, Ore.

Phantom of Opera (Univ.)

MILWAUKEE—Alhambra (2,660), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Journal-Universal News Reel, comedy. Weather, cloudy and unsettled. Opposition: "Hit the Deck," "Mysterious Island," "Her Unborn Child," "General Crack," "Navy Blues," "Hot for Paris." Rating, 105%.

—CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS—

Showmanship

TO those who are inclined, by nature, to observe what is going on around them, the highly important features of Showmanship will become apparent, not only in connection with theatre operation and advertising, but in any modern line of business today.

It is THE dominating factor in all commercial, as well as theatrical lines, and the man qualified to handle it in one field is equally qualified to handle it in others.

Chain stores, department stores, manufacturers and national advertisers, are all students and exponents of this great elastic word—SHOWMANSHIP.

Just what would YOU call showmanship?

One of the many answers we would give to such a question is: that ability to create an interest in something you have to sell, and to make the public want to get something you have for sale.

Just offered merchandise for sale is no longer considered good sales tactics. You must do more than that. You must make them want to buy your wares.

What matter if you are selling pots and pans or theatrical attractions?

The appeal must be directed along the same channels of Showmanship or you will find them passing your door and going to the opposition.

They do those things you know. It's just a matter of making them so darned well pleased with your house that they will overlook the occasional off-show and come anyway.

Yes; we know all about the boys who will up and say that if you haven't got the picture you will starve regardless. But we know of too many instances where houses not getting every "big" picture still do a good business and we are rather inclined to believe that it's because they have that "it" called Showmanship that is bringing them back again.

Chicago, we found, for example, was doing less exploitation in the neighborhood houses than any community or city we had ever visited, but they are making up for it to a certain extent by reason of the Showmanlike manner with which they run their theatres.

The same applies to everyone of you who are inclined to become lax in the operation of your houses. You've got to keep on your toes every minute and you've got to make sure that every employee on your payroll is doing likewise.

There's only one way to accomplish such methods, that is to invoke that same Showmanship angle so often talked about and give the customers that "little" extra attention and play upon their vanity if that is what they want.

"Chick."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Town's Still Laughing at McKay's Peppy Pet Parade

J. H. McKoy of the Olympia Theatre in Miami was inspired by the picture "Untamed" to sponsor a parade appropriate to the title of the picture.

Word was put out through the papers that all children between 12 and 16 years would be allowed to see the picture free if they appeared at a specified hour at the box-office and (here's the catch) signed a card pledging their appearance at 7 P. M. the following night with their respective pets.

The next evening a varied assortment of children and animals assembled outside the town court house. Frightened cats, nondescript mutts, cackling chicks, in fact every sort of beast imaginable were led by the Chamber of Commerce Drum Corps through the busiest streets in town to the Olympia. Big banners were carried which read "These animals are tamed but see and hear Joan Crawford in 'Untamed' at the Olympia Theatre." etc.

At the theatre the children were given passes for a future showing which enabled them to bring their excited pets home, while the Drum Corps marched in a body into the theatre with a blare of bugles.

The stunt was a big success from every angle, receiving much comment both from the press and by word of mouth. It was a "honey" from an economical standpoint too.

Which means one more stunt to be chalked up to the credit of Jimmy McKoy and of course we know it is far from being his last. His ROUND TABLE CLUB activities have always made interesting reading matter for his brother members and managers and we know that the same spirit continues in his mind as when he first became a member of this peppy organization. Let's hope that it will be a steady diet from now on, and that the name of J. H. McKoy and his Publix Olympia activities will be a regular feature on the CLUB pages. At any rate, the things he is accomplishing are worthy of such distinction.

In order that our photo file of members will be complete, we would appreciate if you would send your photograph by return mail, providing, of course, you have not already done so. Thank You.

Patrons Taken for a Ride Hoeffler's Publicity Gag

Did you ever hear of Harry Hoeffler of Quincy, Mass.?

Well, if you haven't this is just to let you know that he is actively interested in the destinies of three of the Publix houses up there named the Washington. Orpheum and Belasco and only recently was instrumental in arranging a marvelous taxi tie-up, whereby the patrons were taken to the theatre by the taxi cabs in order to stimulate business for both the cabs and the theatre.

This was a mighty worth-while piece of work on his part and, although we are not sure that he wants us to divulge the secret, we would like the world to know that his Dad Jack Hoeffler is a real old-time road attraction manager who has been credited with having put Harry Houdini into the show business.

With such a background and such an ancestor Harry should certainly click in the show business all the way through. At any rate, we're hoping that we hear a whole lot about what he is doing in his part of the country. How about it, Harry, and also how about a few lines telling us a little more about your past history up to your present connection and include one of your own photographs for use on these pages? Thanks anyway in advance and remember us to the rest of the ROUND TABLE CLUB boosters up your way.

Co-Op Tie-Up With Dealers Nets Fulton Added B.O. Biz.

R. K. Fulton effected a tie-up with six merchants on a stunt that stimulated the otherwise dull pre-Christmas attendance at the Princess Theatre, Sioux City, Ia.

Six different gifts were promoted from as many merchants to be given away from the stage on Christmas Eve. Every patron entering the theatre was given a coupon entitling them to a chance on each of the gifts providing they were in the theatre on the night the prizes were to be given away. Stubs on the coupons were to be dropped in the "Princess Chimneys" which were located in the six different stores.

The tie-up with the merchants was advertised by running a special local made trailer one week in advance, advertised in merchants' windows, display of gifts around tree in lobby, coupons given to every patron entering theatre over week in advance and also plugged over the local radio station.

At this particular time, Montgomery Ward company had tied up with the local broadcasting station (KSCJ) whereby the store's Santa Claus appeared in the store's front window each day and broadcasted over KSCJ from the window.

Kiddies were urged to write letters to Santa and he would read them over the radio. This stunt attracted large crowds around the window as well as reaching the homes through the medium of receiving sets.

The theatre profited on the Montgomery Ward tie-up by having Santa tell everyone over the radio about the gifts that were being given away at the Princess Christmas Eve and that he would be there to give the present away in addition to saying goodbye from the stage just prior to his journey over the housetops.

Also, the Princess Theatre through a tie-up with the Montgomery Ward store had arranged that every child coming to see Santa at the Princess on Christmas Eve would be admitted free if he or she was accompanied by his mother or father. Santa also urged the children and their parents to attend the shows at the Princess so they could get coupons which would entitle them to a chance on the prizes he was giving away.

It has been rather a long time since we heard from Fulton, but we are sure that in the interim he has been following the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages and activities just as religiously as though he himself were regularly contributing as he had been doing at one time. However, now that his name and activities appear once more on our pages, we are hoping that it will be a steady diet for both Fulton and the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages.

How about one of your photographs, Fulton, we rather owe you a little story and introduction on these pages, and you are one of the remaining few whose photos are not on file in CLUB headquarters.

Holland's Happiness Week Goes Big Out in Brockton

S. Sidney Holland talked the Mayor and merchants into participating in a co-operative page for Happiness Week in connection with the showing of Ted Lewis in "Is Everybody Happy," playing at the Rialto Theatre, Brockton, Mass.

Twelve merchants co-operated in the stunt and each merchant offering one or two tickets to the Rialto with a certain amount of merchandise purchased. Each merchant paid the full admission price for the tickets and augmented their copy with HAPPINESS WEEK such as, "We will bring you happiness," "You'll be happy if you get the best," etc.

A picture of the Mayor and Manager Holland appeared at the top of the co-operative page with the Mayor's proclamation printed alongside. The Mayor's message—"The period between Thanksgiving and Christmas is usually considered the happiest season of the year and it is only fitting that the beginning of this period should be termed 'Happiness Week'." Merchants are always confronted with the problem of last minute shopping. In order to do justice to yourself, to other shoppers, and the merchants, they unite in requesting that you DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY."

The theatre's ad appeared in the centre of the page with the caption, "Are We Happy? We'll Say So—and why not? We've brought to Brockton for your pleasure the high hatted King of Jazz in his first Vitaphone production—Ted Lewis in "IS EVERYBODY HAPPY'."

All of which constitutes real, high-powered showmanship and exploitation and of course Sidney is entitled to every bit of credit that goes with the success of this fine piece of work. How about some more stuff, Holland?

Berman Promotes Free "Ad" Space in Local Newspapers

M. E. Berman, manager of the Majestic Theater, Kankakee, Illinois, took advantage of a recent suggestion in Publix Opinion to obtain additional free space for his current attraction.

The newspaper in Kankakee used liberal space to promote its classified advertising department. So Manager Berman approached them with the idea of enhancing their ad-appeal by using the illustration of featured players in his current attraction.

A two-column scene mat of Douglas Fairbanks and Loretta Young, in "The Forward Pass," was used in a three-column by fifteen-inch advertisement which had copy something like this:

> IF YOU WERE THIS POPULAR COUPLE
> and were planning to refurnish your home, you could easily sell your old household goods quickly and for ready cash by using a Republican Want Ad, etc.

Assuredly, a beneficial way of giving extra space to an attraction, and at the same time giving a mutual benefit to the newspaper and theater.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Meet Larry Cowen Latest Publicist To Join Our "Gang"

In introducing this new member, via his photograph and this little short story about him, we want you to know that in the very near future an article dealing with the handling of exploitation and publicity for a string of theatres, the majority of which are located in a big city, will be the subject of an article on the CLUB pages.

Larry wrote us a most interesting little article dealing with this particular theory, and our only regret at this moment is the lack of space which prohibits our running this story immediately while we are introducing him with his photograph.

However, we want you to know that this is Larry Cowen, Director of Publicity for the A. H. Schwartz-Century Circuit operating a string of high class theatres throughout Brooklyn and Long Island in New York City, and if you doubt that his is a man's size job, we believe that he will gladly step aside for any one to come in and find out for themselves.

At any rate, this is the "hello" Larry, and now that you're one of us, you must realize that in order to be a good member of the ROUND TABLE CLUB, regular contributions are necessary. You are in a position to pass on something along the lines of your actual experiences which are all the more important because they are not just stuff that you are imagining, but real facts based on absolute knowledge after having tried them at the various theatres.

Convey to the rest of the Century boys our best regards and kindest wishes, and that goes for the new ones as well as the old ones.

"SMALLEST TALKER"

We asked who could lay claim to the smallest theatre in the country that was wired for sound and stated that in Atkinson, Nebr., a theatre with 248 seats was leading for that particular honor.

Along comes our sister member, Miss Hillys E. Book, who manages the SUN Theatre in Culbertson, Nebr., who wants us to tell the world at large that they are opening with sound in a theatre of 228 seats.

Therefore, the present honors go to Miss Book until such time that someone else steps forward and lays claim to the honor.

WE ASK AGAIN: WHICH IS THE SMALLEST SOUND THEATRE IN THE WORLD?

Durn Tootin' "Bob" Can Blow Trumpet With Best Of Them

Talking about different managers, brings to life the fact that our good friend, R. M. Swanson, better known to his host of friends as "Bob," manages the Hippodrome Theatre of Miami, another one of the big Publix chain and a house that is doing a marvelous business. What we have just learned was that "Bob" formerly was a musician and can still blow a trumpet better than any man that ever sat in his pit.

Come on Swanson how about passing along some of your wideawake showman activities down there so that the rest of the boys will know what you are doing? Follow the example of the real big leaders of the business who are making it a point to keep themselves and their doings a wide-open book to the Industry. That's the only way you'll get to be known or get anywhere in this fast-moving industry of ours.

We're hoping that this article will bring forth a nice fat letter with many interesting things in it by return mail. Incidentally your own photograph should be with it because we would like the rest of the crowd to see what you look like.

PROGRESS THRU' UNDERSTANDING ? ?

A marvelous slogan for any group and especially so for the Projection Advisory Council who have adopted it for their use.

BUT . . . !

I must respectfully call the Council's attention to a most important factor which they seem to entirely overlook.

The House Manager.

Their slogan of "Progress Thru' Understanding" can never reach its peak until such understanding includes proper knowledge on the manager's part as well as the projectionist.

The theatre is as much of a business proposition as any other enterprise and since the manager of any enterprise is expected to have more than just a passing knowledge of every department and part of his business, so must the theatre manager expect to know a great deal more about the sound apparatus and projection equipment of his theatre than he knows now.

If the Projection Advisory Council seeks to reach their goal, they must include in their propaganda some consideration for the manager to learn, work with and understand the sound and projection in his theatre.

When the district manager, division supervisor or any of the other numerous bosses of the theatre manager enters a theatre and finds the sound and projection under par, whom does he look to and criticize? The manager, of course.

It should, therefore, behoove us to take the manager into consideration a great deal more than we do in the discussions and problems of the Council and do as much to help and educate him as the projectionist, before we can ever expect to achieve the purposes of the P. A. C.

Perfect, and when we say perfect we mean PERFECT, co-operation and synchronization, between the house manager and the projectionist should be a most important feature of the Council's activities and should be recognized as absolutely essential before real "Progress Thru' Understanding" will ever be achieved.

Phantom Auto Aids Cohn In Drawing $ To Theatre's B. O.

The "Phantom Driver" gag was worked with good results by Manager M. D. Cohn of the Publix Rialto Theatre in Denver, Col., when he tied up with the local Chrysler dealer on "Three Live Ghosts."

The automobile was masked with black cheese cloth, which gave it the appearance of being driverless, although traveling along with the rest of the traffic. Banners on each side of the car carried copy announcing the play dates of the picture and the theatre in addition to putting in a plug for the local automobile dealer.

This stunt of a driverless car is always sure fire for attracting more than ordinary attention. In addition to nabbing a few laughs, it also reacts favorably toward the box office, especially if it is "pulled" around the lunch hours and close of the day.

Don't forget to keep us upon your activities, Cohn, and you might shoot us a photograph of yourself.

Local Bank Tie-Up O. K. and McDonald Grabs Window Plug

Here's another example of a bank tie-up, promoted by Francis P. McDonald, manager of the Columbia Theatre in Portsmouth, Ohio, which we are pleased to pass on.

McDonald "broke into the bank" with "Cock-Eyed World," and persuaded the bank directors to permit him to place a placard in the bank window bearing copy and stills which would be of mutual advantage to both the bank and himself. And as the bank is ideally situated in the principal office building in the town, he secured a lot of free publicity.

This bank angle is one that has not been overworked as yet and it would be a good idea to look into it. We guess we don't have to stress the necessity of using adequate copy, do we? It's not necessary to wait for a picture with a "natural" for a bank tie-up to roll around. Make your own "natural."

Thanks, McDonald, for sending us this one and don't forget we're always anxious to know what your activities are at the Columbia.

A. J. Sharick Uses Essay Contest Gag Creating Interest

A contest in which Washington mothers won cash prizes for their advice on the care of babies was a feature of the exploitation campaign on "HELL'S HEROES" when the Universal picture played the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C.

The contest was sponsored by the Washington "Times." It was the first time in several months that the prominent Capital daily has run a contest. The paper's announcement stated that over 25 prizes would be presented for the best letters written by mothers entitled, "How To Bring Up a Baby." It further mentioned that the contest was in conjunction with the current showing at the Rialto of "HELL'S HEROES," Universal production from the Peter B. Kyne story, "The Three Godfathers." It gave a brief synopsis of the story and added that the management of the Rialto and the Times Baby Contest editor were anxious to ascertain the proper manner in which a newly born babe should be cared for, and that letters not exceeding 300 words would be appreciated and given due consideration.

Interest in the contest was maintained by the Times through daily stories on its progress, etc. At the conclusion the names of the prize winners were published. Several thousand letters were received presenting greatly diversified ideas on the subject and giving the judges a difficult job in selecting the winners.

A. J. Sharick, managing director of the Rialto Theatre, originated the contest as part of his campaign on the picture.

An interesting "HELL'S HEROES" press book idea utilized by Sharick for this engagement was a shadow box with crepe paper flames flaring up around cut-out letters spelling the title. The "flames" were attached to an electric fan placed in the bottom of the box, and were given a realistic touch with the use of a small red "spot" placed in the bottom of the frame. Atop the box were placed cut-out heads of the three heroes.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"LAFF THIS OFF!"

It certainly is tough to see and hear daily of the breaks some guys get in this world; as witness Wally Allen and the rest of the gang down Florida way.

Wally, the demon Publix exploiteer, knowing our aversion to the cold, kindly sends us a pamphlet extolling the "empyrean" virtues of Florida. (Boy, Wadda Line!) And as we glance through the pages, pausing here and there to comment upon the "pulchritudinous damosels" (nifty dames) who frisk, caper and cavort upon the clean white sands, we cannot hold back the teardrop, which escaping, rolls down our doleful countenance. But we choke back the rest of our sobs and console ourselves with the fact that maybe some day Wally will be transferred to Alaska. Then see how nice it is—when a guy is pulling the collar of his three-year-old overcoat closer to his throat in order to ward off the chilling blasts which goes through every bone in his body—to look at a pamphlet of Florida.

How heartless this fellow Allen is. We can't escape that circular. We throw it out the window. The wintry gusts blow it back again. We throw it into the waste basket. Somebody comes into the office, picks it out of the basket and exclaims "Boy, just imagine, I leave for there myself in a few days." Grr. It entrances us. We can't get rid of it. Finally in desperation we run through it again. And then as we stop to look over a picture of two bathing beauties, sheltered only by a parasol, the realization of what Wally is trying to convey strikes us.

THE DARN FOOL WANTS US TO KNOW THAT HE IS BURIED IN THE SAND NEAR THE SPOT WHERE THE SEMI-NUDE GIRLS ARE POSING!

Harpster's Co-op Page Good for Merchants and Theatre

Here's one from F. B. Harpster, manager of the Palace Theatre in Lorain, Ohio, that did much to attract a lot of interest.

Harpster tied up with the local merchants who co-operated with him in running a couple of full page ads in the local paper plugging "Show of Shows."

The full page ad was laid out in boxes, running along with Harper's big ad on the picture. Over the merchants ads three stars were laid out and carried the pictures of feature players in the production with a blank underneath to fill in the name of the star. There was thirty-eight stars printed, all unnamed with the reader to supply the identification. The ad carried the announcement of the cash prizes which included $10 first prize and also a number of passes to the Palace Theatre.

A few days later the same ad was again run with the exception that instead of the stars' names being missing they were now filled in and identified. This stunt went over well, as more than 500 hundred answers were received.

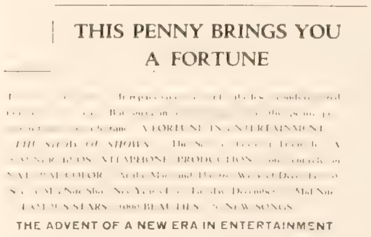
The layout was personally attended to by Harpster and we want to say right now that it was a pretty neat looking layout. While this "guess name" contest is not new it is, nevertheless, an effective business booster and can be worked on almost any picture of this type, which contains an exceptionally large number of celebrities, to good results.

Thanks Harpster for keeping us in touch with your activities out there at the Palace, and we know that you're going to accomplish a lot more good things the way you have been in the past. Let's hear some more from you real soon. Right?

Novel Slant Always Featured in Boucher's Stunts

We want to thank Frank R. Boucher, live wire manager of the Maryland Theatre in Hagerstown, Md., and Regional Chairman of the ROUND TABLE CLUB, for the wealth of interesting information he has sent us on his publicity campaign for "Show of Shows," at the Maryland.

Frank tied up with the Chamber of Commerce and was permitted to pull a "nifty" at all of the luncheons of the civic organization. Frank's stunt, which we are reproducing below, consisted of placing a card at each plate which bore the wording: THIS PENNY BRINGS YOU A FORTUNE. This one cent is yours. It repays you in part for the few seconds required to read this message. But, small in actual money value, this penny puts you in touch with a fortune. A FORTUNE IN ENTERTAINMENT! "THE SHOW OF SHOWS"—the Screen's Greatest Triumph. A WARNER BROS. VITAPHONE PRODUCTION, done entirely in NATURAL COLOR. At the Maryland heatre the week of December 30. (Special Midnite Show New Year's Eve.) 77 FAMOUS STARS—1000 BEAUTIES—20 NEW SONGS. THE ADVENT OF A NEW ERA IN ENTERTAINMENT.



THIS PENNY BRINGS YOU A FORTUNE

THE ADVENT OF A NEW ERA IN ENTERTAINMENT

A penny was pasted to the upper right-hand corner. (Somebody saw it before us so we never saw it.)

This stunt attracted a great deal of comment and was good for a couple of laughs.

Another novel idea of Frank's and one which pleases us mightily is the make-up of the card advertising the Maryland's coming attraction which he placed in the dining rooms of the leading hotel. The card, size 3 x 5 inches, is made up of a compo board composition with letters made of a sort of sealing wax composition which are pressed into the board. The board is buff colored and the letters are a brilliant green. We think this is one of Frank's nifties of exploiting and we wish he'd let us into the process of making them so that we can pass it on to the rest of you boys. How about it, Frank? Frank also made up a quantity of automobile stickers, to be pasted on windshields, and plugging the name of the attraction and theatre. This is generally a very good gag, but a lot of towns have an ordinance against this type of exploiting, which makes it hard to use the idea.

To climax his campaign on "Show of Shows," Frank tied up with the town's leading dealers, securing their co-operation to the extent of incorporating "Show of Shows" in their ads. This is an excellent stunt as it gets the readers both ways. If they're looking for shopping news, they get the theatre news, too. We want to add, too, that Frank's ad was right in the middle of the page and it stood out like a beacon light.

We're always glad to hear from Frank because we know he's bound to have something new for us, and if it isn't something brand new it's the old stuff with new ideas on it. Let's hear from you again in the very near future, Frank.

Notice to Members

PLEASE be sure to notify the chairman of any change of address.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

AN OPEN LETTER

To James M. Wood,
Ass't Circuit Manager,
Elbert Theatre,
Elbert, West Virginia,
Dear Mr. Wood:

It gives me great pleasure to extend you a hearty welcome into the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB and it is with a feeling of satisfaction that I read from your letter that you have watched the progress of the CLUB since its inception and have religiously followed our doings in the pages of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, at the same time applying the ideas which we receive weekly from showman exhibitors.

I want to thank you for the compliment you hand the CLUB and the NEWS, Mr. Wood, when you admit that our pages have proven a constant source towards bettering your business and I want to say right now that if a lot of so-called "showmen" would be as frank as you are and give credit where credit is due, this racket would be simply swell.

I'm glad to see a man like yourself, who has been ten years with the one organization and a good many more years, a showman, "get on the band wagon" and join a group comprising the world's finest showmen—showmen who are not afraid to PASS ON AN IDEA to their brother members and are not reluctant about LEARNING SOMETHING NEW.

You state in your letter that the rest of the managers who handle the various houses of your circuit are a bit backward about entering the CLUB and that it was necessary that you make the first step. Which you did. And we're proud of you.

You've watched the growth of the CLUB from a two-page part of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS to its present position. We have attained the distinction in the amusement world of being an all-important part of any showman's activities and we want to state right now that when we founded the CLUB on the slogan "ALL FOR ONE AND ONE FOR ALL" we knew way down in our hearts that it would be only a matter of time before the REAL SHOWMEN of the universe realized that at last they were to be represented, and represented in their own language, which is why they, like you, CLIMBED UPON THE BAND WAGON. And they didn't climb upon that band wagon to BLOW THEIR OWN HORNS but to HELP THEIR FELLOW EXHIBITORS.

I want to again extend you a hearty welcome into the CLUB Mr. Wood, and to state that there's always a place open on our roster for the SHOWMAN WHO PROGRESSES.

Cordially Yours,
"CHICK" LEWIS.

Kane's Stunts Always Carry a Real Wallop for House

From out of the West comes Tommy Kane's letters. For Tommy is the live wire gent who manages the Sequoia Theatre in Redwood City, Calif., for the Arkush Circuit, and we've been so darn busy here that we just couldn't seem to get around to Tommy But he was patient. And it was pretty blamed nice of him to keep us supplied with material concerning his activities. The Sequoia just celebrated it's first birthday and as usual Tommy was right on the job securing front page publicity on the local paper.

And in addition Tommy ran co-operative ads in the local sheet tieing-up with the merchants who plugged the picture and the Sequoia anniversary in their ads. Tommy featured a monster cake on his marquee, illuminated by a large electric candle. His entire front was bedecked with pennants and banners. He pulled a laugh-getting contest during anniversary week by a tie-up with an advertising show, being held in town, and in which the advertising concern furnished live cows to Tommy, who proceeded to innovate a cow milking contest on the stage of the theatre. This was instrumental in supplying many laughs and in securing additional business, as no doubt many of the advertising men and their families patronized the theatre.

That's not all Tommy is doing out in Redwood City either. He secured a tie-up with a local shoe dealer and arranged to erect an electric sign on the merchants building, advertising the attraction at the Sequoia, with a blazing electric arrow pointing across the street to the theatre. This was a swell medium for attracting attention, especially at night.

We are reproducing a picture of the mammoth electric sign Tommy erected atop the theatre to plug the "Hollywood Revue," and one which by virtue of its location must have caused much comment. (Too bad you didn't have a living billboard up there Tommy, and give the aviators a break.)

Tommy fell into a rather tough break during anniversary week, for the unusually cold weather, coupled with rain and hail wrecked havoc with his theatre front decorations for the anniversary. We are reproducing a photo for Tommy's decorative ingenuity, erected in 1930 B. C. (before catastrophe), but he neglected to send us a picture of the damage wrought by the elements, though he did send us a picture of the way the wind knocked his Hollywood Revue sign lopsided, but if we ran it in connection with the one we're using we'd wager that at least a thousand letters would come in telling the cock-eyed world.

We're always glad to hear from Tommy for we know he's always on the job and that every letter he sends is bound to contain some interesting information which we are glad to be able to pass on to his fellow members.

You'll notice Tommy as you run through the pages that your pal Jack Marpole has been inquiring about you. Believe me I'm glad to be able to get you two guys together in the same week. Now let's see you two boys shoot in enough stuff to make me dizzy (Yes, I know what's on your mind, but let it pass), and I'll present you both with a menu I swiped from one of the classiest restaurants in the "Big Burg."

Col. J. B. Russell's Theatre Burned In Maysville, Ky.

We were indeed sorry to hear that the Washington Opera House in Maysville, Kentucky, under the able management of Col. J. B. Russell, was demolished by flames.

The Opera House has conveyed entertainment to the residents of Maysville that has consisted of the finest screen and stage entertainment obtainable and we feel sure that they feel the loss of the theatre keenly.

Colonel Russell has long been an active member of the ROUND TABLE CLUB and we want him to know that he has our heartfelt sympathies for his misfortune, but like the real showman that he is, we can expect to hear from the Colonel again, upon the rebuilding of the theatre and learn more of the activities, the sort of which comprised the "all short subjects days" gag that he originated as a change from the regular program.

"Lots o' Luck, Odlum!"

Our genial friend "G.B." Odlum whose connection up at Elmira, N. Y., was the source of many interesting news items on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages has connected with the Capitol Theatre in Wheeling, West Virginia as Publicity Director, and from first reports to arrive from that sector of the country, he is putting the house over in a marvelous way.

Great stuff, "G.B." and here's wishing you more than your usual share of good luck. With your personality and ability, you don't have to play second-fiddle to anyone in the business when it comes to running a theatre.

Let's hear some more from you, and remember us to all our friends out and around Wheeling.

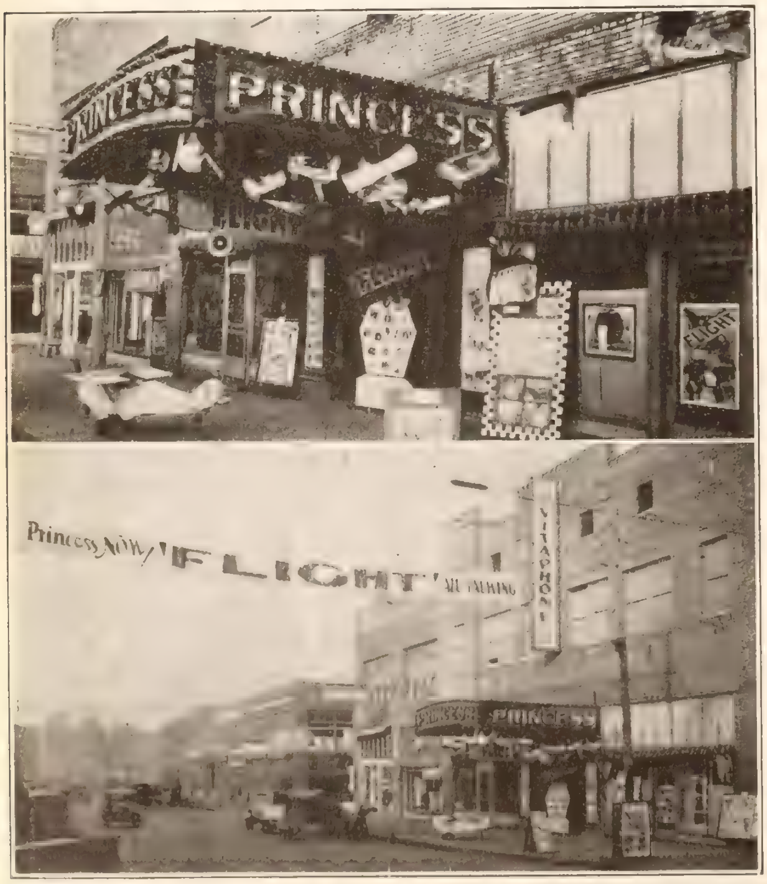
Banniza Found Air-Gag Good for Exploitation Purpose

Here's a couple of photos from Mgr. G. P. Banniza, of the Princess and Delight Theatres, operated by the Crescent Amusement Company in Decatur, Alabama.

Mr. Banniza writes in to inform us of his activities in connection with his exploitation on "Flight." As you will note from the photo, Banniza arranged an attractive display for the picture by hanging a number of cardboard "herald" airplanes under and around the marque, while a large beaver board cut-out of a plane was used to draw additional attention. On the sidewalk you will notice a neat little arrangement of a home-made plane which continually attracted the attention of the school children, and which if raffled off during the run of the picture to some lucky kid, would make a good ballyhoo stunt and would probably aid in attracting a few more shekels in the box office. Stills were attractively arranged in frames and displayed in front of the theatre. They were also placed in the leading stores in the vicinity.

Banniza must pull pretty strong with the local authorities to be able to string a banner across the street. This type of banner aided materially in attracting attention from passing autoists as well as pedestrians and was a valuable aid in the exploiting of the picture. Another angle you will note is the "plugging" of the Vitaphone trademark instead of using the time-worn slogan, "See and Hear."

We're very glad to hear from you, Banniza, and we want you to know that we're sure glad to see that you are taking such an active interest in the Club. Let's hear from you again.



Window Display of Bath-Tub Was Great For Bobby Hicks

Robert E. Hicks effected a unique tie-up with a music store that resulted in lots of publicity for "Show of Shows" playing at the Paramount Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

The music store's window was dressed to give the appearance of a modern bathroom with real bathtub, bath mats, towels, etc. In the tub was an attractive girl who sang one of the song hits from the picture, "Singing in the Bathtub." Her voice was carried to the outside by a loud speaker hook-up.

When the girl wasn't singing, Victor records were played—the records being the song hits from the picture.

The picture and the theatre was represented in a striking one-sheet poster which was placed right over the girl's head.

The window stunt attracted such tremendous crowds that traffic on the street was blocked to such an extent that on three occasions the police insisted that the girl leave the window until they could clear the street. One newspaper estimated that 50,000 people were attracted to the window.

The window stunt was responsible in a large measure to the extraordinary business done on the picture at the Paramount.

You have all recalled the Clara Bow gag of the figure standing back of the shower curtains. If you don't it has no particular bearing on this stunt but it shows that there are possibilities even in the bathroom!

Bobbie Hicks used the old showman noodle and came through 100% on an attraction that more than clicked at the Box Office. Let's have some more of these odd ones, Hicks, and rest assured that each succeeding contribution will be welcomed in CLUB headquarters more than its predecessor.

You might favor us with one of your own photographs as soon as you read this little story, because we would like to introduce you more intimately on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages.

"'RAY FOR BILLY"

"Billy" Gluck, who for many years was known to practically every exhibitor in and around the Metropolitan District of New York for his connection with the theatre equipment and accessory business, has finally torn himself away from the old home town to accept a most flattering offer from the Continental Accessories Company to manage their Los Angeles office.

We think that not only "Billy," but Harold Rodner as well is in line for a vote of thanks and a little congratulations for this fine move on their part.

Because of his acquaintance with so many of our members and readers we want to convey to "Billy" the ROUND TABLE CLUB'S sincerest wishes for his future success and good health.

Let's hear from you, "Billy," and tell us what's doing out there around Hollywood.

a window display of powder cans, painted with the name of the attraction and the theatre, was affected and created a lot of interest. A tie-up with the leading confectioner in town enabled Krier to secure a window and place a placard therein labeled "IF YOU WOULD WELCOME DANGER SAY IT WITH JOHNSON'S CANDY TO ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE." This created a lot of laffs and let the dealer in for some good natured joshing. The entire cost of Krier's complete exploitation campaign was only about twenty-three dollars, which is pretty good exploiting in any man's language, and shows that Krier has an eye on getting a maximum of results at a minimum of cost.

Thank you, Krier, and we knew that you and your assistant, Michael Zalensky, must surely have been well pleased with your efforts when you heard the old cash register jingling its merry tune. And don't forget we want to hear more of your snappy activities out there at the Rialto and Valencia, because when we receive good campaigns like the one you just pulled off we want to pass it along to the boys.

Art Swanke Finds Plenty of Angles To Sell His Show

A tie-up with the local paper and the merchants helped Arthur Swanke, manager of the Strand Theatre in Anderson, S. C., pack them in during the run of "Why Bring That Up" at his house.

The ads would start off with a cut of the "Two Black Crows" with the copy reading, "'The Two Black Crows,' Moran and Mack, in 'Why Bring That Up?'" The copy then continues with a few paragraphs of dialogue which lead up to the article the dealer is selling. This ad reacted to good advantage for both the theatre and the dealers, and was distributed throughout every page in the paper for a very effective flash.

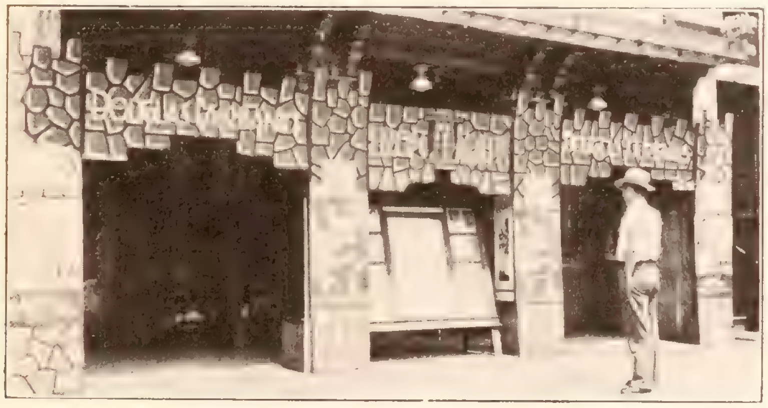
The newspapers also co-operated by permitting Swanke to write his own streamer on the picture and which was printed at the top of the amusement page. The paper permits him to do this every month on a special and he makes good use of it. He had a very well made up ad on the picture which undoubtedly reacted favorably toward the box office. The ad carried a picture of the stars in the center while thumbnail cuts were used of the supporting players. He carried the time of showings in the ad and also plugged the song hits. The entire make-up constitutes a very attractive layout.

We are reproducing a sample of Swanke's display on "The Iron Mask," which he made up himself. He tells us that he has been doing his own art work for the past ten years and in that manner manages to keep the expenses down.

The front of the theatre, as you will note, is decorated in an atmospheric manner to convey the times of the picture. This display seems to have been made of sheet rock or beaver board. Hand painted posters of the picture were nailed onto this background, while on top of the posters Swanke plugs his short subjects. We want to comment upon this idea, as it is in line with the Club's policy of selling your short subjects to the public, for we believe that these oft entirely disregarded reels do lots toward making them come in again. When you have any short subjects of merit give them a plug.

Swanke effected a valuable tie-up with the Dean of Anderson College, a seminary located in the town, whereby the Dean announces to the girls all of the current and coming attractions at the theatre. In addition she permits the posting of a one-sheet on the school's bulletin board. "And," says Swanke, "for a couple of tickets about four hundred and sixty girls attend every new show." Which prompts us to remark that perhaps some of the boys have colleges near them where a little diplomacy with the heads will bring in some more box office gold.

We're always glad to hear of your activities at the Strand, Swanke, and also glad to note that you are continuing the same brand of showmanship you used while you were with L. B. Clark at El Dorado, Ark. We feel sure that with an outfit like Publix your work is not going unnoticed. Let's hear some more from you.



A WARNING!

It has come to our atention that, through an oversight, one of the exchange mats on "General Crack," is shy the "Y" in Barrymore.

If you're playing this one and using any mats, watch for this error before you find that you've pulled a "boner."

(Thanks, J. W. C. for this one)

"BE PREPARED"

We don't believe the Boy Scouts will object if we make use of their famous slogan, so here goes:

LENT IS COMING!

What are you going to do about it? Sit tight and let nature and bum business take its course, or "dope" out some ideas that will stimulate the b.o. during this usual dull portion of the theatrical season?

Follow the Club pages carefully and you will find dozens of corking ideas that can be put to use during Lent that will build up your business.

Don't wait for some of the "bosses" to give you the already well known "razz," beat 'em to it by putting your shoulder to the wheel and make them admit that YOU were on your toes.

"BE PREPARED."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Showmanship Again!

Time and again we have insisted that Showmanship plays a major role in any sort of a real sales campaign, without necessarily restricting such sales campaigns to theatres.

In hotels, department and chain stores they have found that merchandising via the showmans methods are productive of better results than anything ever devised before.

Now we find, again, that Savings Banks are going in for the showmanship angle in selling the value of thrift and we have before us a marvelous piece of material turned out by a bank here in New York showing, what is supposed to be two strips of film, how two different young couples start out in life and how a savings account helped one couple to the top, while spending foolishly held the other couple under a yoke of worry and want.

It is a marvelous piece of work and regardless of whom is responsible for it, again proves the effectiveness of showmanship in selling ideas to the public.

Without going into the details of what YOUR connection might happen to be in the show business, we would call your attention to the point that forms the background for this special little tale: i. e.—if you are studying the fine points of showmanship you are qualifying yourself for bigger and better things in life and business even if such showmanship activities should take you out of the show game into some other field, be it commercial or banking.

"Chick"

Walter Decker to Pass on Some Fine Stunts Very Soon

Here's another new member, boys—Walter Decker manages the City Opera House in Frederick, Maryland, and, according to his letter, we are going to hear some good things from him in the near future.

By all means, Decker, we want to hear everything of your activities that will be of value to the boys and that we can pass on. We're glad you liked our article on the "House Manager," and we're going to take you up on that promise to write us a few articles, since you have formerly written for David Barrist when he published "Brevity."

Don't forget to send us a photo of yourself when you write us again in order that we can let the boys see what you look like. Oak? And from the way your fellow members down South are continually pepping up these pages with their activities, we've got an idea that you'll be stepping right along with the leaders.

H. E. Wilton Offers Some Good "Dope" To Brother Mgrs.

The distinguished looking gentleman whose picture we are reproducing below is none other than H. E. Wilton, one of Jack Allan's well-known "gang."

Wilton is the manager of the Strand Theatre in Hamilton, Ont., and we'd like to disclose at this time that the photograph was taken when Wilton ran for re-election as Representative of the City Council at Hamilton.

We want to take this opportunity to describe Wilton's idea for securing a larger mailing list.

His program is printed in the form of a neat looking four page cardboard booklet and carries the entire month's attractions, with the front page devoted to the theatre's name, a plug on the sound, telephone number and manager's name. The two inner pages carry the month's attractions, while the last page, which Wilton is using to secure more mailing list names, carries copy reading:

> FREE PASSES
> Pass good for two weeks will be given to the person returning this program with the greatest number of signatures and addresses of friends on space below. Cards must not be returned until March 1st. Leave them at box office, with your name and address on front page.

A space of two-thirds of the back page is then left blank for the signatures.

This is an excellent gag for securing a mailing list and we are glad of the opportunity to pass it on in case any of the boys are wondering how to procure one, thought we would advise the awarding of more than pass in order to insure good-will, because a good many of the cards will probably be returned crammed with names.

The folded program measures 3¼ by 4½ inches. And if any of you boys want one we're sure that if you write to Wilton he'll be glad to send a sample to you.

Another stunt engineered by Wilton which has excellent exploitation possibilities was the distributing of cards showing on one side the motor distances from the Strand Theatre and on the other side a sales talk on the house's sound which is cleverly worded into the name Strand.

So you see, boys, that our fellow members in Canada sure keep stepping.

We're happy to be able to pass on a couple of your activities to the rest of the boys, Wilton, and we want to hear from you again in the near future.

Music Talent Aided Ed. Harrison on This Great Plug

Eddie Harrison effected an excellent tie-up with a piano store to give "Applause," playing at the Broadway Theatre, Springfield, Mass., a lot of publicity.

The Piano store, one of the best located in the city, had a grand piano in their window which was on sale. So Harrison brought over the theatre's "mike" and had it hooked up to a radio in front of the store.

Harrison, who is not only a good business man, is also a talented musician—playing the piano and having a remarkably good voice. The manager then got busy and played the piano in the window and sang an occasional song. Between numbers he would announce, "The Wheelock grand piano is bound to win your applause and, speaking of APPLAUSE, it's the feature attraction now showing at your Broadway Theatre," etc.

Harrison also imparted to his listeners the names of the cast and other salient points about the picture as well as selling his second feature, too.

The window stunt proved very effective as was evidenced from the large throng in front of the window.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Dave Lustig Put Over "Blue Ribbon" Month Successfully

Dave Lustig, that peppy publicity director for the Manhattan Playhouses Outfit, has laid out a campaign for "Blue Ribbon Month" that looks like a winner, but in order not to pass a definite opinion we decided to reprint the most salient features of his campaign and pass them on for your O. K.

Dave proposes to use Special Banners and streamers, announcing the "Blue Ribbon Month" and has adopted as his trademark a nifty little arrangement of a Blue Ribbon which we are reprinting below.

All of his advertising will carry the "Blue Ribbon" insignia.

Special one-sheet and window cards will be distributed to the local dealers, together with throw-aways, dodgers and teasers. The theatres will distribute proclamations a few days before and also a few days after the month has started.

Lustig has arranged tie-up with various merchants who will lend their windows for displays of the theatre's "Blue Ribbon Features."

Three-sheet special cut-outs are to be distributed to the various houses and a special trailer will carry announcement of attractions scheduled for the month.

Buttons and ribbons will be supplied for the personnel of the houses, while one hundred thousand pins will be alloted each house for distribution.

These are only a few of Lustig's ideas for Blue Ribbon Month, but as space will not permit us publishing the whole campaign here, we know that we can count on Dave to keep us up on how the "Big Burg" houses progress with "Blue Ribbon Month," and which we'll reprint from time to time during the campaign, and when a manager puts over a swell idea as he is encouraged to do in Dave's campaign letter, you can bet he'll receive plenty of credit for it. Right, Dave?

These Teaser Ads Were Great for Mgr. J. W. Creamer

Here is a series of five teaser ads used by J. W. Creamer of the Palace Theatre, Muscatine, Iowa, to create and build up interest in the Pickford-Fairbanks picture "Taming of the Shrew."

We have passed on many interesting angles from this unusually fine showman and unquestionably these suggestions will mean a whole lot to you other fellows who are constantly on the look-out for new angles and ideas to exploit your picture and your theatre.

Creamer tells us that in many of the towns surrounding Muscatine, these two particular stars never meant much to the box office, which was rather surprising, as we thought Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks had a more than national reputation even out in the sticks. But, since he knows his local situation far better than we do, we would rather be guided by what he says than by our own guesswork. At any rate, it was for this reason that he started a week in advance with these teaser ads.

One of the features of this type of stuff was that he spelt the stars names backward, as you will note from the ad, which immediately created a certain amount of interest in the picture that ordinarily might go by unnoticed. Here's a good gag fellows, not new, but worth trying at any rate.

In addition to the above he sent a personal letter to every one of the 200 school teachers. He reports a return of 100% on this angle, which consisted of explaining to them something about the "Taming of the Shrew" and its connection with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford in their first all talking-all laughing motion picture in which they are both starred together.

We want to congratulate "J. W." on the fine piece of work he accomplished on this particular attraction and we would like to hear some more about what he is doing out there in Muscatine for the Fox West Coast outfit, a circuit where we number hundreds of members and friends.

"GOING STRONG?"

From time to time we have concerned ourselves with the problems confronting the house manager. We have championed his cause, endeavoring to defend him against unjust executives and their unfair rulings. We have continually advocated a square deal for the house manager, proclaimed his virtues and insisted that he be allowed to use the gifts which God has given him. Many executives have acted upon our suggestions and consequently have allowed the house managers a free reign, with the subsequent result that the man who was supposed to be just a figurehead has forged to the front and produced results which more than justified the experiment. We are proud of these men. And we're proud too, of these executives who were willing to "take a chance" and who, when their men came through, admitted their errors and handsomely rewarded the conscientous and faithful house manager by promotions and financial remunerations. So much for that.

The point which we are striving to drive home in this article concerns not those men who have made good and are continuing to make good, but to those men, who urged on by constant prodding, stepped out and produced results, thus gaining their higher ups' confidence in their ability, but then, after gaining this faith, instead of holding it inviolate proceeded to "lay down on the job." Which after all is human nature.

But that type of human nature has no place whatsoever in the world of amusement. The theatre demands the best that is in you and it must continue being given that. If you must "lay down on the job" get out of the theatre game. There is no place in it for sluggards nor men without backbone. You are confronted with the greatest task in the world when you set out to please the public. And when you succeed your entire being tingles with the joy of work well done.

The real showman never tastes the fruit of disappointment for long. When things look black he smiles and, keeping a stiff upper lip, proceeds to pilot the good bark "Showmanship" through the trouble-tossed waters of "bum breaks," emerging safely into the calm waters of "good box office."

His was not an easy task, piloting the craft over "bum breaks" but his years of conscientious, painstaking labor served him in good stead and fortified by faith in his ability he came through unscathed.

Are you able to analyze yourself and find a showman? Or are you one of those poor unfortunates who shiver with misapprehension whenever a problem unfolds itself that will call for a little more SHOWMANSHIP and consider yourself unequal to the task? Then perhaps you belong to that other coterie of misguided fools who having luckily "gotten by" once, believe yourselves immovable and indispensable, and proceed to sit back and rest on what has gone before. IT CAN'T BE DONE.

If you are a real showman and deserving of that honorable title you will ALWAYS BE GOING STRONG. You will possess the confidence of your superiors and you will always strive to keep that confidence that they have in you. When things go wrong you'll smile and look for the silver lining and if you don't see it you'll go out and get it. And after having captured it and its silvery beams are being reflected in your box office in the form of greenbacks, you won't take up your stand on a pedstal and shout, "I did it, I did it!" but you'll view your handiwork and brainwork with a luxurious sense of duties well performed and then proceed to lay plans for continuing the good work, so that when the recognition which you worked so hard for is finally awarded to you, and the men higher up ask you what you are going to do on your new and important position you can smile and say, "I'm going to continue to keep on GOING STRONG."

Chet Miller is Attracting Attention With Fine Work

We've been so swamped with work of late that some way or other we mislaid a letter from Chet Miller manager of the Rialto and America and America Theatres for the Fox West Coast outfit in Sterling, Colo., and neglected to give Chet the credit he so richly deserves for his work out there.

But here goes, Chet, we're going to try and make up for it now by letting the boys know just what you are doing out in the West.

We're first going to describe Chet's new house organ, "The Movie Fan," which, as you will notice from the reproduction, is a nifty little arrangement and carries the programs for both the Rialto and America. This house organ probably pays for itself as a couple of local dealers carry ads on its pages.

We want to call your attention to a little stunt Chet has devised to make sure that his programs serve the purpose he intends them for, namely, to sell his shows.

On various pages in the program he has inserted the names of locals in a paragraph which reads: "Gus Hellbush—Present this program at the box office. It entitles you to two free tickets to the picture you select in this program."

This stunt excited a lot of comment and you can bet that Chet got rid of a lot of his programs on the first day they came out. This is a great idea to keep your patron interest in the programs "pepped up," and we don't hesitate a minute in saying that if you want to liven up interest in your house organ try Chet's slant on it and it's a dead certainty that your h. o. will circulate far, wide and freely.

We notice that the Rialto Theatre features nothing but revival programs, and since it has been adhering to that policy for some time now, the plan must be very successful. And while on the subject of "revival," we might state at this time that if you are located in a community where you get to know your patrons' likes and perhaps dislikes of certain stars and their vehicles, a "revival" of a popular picture of yesterday, if properly "plugged," is liable to surprise you with its box office results. We know of a couple of instances where a judiciously selected "revival" has come through and plumb busted the house record. It would pay you to look into this "revival" proposition.

Now a word as to that herald we're reproducing. You'll probably notice that it's advertising the New Year's Eve show (Yes, we know we're way late in passing it on. See first paragraph) and also, with a great deal of mystery, informs you that "Tom and Jerry" are to be given away free. Well this gag had them talking from early morning to late at night. The whole town wondered who "Tom and Jerry" were, with no one able to solve the mystery. But at the midnight show the mysterious "Tom and Jerry" stood revealed as two nice fat TURKEYS, gobbles and all. The town laughed for a couple of days over this gag, and we want to say that Chet certainly put it over in masterly fashion. (You'll pardon our conceit, please, but we've an idea that Chet decided to end his herald with a catch line which, as you will notice, sounds strangely like "All for One and One for All" in order to get a "rise" out of us.—How about it, Chet?)

The point that we want to stress now is that it isn't necessary to wait until a holiday rolls around to pull a "Tom and Jerry" gag, because this laugh getter is a "natural" for any day in the week, and if business is not so hot for you and a little more dough in the box office would look good, call upon "Tom and Jerry" to help you out of your difficulty.

And now to get to Chet's newspaper advertising. We've been stressing from then to now and back again, the importance of making up copy that will attract the readers' attention and sell them. We're reproducing a sample of Chet's advertising here, not because it is a masterpiece, but because it attracts and sells.

It is a neatly made up ad and, though it may seem so on the cut, it is not a "crowded" ad. When you figure out that he is advertising two theatres with totally different policies, you'll realize the importance of the make-up. A novel touch is added to the layout by two large "IT's," which Chet has worked into an interesting teaser that you will have to follow up. He enumerates on the various highlights of the picture in the first "IT," which finishes, "It has in fact everything which will make you love it," and then works into the second a smaller "IT," which precedes the play dates of the picture. The finished copy reading, "It starts Sunday." This plan would sell in any ad.

The ad, as you will note, is headed Fox Theatre News, with another headline underneath sub-billing it as "It's good news too!"

We want to comment, too, on the co-operation which Chet has secured from the local paper whereby a whole page is devoted weekly to the activities of the Sterling Theatres and carries scenes and stories on the coming attractions.

There you are, Chet, we're glad of the opportunity to pass something on which the rest of the CLUB may find useful, if not in whole, then in part and we want you to know that we'd like to hear more of your activities out there at the Rialto and America, so shoot us in some more stuff in order that we can keep tabs on you and your work.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Kiddie Angle Worked Out Great for Revolt in Adrian

Here's a "gag" from John J. (Jack) Revolt, Jr., assistant manager of the Family Theatre in Adrian, Mich., which we think has the makings of a "good thing."

In his daily newspaper advertisements Jack carried a caption at the bottom of the regular ad plugging the feature, which read, "Be Our Guest Tonight," and underneath that inserted a box carrying the name of a resident of Adrian. The resident would then go to the theatre and be admitted free. Jack acted a host, greeting him at the door, a stunt which aided him in more ways than one, for as he hasn't been connected with the theatre long enough to know the patrons' names, this stunt enabled him to meet them face to face. From the start the "guest angle" met with success, with the town eagerly awaiting the publishing of the ad in an effort to see who would be the lucky person, and with this happening every day in the week you can bet that interest in the Family's program was sustained.

And we want to wax eloquent for a few minutes on Jack's ads in general and also his clever follow-up on the "guest" gag.

As you will notice from the cut of the advertisement, which we are reproducing below, in the upper right-hand corner of one ad you will perceive that Jack has laid out a little box which contains the comment on the show offered by the previous night's "guest." This little stunt was instrumental in creating interest and causing comment.

We'd like you to note also the general lay-out of the ads, and we want to go on record right now as saying that they are pretty darn good for a man working under, what we surmise to be, limited conditions.

We are glad to be able to hand Jack a few words of praise on this one and we want him to know that while the idea is not exactly new it is nevertheless a great stunt for business and we unhesitatingly recommend it to any of the boys to use for a little variety.

Jack also promoted a "Get Together Club," which resulted in increased box office biz. for the Saturday matinees. Each child joining the Get-Together Club was given a card entitling him to receive all the benefits of the Club and read:

A RESOLUTION RELATING TO THE PRESENTATION OF MEMBERSHIP CARDS

Whereas,* This club will be occasionally imposed upon by non-members claiming to be members of this club; therefore, be it

Resolved,* That every member is requested upon entering theatre to present this card to the doorman, in order that members may be give nproper attendance credit.

RULES

1. Upon leaving theatre after performances, cross the street, if you have to, at street intersections and not in the middle of the block.
2. Remain in your seat, and be absolutely silent during the presentation of talking pictures.
3. Report all members whose birthday will occur in the coming week.
4. Report all members that are ill.

Our Golden Rule: "Don't miss a single Saturday."

So you see, fellows, Jack certainly has the right angle on how to build up his Saturday matinee biz. We've put the set of rules that he carried on the card in bold type to show you the clever way he has devised to secure silence, good will and business, by sort of letting the mothers know that he is looking out for the children's safety as rule one implies.

The front of his card carried blank space for the name and address of the child, also a space for birth date. The card was made up in black and white and measured four by two and one-half.

This is the type of peppy showmanship that will make a success of any house and we're glad to note that Jack has come through with an idea which will boost up your Saturday receipts considerably.

Thanks, Jack, for the nice letter you sent us and we want you to know that we expect some more good things from you and before long we expect to see you signing yourself Manager, for if you continue with the kind of work you are now doing it's just be a matter of time before you attain that distinction.

Good Head Work!

In the majority of cases, members of our club write, sending in suggestions, exploitation stunts, and anything they did in regard to the operation of the theatres under their command.

Below, I give an instance of what a fellow member did in a town in Canada not ten days ago. I don't mention any name for the simple reason that I think this manager showed that he was right on the job when the incident occurred, so much that it never even came out in the newspapers.

His matinee had begun, he had approximately 400 people in the audience. He happened to be back stage on some errand, and coming up the centre aisle of his theatre he smelled smoke and noticed that there was a smouldering between the flooring and the cement foundation.

Instead of turning on his house lights and probably creating a commotion, he phoned the booth immediately and told them to shut off the picture. In the semi-darkness he went on the stage and announced to his patrons that the power had been shut off and would not be repaired until the evening performance, of course, announcing that pass out checks would be given or money refunded.

Immediately he had the theatre cleared, he looked over the situation and found that faulty wiring had created a fire between the flooring which would have created a lot of damage if he had not caught it in time.

And then again were his patrons to have known of this, it would have meant that they would be just a little leery of coming to the theatre for a short while, in the face of the many accidents which have taken place in theatres in the past three months.

This manager showed a lot of tact and common sense in the way he handled this situation, and when I heard of this, I immediately phoned him long distance and commended him on his action. I really think articles of this kind should be published in our section to show, not only the managers, but other people who take an interest in our Club that the boys are always on the job, whether it is exploiting a picture or looking after the safety of the public.

JACK ALLAN,
Reg Chairman,
Canada.

(Editor's Note:—Thanks a lot Jack for passing this one along. It's just what we want and furthermore we are going to run a special story touching on the same subject in an early issue.)

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"GETTIN' BETTER"

To Tom Olsen, live-wire publicity and exploitation director of the upstate division of the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, and his assistant Agnes Degni, goes a lot of credit for the way they have been constantly improving on their weekly news letter called "From The Firing Line."

This is the type of stuff that peps up the organization besides passing along interesting information for the benefit of all the different managers and employees on the outfit. A whole lot of other circuits would do well to follow the example of Tom Olsen in turning out peppy intimate news letters of this type rather than stuff which contains a lot of applesauce and instructions of what they should "not" be doing all the time. Managers who are able to accomplish things and are encouraged to do things, generally produce more results on circuits than those who are constantly being told "not" to do things.

Congratulations, Tom, and here's hoping "From The Firing Line" continues to get better each week although we don't know how that's possible because it is pretty darn near perfect now.

"CHICK"

"Billy" Stillman Has Had a Colorful Background

Wm. A. Stillman is the manager of the Central Theatre in Newark, N. J., for the Stanley Fabian Corporation, and according to his first letter we are going to hear a lot of good things from him. For how else can a man who has had such varied experience help sending us interesting material.

Before breaking into the show game Stillman acted in the capacity of right hand man to the late Tex Rickard and was instrumental in promoting the success of the last Tunney and Dempsey fight in Chicago, having had charge of the entire personnel at Soldiers Field. And when you stop to consider that 7500 men were working for him the night of the big fight you can see that he had no soft snap. With all that worry on his brow he stepped into more. Not serious, of course—just a visit from two mysterious strangers who demanded to know why Stillman hadn't mentioned them to the newspaper boys, and who were set on giving him what he quotes in his letter, "the works," but then his showman traits came to the fore and he appeased the boys with a couple of "Oakleys."

We are glad to note Stillman, that you are making a success of your venture into the show racket as your sellout on New Year's Eve attests. We think the idea of a personal endorsement of the picture by you from the stage is a good idea—if not used too often.

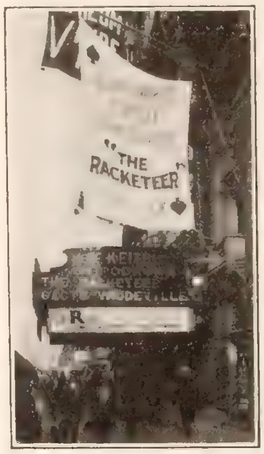
We are glad to welcome you into the CLUB, Mr. Stillman, and we're sure that a man with your varied experience will more than supply us with plenty of stuff concerning your activities at the Central, and here's wishing you the best of luck.

P. S.—Stillman has just had us on the phone and tells us that he has been transferred to the Central at Jersey City, which seems to us to be a darn fine promotion, for the Central is noted for its policy of sound and talking pictures and Fanchon and Marco stage shows. Congratulations, Stillman. We're betting on you. Step on it and show them what you can do with an "ace" house.

A "Banner Gag" With Some Novel Angles for You

Here's a stunt which, due to the originality of its makeup we thought we'd pass on as it might be valuable to some of you boys, if you want to get away from the regular run of "straight" banner ballyhoo.

In the picture we are reproducing below you will notice that a New York house was playing "The Racketeer," and instead of the usual banner, a touch of originality was added by the banner being made up in the form of a playing card.



The banner gag is gradually being played out, boys, and if you want to keep it alive it's up to yourselves. New York has given you one idea, now let's show the Big Burg what you can do when it comes to originality. The "playing card" banner arouses a good deal of comment and was pretty effective as an attention arrester. The house flying it got a break because there's an "L" line running overhead, outside the theatre, so you can see that they drew from above as well as below. And as this house happens to be one of a chain it's a safe bet to predict that all their local houses will be flying the same kind of banner. Bringing it all down to brass tacks it means just one thing—that little stunt will bring in a little more dough to the box office, which, after all, is what we're all trying to do.

This is a new and different touch on the banner idea and it might be well if you're tired of using the straight banner to try this type. We don't know whether the originator of the idea had an ulterior motive when he used copy, "New York's Timely Sensation." Wonder what type of copy he'd use for Chicago.

Lou Smith Is Still Stepping Fast And Selling His Shows

Lou Smith, manager of the Ambassador Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., used a brand of showmanship that we would expect a Round Table Club member to use. Lou's house is located in the heart of the Jewish sector in Brooklyn, so when "Hearts in Exile" was booked into Smith's house he took advantage of the "Russian locale" of the picture by making up a unique herald, printed in Jewish and English. And as many of the residents are regular readers of the Jewish publication, this angle pleased them a lot and resulted in added business for the box office. This is just another example of the way real showmen are quick to adapt themselves to prevailing conditions. Lou also arranged a pip of a lobby display for Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs," by concealing a horn behind a large beaver board cutout on the style of a twenty-four sheet which showed Jolson on his knees before Davy Lee, who is lying in bed ill with a dynamic speaker hook-up supplying the pathos that Jolson is endeavoring to convey. This was a very effective medium of attracting attention and was instrumental in selling the picture completely.

The cost of the display was very small, the loud speaker and orthophonic victrola being furnished by the local music store, in return for free advertising. In addition to his lobby display, Lou exploited the song hits in the leading music stores. And he also writes in to tell us that if any of the boys decide to use the display he will be glad to furnish any information necessary. Which is something we like to hear.

Lou has been doing some excellent exploitation work at the Ambassador and we know that his showmanship has done much to insure the success of the theatre. Keep up the good work, Lou. And the next time you let us hear from you don't forget to include some photographs of your tie-ups.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Borenstein's Gag Brought Business With Some Nov-

We were surprised to note that exploitation took on a new lease of life at the Rialto Theatre in New York City in the form of a key throw-away whereby a dozen or more merchants were tied in to give away presents in connection with the tie-up.

The following story proves that this idea was not restricted to New York City or any one particular theatre, so we are very grateful to Joe Borenstein for passing on the dope as to how he handled this attraction with the many other outstanding features besides the paper keys which helped plug the picture. Here goes the story.

Borenstein bursts forth with a novel lobby stunt he used in connection with advertising "The Locked Door" at the Imperial Theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., that was instrumental in selling a lot of extra tickets.

In the lobby was rigged up a small compartment with a real door that was locked. And behind this door was a loud speaker that could be heard a block away.

A special record was made which emitted from the loud speaker, "(Two blanks were fired—a woman screamed and then excitedly spoke as follows: Help! Help! Let me out—someone open this door). I am locked in with a dying man who was shot by my husband. (From here her voice modulated)—If you have a key to open this door you will be rewarded with a pair of tickets to see and hear this all-talking romantic drama LOCKED DOOR at this theatre for the entire week of January 3rd. Hear what happens when Rod LaRocque tries to compromise me because I tried to save my sister-in-law, Betty Bronson from a disgraceful affair. There are plenty of surprises in this intricate plot. My husband is played by William Boyd. Zasu Pitts contributes much comedy. This is Barbara Stanwyck speaking—Don't miss the LOCKED DOOR."

500 keys with tags attached bearing copy about the picture, theatre, play dates and lobby stunt were effectively distributed to clerks in department stores, drug stores and other public places. A few of the keys were made to fit the door while the others were just part of a plan to stimulate interest in the stunt and incidentally for the picture itself.

The lobby stunt stopped everyone in their tracks; they came across the street to find out what the screaming was about. And in fact, this particular stunt created more word-of-mouth advertising than any other stunt used for a long time.

Inexpensive But Effective—Says Russell M. Lamb

City Manager Russell M. Lamb of Streator, Ill., recently employed a most effective and economical stunt to inform rural patrons of THE TRESPASSER showings at the Plumb theatre.

An arrangement was made with chief operators in all telephone exchanges in the small towns surrounding Streator for a general alarm ring—the operator ringing all the subscribers on the line at once, and making an announcement about the picture, theatre and play dates.

Because of the fact that telephone exchanges in the smaller towns use this general alarm chiefly for announcements of important national news events, such as declarations of war, Armistice signings, fires, etc., much attention is given by subscribers to the alarm ring. For a cost varying from free passes to a dollar for each exchange, Manager Lamb was enabled to directly contact rural people of eighteen surrounding towns for a very small cost and in a highly effective manner.

This was great stuff on Mr. Lamb's part and encourages us, because we feel that he will become a more steady contributor of his activities to the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages. What about it, Russ, you know the boys look to men like yourself for exploitation and if you put something over successfully, why not let the rest of the world know what it's all about? Don't forget, we are still waiting for one of your own photographs.

We'd like to hear more of the other houses under your supervision and if any of the boys have any account of their activities which they think would merit recording in the CLUB pages why send 'em in and, we'll do the rest.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

STILL MORE MEMBERS!

CHET MILLER, undoubtedly a very busy manager, what with handling two houses, the Rialto and the America for the Fox outfit out in Sterling, Colorado, but we've got a hunch that Chet is going to find time to keep us up on his activities at both houses and that we're going to hear some mighty interesting bits of information. How about it, Chet? And listen: dig up a photo of yourself and send it in so that we can publish it, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DWAYNE J. ABARR manages the Empress Theatre in Kearney, Nebraska, and we look forward with interest to hear from him concerning his doings out there at the Empress. We're extending you a hearty welcome into the Club, Dwayne, and we know that the rest of the boys are right behind us. Send us in a photo of yourself and we'll put it in so the rest of the boys can look at another of the West's showmen.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

L. P. HENSLEY is manager of the Capitol Theatre in Oakland, California, and according to L. P.'s letter we are going to hear some great things of him. He tells us he's proud to be a member of the Club and we want you to know, "L. P.," that we're just as proud to have you. Let's hear a lot about your activities on the Coast, and so that we can let the rest of the Club meet you "face to face," send us in a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

RODERICK ERNEST DEGENER manages the Golden State Theatre in Oakland, California. We're glad to welcome you into the Club, Roderick, and we want you to know that we expect to hear some mighty nice things concerning your activities at the Golden State. And why not sit right down and send us a photo of yourself so that we can publish it?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

I. M. RAPPAPORT is the manager of the Collingswood Theatre in Collingswood, N. Y., operated by the Handle & Rovner Circuit, and according to Samuel Low we can expect some good things from "I. M." How about it "J. M." We're waiting to hear from you concerning your activities over there on the Jersey shore. And when you write again include a photo of yourself, will you?

NORMAN LEWIS is the manager of the LeVoy Theatre in Millville, N. J., and from all accounts we've got an idea that we are going to hear a great deal of Norman's doings at the LeVoy. And if Samuel Low of the Handle & Rovner houses is any judge, we sure will, huh, Norman? Let's hear from you real soon and don't forget to slip us a photo of yourself so that we can publish it in the Club pages.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

NICK TORELLI manages the Clementon Theatre in Clementon, N. J., for the Handle & Rovner Circuit. We're glad to enroll you on the Club's roster, Nick. And we hope that you'll keep us well supplied with material concerning your activities at the Clementon. Send us in a photo of yourself, too, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

AL. V. BOTHNER is manager of the Happy Hour Theatre in Schenectady, New York. We're glad to note that you're interested in us, Al., and we want to hear a lot of your doings up there in Schenectady, because we know that you up-state showmen can send us in some mighty interesting stuff. How about it? And when you send us material concerning your doings at the Happy Hour, don't forget to include a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

IRVING DASHKIN is manager of the Boston Road Theatre on Boston Road and Stebbins Avenue in New York. Glad to meet you, Irving, and we know that we can list you under the title of "active showman," because our gazing crystal tells us that you're going to do a lot of peppy things at the Boston Road. If you'll send us your photo we'll be glad to publish it and you might also send us a letter telling us of your past experiences.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

VINCENT M. TATE is manager of the Roosevelt Theatre in Swoyerville, Pa. We're glad to welcome you into the Club, Vincent. Let's hear a lot of your activities in Swoyerville, because nothing gives us greater pleasure than to pass on a bunch of good ideas to the rest of the Club members. We'd like to have a photo of yourself so that we can run a regular story with it. Shoot us in one with the next mail, Vincent, and you might also give us a letter telling all about yourself.

NEW MEMBERS!

Please be patient if your application was sent in and your name has not been published as a new member.

The increase in membership during the past few months has been so great that we are behind in the announcing of these new members.

More names will be published hereafter in an attempt to catch up with the newcomers.

Thank you.

M. R. T. C.

Measuring by Magic

Scene on lathe floor in the new Bell & Howell Engineering Development Laboratories where tomorrow's ideas and designs in motion picture equipment are created and executed.

There are measurements in Bell & Howell cinemachinery so infinitesimal that no micrometer or other mechanical measuring device can readily define them. These measurements are made by optical projection, which, through great magnification, reproduces on a screen, in proportions visible to the eye, the spaces to be measured.

It may be asked by many: What is the need for this precision? But the distributing exchange, the exhibitor and the man in the projection booth immediately comprehend. For the precision of the Bell & Howell Film Perforator, or Splicer, or Printer through which the film passes on its way to the theater comes home at last to the projection booth—perfect screening.

While these machines have played a hero's part in the standardization of the film industry, it is their day-by-day service in behalf of the best final projection which bespeaks their accuracy and their dependability.

BENEFIT OF COLOR
without
PENALTY OF COST

COLOR is the order of the day. Sonochrome brings it without the penalty of added cost. Sixteen delicate tints and a warm neutral tone are available at the same price as ordinary black-and-white. This, plus the fact that it gives really faithful sound-on-film, accounts for the success of this series of Eastman tinted positive films.

THE VOICE of the press hails
THE VOICE of the screen

When Tibbett's voice swells from the screen, one forgets that the singer himself is not on the stage. Never before have a singer's efforts on the screen been applauded so genuinely. To be able to listen to Mr. Tibbett sing is ample reward for sitting in one's seat. —HALL, Times

Musical romance such as it never has been presented upon the screen was brought to the Astor Theatre last night by Lawrence Tibbett. Thus the talking screen may be said to have achieved its real expression for the first time. The Rogue Song may be put down unequivocally as one of the great achievements of the cinema. The thought occurred as we filed out of the Astor last night that we had just witnessed a revolution of sorts. The picture has everything in it which human ingenuity could give to it. Get ready to make a trip to the Astor. —GERHARD, Eve. World

While the Astor Theatre rocked with the continued applause of an enthusiastic audience, the superb voice and tremendous personality of Lawrence Tibbett reached the singing screen. There is not the slightest doubt that the Metropolitan star is the greatest factor brought to motion pictures since the advent of sound. A superb production, most creditable to the entire industry and a fine bright feather in the cap of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Many an audience will echo the applause of that attending last night's premiere. —CREWE, American

"Easily the best of the operettas. In many ways Tibbett is remarkable. In his acting, in his songs, he is superb and his rich baritone is stunningly recorded." —COHEN, Sun

An expert pioneer step in the exploration of the new cinema's potentialities. Finest voice it has yet captured. —WATTS, Herald Tribune

"The advance reports in regard to The Rogue Song were entirely justified. The new offering easily becomes one of the pictures that must be seen." —BOEHNEL, Telegram

Magnificent. The most pretentious of the musical movies. The Rogue Song is new, different, immense. —JOHANESON, Mirror

"I do not recall having heard music of so exquisite a quality in the sound films. Mr. Tibbett may be informed in all good faith that among all those who think they can sing for the movies he is supreme. Hollywood has nothing quite to equal him. Lawrence Tibbett is a brilliant success in the films. —MARTIN, World

"The most thrilling vocal performance the audible screen has yet exhibited. His gorgeous baritone voice gave the talkies a new meaning. The ultimate in sound pictures. His music is gorgeous and the star a most fortunate acquisition for the films. He sings to breathless hearers. —SHAWELL, Graphic

"Lawrence Tibbett scores as star of 'The Rogue Song.'" The magnificent baritone became a motion picture figure whose vivid, charming personality is enhanced by the most remarkable vocal tones the singing cinema has known to date. A truly splendid voice—which last night rang out to a really wildly enthusiastic audience. —THIRER, News

"An event in motion picture history. No premiere since the first of the audible screen made such an impression. Magnificent entertainment. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have scored a notable achievement. Definitely establishes Tibbett as a new and vivid screen type. He is a screen sensation. —PELSWICK, Journal

PARAMOUNT

"The Vagabond King"

"Resounding, opulent and handsomely designed. The Technicolor is in every way admirable. Extraordinary effects. Dennis King has a voice of strength and color."
—New York World

"Tasteful, good looking and sprightly. Good entertainment. Lively and effective throughout."
—New York Herald Tribune

"Gloriously photographed in Technicolor. Dennis King's baritone is entrancing. Jeanette MacDonald's soprano is charming. The songs are the kind you sing over and over. A big, lavish production which ought to call fans to the Criterion for months to come."

DEATH TO THE STAR CHAMBER

THIS industry, modern and often too sophisticated in that which it sells the public via its screens, continues to adhere to the old-fashioned idea of secret diplomacy.

Star chamber proceedings have been unfashionable for some years now, yet true to the spirit of some tradition, the bulwark of which we have never been able to discover, this business sticks religiously to what is now an antiquated custom.

Over in London, for instance, the new order of open covenants, openly arrived at, is one of the big features of the naval disarmament conference. The newspaper men of the world, several hundred strong, don't have to guess what's going on. They are told daily as the conference proceeds.

Policies Plotted by the Few

World powers are reckoning with public opinion, a factor usually difficult to crystallize into definite form. But they are making the attempt. This business knows its branches and what should be done for their good. Yet, a handful of individuals meeting in committee, or otherwise, take it upon themselves to mould what purports to be an industry policy, overlooking the vast, inarticulate and unexpressed will of the unorganized exhibitor.

When the uniform contract meeting was held in Chicago many months ago, the deliberations were held behind doors that were all but barricaded. Considerable of what transpired there seeped through for exhibitor consumption, not through any effort of those who were in the star chamber conference but through the ingenuity of the industry's trade press.

Only recently the 5-5-5 conference was held in New York. Again secrecy and locked lips. No chance for the exhibitor to learn what was planned for him. No chance for him to comment on what was proposed. Maybe he had an idea, a good idea, but what of it?

It is not unlikely now that these very meetings will be resumed. Distributors know what they want. So do producers. They are organized. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America represent something or other. It's hard to be certain what. Allied has a considerable number of state exhibitor units in its roster. Their standard waves for far more actual exhibitors than the M. P. T. O. A. But neither represents all.

It seems to us that in this particular conference, and in all others that have a bearing on the future relationship between buyer and seller, the doors should be thrown so wide open that the hinges creak. No one group, regardless of its mental make-up, can set itself up as a court of last resort. Remember there is no corner in constructive thought. Plans can be and are evolved from many quarters. Impracticable they may be, but at least they are entitled to a hearing.

Those "Don'ts"—Why Not?

The swing toward violations in good taste which grows increasingly marked in talkers has been discussed by the producers' association in Hollywood. There, it seems, the matter has rested. Will H. Hays, whose job it is to preserve the fair name of the industry in the eyes of the public, has been working on a list of "Don'ts." Producers scan it, hold a meeting and return to their problems at the studio.

Why? This writer can imagine no more important or pressing problem. Whether they like it or not, some action will have to be taken—and soon—by the responsible factors of the business. The laxity in good taste at the studios is reflecting itself in the bad taste displayed in newspaper copy. Combined, the situation is serious. No delay should be brooked in cleaning it up.

Percentages Must Be Fair

Talkers and the tendency toward extended runs, plus the faith of most distributors—and a goodly number of exhibitors—in the system are hurrying along the more widespread use of percentage. Most deals are made that way today, and more are on the way. Sensible, too, always provided the basis of the contract is fair. Frequently, however, many distributors lose no opportunity to rub it in and exhibitors aren't far behind. Fundamentally, percentage is the answer, for through it the klucks die and the wows wow. And that is as it should be.

The system is destined to be kingpin, no doubt. Whether benevolent or despotic depends entirely on the attitude of the participating parties. We hope for the best, but aren't too sanguine.

KANN

An Insider's Outlook

TELEPHONE bills mounting. Much conversation over the wire and under the wire. Plenty going on and a lot of it is about advertising—the wrong kind.

The St. Louis mess, for instance, a black mark for "The Love Parade" and Publix and inexcusable from every angle. It didn't take long for the Hays office to learn what was up.

That's where the telephoning orgy enters their history. Of course, over on Fifth Avenue, lithos and newspaper ads prepared for press books have been under scrutiny for some time but it took the Anheuser Busch city to jack up the whole procedure.

Fixing the blame for this particular exhibition of bad taste is like traveling in circles. Maybe we're wrong, but we don't think we are when we fasten the onus on a young man named Charles Skouras, brother of Spyros and George and long enough in show business to know better.

Now Censors Threaten

Now the new development out St. Louis way is the introduction of a municipal censorship measure. Indications are the bill kicks back to the Skouras copy. Denied, of course, but the dual events come too closely together to be more than coincidental.

Late yesterday word was flashed that the "St. Louis Star" which lambasted the original copy to so-and-so and back again is editorially opposing the Wimer censor measure, taking the stand that both stage and screen rate another chance to blot out advertising. The paper suggests that the bill now hanging over the heads of the amusement business in that city might well be construed as a warning of what impends if the leopard fails to change his spots.

The Scene Shifts

Number two of what threatens to be a lengthy list shifts the action to Chicago. There, it seems, Balaban and Katz have been throwing dollars all over the town to advertise attractions at their houses. "When big pictures come to Chicago—you see them at our theatres first" screams one message in heavy Gothic display.

R-K-O took on a big peeve and, in the course of time, conceived the brilliant idea of misrepresenting "The Grand Parade" as "The Love Parade." A reproduction of one of those choice pieces of copy is published elsewhere in this edition and conveys better than any word picture exactly how wrong Jack Hess and his Chicago R-K-O publicity department could be.

The March to the Sea

From Chicago they came. And Kansas City. From Detroit, Buffalo, Rochester, too. Not to forget Philadelphia and Boston. Thirty-five, or thereabouts, strong—the voices of critical America swept down on New York—at Paramount's invitation and expense—to party in the big city.

They had nice quarters at the Roosevelt. On Tuesday, a luncheon at that hotel. Then dinner and "Sweet Adeline." On Wednesday out to the Long Island studio for more food and a look at the sound stages to find out what was going on. And so on, until Wednesday night and the Club Vallee—expenses paid—to hear Rudy croon lullabies through his megaphone. Thursday, more something or other and home.

Lovely few days. Fine time, but there was a catch and, if you are looking for it, here it is:

Tuesday's and Wednesday's festivities were climaxed by the opening of "The Vagabond King" at the Criterion. Were the out-of-towners present? Don't be so naive. It isn't fashionable.

However, back to their native heath they have now gone, well-fed, full of divertissement and ready for their reviews. What they will say, of course, remains to be seen.

But Philadelphia was represented; Washington was not. Kansas City was. St. Louis was not. And so on.

You should have gotten the idea by now.

That incident, too, raised a near-mighty squawk in New York with the result that New York, via Joe Plunkett, told R-K-O in the Windy City not to do such naughty things. What we fail to get is why a crackerjack exploiteer like Hess has to be told.

Other Cities In Line

Then from Baltimore on "The Party Girl":

"'She's a broad-minded broad from Broadway—a daring game of love and business played on the heartbreak of road to din and gin—she's everybody's pal—a good-looking, fast-stepping, warm-hearted jazz baby with a ravishing smile, a Ziegfield fixture and a million dollars' worth of 'It'—she's The Party Girl—and she's hot stuff." Lovely for family trade!

When "Hot for Paris" played at the New in the same city, the copy included this line:

"Hot laughs! Hot Mamas! Hot Songs!"

The rest of the display showed a cut of Fifi Dorsay in an abbreviated costume in the act of taking off a stocking and getting over the idea rather definitely that she was turning in for the night. The idea was to make Fifi appear appealing. It succeeded.

A Mistaken Idea

Eugene Newton, a colored cabaret dancer and husband of a woman named Dolores Ford whose habitat appears to be Cincinnati, is reported harboring a plan to make a talker based on his marriage. His marital course, so it is said, has had a number of boulders thrown in its way. All of which seems destined for ultimate reproduction on the screen. This presumes to be the lowdown. What some friend should tell Newton is that, if such a scheme is in mind, he had better turn his attention to something more practical. The industry shouldn't stand for it and, moreover, won't. No hair-splitting about that.

Judge Thacher Moves

U. S. Judge Thacher is slated for the post of solicitor general, succeeding Charles Evans Hughes, Jr. That nomination will transfer from the Federal bench in New York the man whose name has become a byword in the industry since he handed down his now-famous decision banning compulsory arbitration.

That creates an interesting situation, since distributors are still debating whether appeal from the Thacher decree is to be taken. They still have a month in which to decide.

This is the second offer from President Hoover to Judge Thacher. Last year he was tendered the post of assistant attorney general, but was not inclined to leave the bench. Had he accepted that post, he would have taken over Col. "Wild Bill" Donovan's work, including various Dept. of Justice activities against the industry. By freak of circumstances, he just missed. And so he happened to be judge in the arbitration case when he might easily have been prosecutor.

Warners and First National Considering Withdrawal from the Hays Association?

Move Categorically Denied—Thacher Decision Which Banned Arbitration Named One Reason for Alleged Move

Withdrawal of Warners and First National from the Hays association is being considered, it is reported, in what may lead to something of a bombshell at the next meeting of association members.

Major factors said to be prompting consideration of the two companies to withdraw from the organization are:

1. The Thacher decree outlawing compulsory arbitration under the system set up by the Hays association.

2. The cost of continued membership, which is declared being maintained at a certain level despite discontinuance of arbitration activity and expense.

3. Belief that the five-year franchise plans of the two companies renders continued membership unnecessary.

4. The Department of Justice action against Warners charging violation of the Clayton anti-trust act in acquisition of control of First National.

Rumblings of internal dissatisfaction heretofore have been discredited promptly, but the reported Warner defection is said to have reached a climax with presentation of the 1930 budget, carrying with it the year's assessment of the various members.

One of the chief reasons for membership, it is said, has been the arbitration system, and with this thrown into the discard, the company's status has changed. Defense of the arbitration and credit cases is said to be included in the new budget, over which the alleged squawk is being made. Warners is said to have demanded and to have been refused a reduction of its assessment. Warners and First National now are operating chiefly under five-year franchise plans, which carry their own arbitration agreement.

From the angle of the government case, Warners is said to feel that continued membership in the Hays association may influence the pending anti-trust action against the company.

Denying the report Warners and First National planned to withdraw from the Hays association:

"Nothing to it. Our relations are very friendly"—Sam Morris.

"Ridiculous. Never even heard it discussed"—Charles C. Pettijohn.

Harry M. and Albert Warner are not in New York. Will H. Hays, now in Hollywood, was queried for comment, but at press time no reply had been received.

E. H. HAMMONS AL CHRISTIE

Head of Educational who is understood negotiating with the comedy producer for distribution of Christie talking comedies.

Educational in Christie Deal?

Hollywood—Visit of Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational to the Coast, it is reported, has for one of its major objects the resumption of releasing affiliation with the Christie Film Co., whose contract with Paramount expires this spring. Christie already has completed all of the pictures called for in the three-year contract with Paramount and conferences between Al and Charles Christie and Hammons are reported to be under way.

Up until three years ago when the present contract with Paramount was signed, Christie for years had released its product through Educational.

As customary in previous years, there will be no Christie production activity for about two months, during which the staff, headed by Al Christie, will seek new story material and map plans for future production, which starts in April.

Since November, 1928, when Christie switched to a sound policy, 37 two-reel talkers have been made by Christie.

No deal has been made and it will be some time before any is even negotiated, states Pat Dowling, advertising and publicity director of Christie.

War to Finish on Song Racket

John G. Payne

Fortified by conviction of three alleged ringleaders of reputed illegal traffic in copyrighted music in New York, the Music Publisher's Protective Ass'n, is continuing its campaign against this form of racketeering, intending to stamp out the practice. Harry B. Paul, of Rexall Press, Samuel A. Cohen of Darby Press, and Morris Shapiro of Maramore Press, were the three who pleaded guilty in U. S. District Court, New York. Because of the lack of legal precedent the trio received a suspended sentence.

The nickel song vending racket has been under investigation for some time by the association, for it is claimed to have been undermining business of sheet music stores in New York. The campaign against the racket is being conducted by John G. Payne.

Warner Havana Theatre

Havana—Harry M. Warner has completed plans for a 3,000-seat theatre here. The Warner chief, who came here for a vacation, has returned to New York. Publix-Saenger operates the largest house here.

Settlement of Warners Sound Fight in Germany Forecast

Berlin—Kuchenmeister and Warners are likely to get together on a deal covering sound films in Germany. The agreement, if reached, would be regarded as a distinct step toward a final settlement of the differences between the Tobis and Western Electric groups.

George Quigley, Vitaphone executive, and E. R. Diamond, who represents Kuchenmeister in the United States, figure in the negotiations. Complete accord between Kuchenmeister and Warners is expected to result. Warners is the sole American firm in Germany showing talkers only, on Klangfilm apparatus. Like negotiations are being carried on between Gaumont and the Klangfilm-Tobis groups and Ufa is reported seeking a multi-lingual arrangement with England. Klangfilm-Tobis for some time has been engaged in a patent fight with Western Electric.

Swanson-Kennedy Belie Any Rift

Hollywood—There were no indications of the reported break between Gloria Swanson and J. P. Kennedy Thursday at the studio where Gloria is rehearsing, preparatory to shooting initial scenes for "What a Widow." Kennedy, himself, was in evidence, watching rehearsals. Both expressed satisfaction at progress made. Absolute harmony exists between producer and star, it is said.

"Why" of Rumored RKO-Pathe Deal Is Hinted As Out On Booking Contract

Also Would Give Radio Pathe News Plus 49% in DuPont Raw Stock Co.

The big "why?" of RKO's rumored deal to purchase Pathe is said to be:

Ownership of Pathe Sound News, with a very substantial number of theatre contracts to make it profitable, giving to RKO, in it and its running mate, the Pathe Review, major sales values with which to further RKO plans for its short-subject department.

Repurchase, and thereby control, of the booking contract between Pathe and RKO which is suspected of having certain irritating aspects for the theatre-operating division of the latter organization in its attempts to absorb the amount of Pathe product, both features and shorts, to which RKO is committed.

Ownership of Pathe's forty-nine per cent interest in the DuPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Company, which, with an initial capital of approximately $2,900,000 when it came into existence as a competitor of the Eastman Company, has grown to a reputed valuation of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000.

Looks Good to Stockholders

From the angle of Pathe stockholders and bankers, after two years without dividends on either preferred or common stock, the deal is said to have very attractive features in the assurances it brings to Pathe security holders of affiliation with a theatre-owning organization which can use its houses as a trading factor in bartering play dates with other producer-distributor-theatre concerns.

With a considerable volume of product of its own for which to provide playing time in its own houses, RKO is reported to have felt considerable difficulty in absorbing all of the Pathe product for which it contracted with Pathe in a deal said to be for a long period of years. This deal, according to reports, requires RKO to accept each year, on a play-or-pay basis, one hundred and four issues of the news reel, one hundred and four single reel subjects, thirty-five two-reelers and twenty-six features. The features are said to be contracted definitely only for those RKO houses which have a split-week policy.

This contract would be entirely within the control of RKO for adjustment if the reported consolidation becomes a fact, thus removing a problem for its theatre department.

Another Asset

Pathe's forty-nine per cent interest in the DuPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Co. is a closely guarded secret as to the actual value of that equity as an asset on the Pathe books, but it is generally accepted as fact that it is very favorably regarded by Hiram W. Brown and other RKO officials. When the DuPont-Pathe raw stock business was organized as a joint venture ten years ago it was financed, according to report, entirely by corporate or private funds within the DuPont organization, with a bond issue of $1,000,000 and a preferred stock issue of $1,300,000. It has been a long-held theory that Pathe invested a small amount of cash, comparatively, but that the big factor in its ownership of forty-nine per cent of the company was an agreement to use DuPont raw stock at the studios, thereby giving DuPont its first real foothold in a market which was almost entirely supplied by Eastman.

The bond issue is said to have been completely retired out of earnings, so that Pathe's forty-nine per cent ownership of preferred stock becomes worth $3,000,000 or more if reports of the company's total value are true.

Pathe's Financial Structure

Pathe's own financial structure consists of a bond issue of $5,500,000, an eight per cent preferred stock issue of eight thousand shares with a par value of $100 each, two hundred and fifty thousand shares of A common, and nine hundred and fifty thousand shares of B common.

Recent quotation on the Pathe bonds was $46. The preferred stock, which is not listed, has been quoted at $40 bid and $50 asked. This has an accrued dividend of $16 a share. The Class A common, scheduled to pay $4 a year per share, has an accumulated dividend of $8 a share.

Auditors are said to be completing an examination of the Pathe books, with a report already in preparation for submission to Hiram Brown, David Sarnoff, and their fellow-executives when Brown returns to New York soon from the coast.

Prevailing opinion is that the rumors of a merger between RKO and Pathe will become a fact within sixty days unless some circumstance or obstacle, now unforeseen by the principals, develops in Everyman's Land, generally referred to as Wall Street.

RKO Planning 60 Films

Hollywood—Instead of following the general tendency, RKO will increase its 1930-1931 output to about 60 pictures, according to Hiram Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp. There is possibility that more may be added, these to come from independent producers. Enlargement of the studios to permit production of 60 features is under way.

Zero Hour Near

The RKO-Schwartz deal will be consummated within 30 days. If speedy work of RKO's legal and accounting staffs continue, the date may be advanced to March 1, it is understood.

Several weeks ago, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, exclusively announced that the deal for acquisition of the Century circuit operated by A. H. Schwartz was in the bag, with the latter holding out for cash.

Long Court Jam Seen at "Philly"

Philadelphia—Long and drawn out court proceedings are anticipated here in the jam involving RKO and North Philadelphia exhibitors as a result of the former's acquisition of the Grand Opera House. When the theatre was reopened, there was a squawk by exhibitors who had bought the RKO product on the assumption that the house would be dark. Charles Rosenzweig, RKO sales manager, hopped over from New York and held a meeting of 16 exhibitors, six of whom were concerned in the matter. Jay Emanuel, publisher of "The Exhibitor," was chosen as arbitrator.

All of the complainants were taken care of, including operator of the Susquehanna, who received an award of $1,500, including waiving of the contract. Representative of the theatre was declared satisfied and thanked Rosenzweig, and then went back to his partners who refused to accept the proposition. As a result, the case has gone to court.

R-K-O Paying $300,000 for Lease on Columbia?

Radio-Keith-Orpheum is reputed to be paying $300,000 yearly rental, in addition to taxes and assessments on its ten-year lease on the Columbia, New York. The lease is dated from the time of completion of renovation and remodeling.

Studio Fire Hearing Feb. 26

Hearing has been set for Feb. 26 on manslaughter charges against John C. Flinn, Pathe vice president, and Henry P. Lally, official of Sound Studios, brought following the fire which cost ten lives.

Hollywood—Leroy Prinz, stage dance director, has been signed by Cecil De Mille to stage the ensemble numbers for the director's next, "Madame Satan."

5-5-5 Confabs to Be Resumed Soon, Kent-Myers Get-Together Indicates

No Decision On Appeal

No decision has been reached as yet on whether appeal will be taken from Judge Thatcher's decision ruling compulsory arbitration illegal, E. P. Grosvenor, who defended the case for distributors, the Hays association and Film Boards of Trade, Thursday told MOTION PICTURE NEWS. There is about a month remaining in the period in which notice of appeal may be filed.

Johnson Becomes Para. Producer

Hollywood—Julian Johnson has been elevated to the post of associate producer at Paramount, being promoted from the position of editorial and titling department head.

Johnson has been with Paramount for a number of years. When William Le Baron was in charge of Eastern production for the company, Johnson was one of his right hand bowers. His long experience as a magazine story editor prompted Paramount to use that knowledge in not only in purchases but in adaptation and preparation as well.

Precedent Set in Suit of Assignees of Copyrights

One or more copyright assignees may sue or defend for original owners, stated District Judge Reeves on the bench of the District Court for western Missouri, in overruling a motion to dismiss a suit for copyright infringement because of alleged misjoinder. The suit was brought by Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the assignee of the copyrights involved.

Coolidges at Studios

Hollywood—Calvin and Mrs. Coolidge Wednesday were entertained royally by the film industry here. They were guests of the Breakfast Club. Then to Warners, United Artists and M-G-M. They lunched at United Artists as guests of Pickford and Fairbanks. Governor and Mrs. Young were present, as were Sam Goldwyn, Will H. Hays, Adolph Zukor, Joe Schenck, Hiram Brown and Fred Beetsor.

"Billy the Kid" Again

Hollywood—Shelved indefinitely several months ago, M-G-M has again set "Billy, the Kid" on schedule for early production. John Mack Brown may blossom forth as an M-G-M star in the film version of the western story.

Producers Take No Action on Hays Ass'n "Don'ts"

Hollywood—All officers have been reelected by the M. P. Producers' Ass'n. Directors also remain the same as last year.

Will Hays Monday night, at a meeting of the association, pointed out the serious situation in which the industry finds itself because "companies are taking liberties" with the dialogue phase of talkers. The result has been, he revealed, that welfare organizations have revived the censorship agitation in many quarters. A list of "don'ts" was submitted.

It is generally known that there has been vigorous discussion since last October regarding revision of Hays' association code to conform to new conditions. According to reports this week, producers have taken no steps officially to endorse Hays' plea.

M.P. Relief Fund on Coast Successful, Returns Show

Hollywood—Incomplete returns indicate the M. P. Relief Fund Drive was highly successful. Total collected reached $65,000 Wednesday night, with outstanding pledges yet to be realized.

Mary Pickford arranged with the Los Angeles Automobile Show to supply screen celebrities for personal appearances and realized $15,000 for the fund. Miss Pickford will open the show Saturday night. A different celebrity will appear each night during the run of the show.

Sharp Practices by Agents To Be Curbed in Campaign

Hollywood—Reported sharp practices by agents and general unbalanced conditions in this branch of the industry have led the M. P. Producers Ass'n to appoint a committee to institute a complete investigation and recommend remedies.

The condition has been engendered, it was said, by the influx of former vaudeville and legitimate agents from the east with the total now doing business reaching around 60. Many, it was said, are unqualified.

Lawyers Reported Throwing a Scare on Thacher Decree Bugaboo—Decision Near

Resumption of the 5-5-5 conferences between committees of the Hays association, Allied States and the M. P. T. O. A. within a few weeks is in prospect. Whether or not they will be continued, depends upon reaction of executives to an idea declared sold by lawyers of a few of the companies.

Conferences held on Wednesday between S. R. Kent of Paramount, "father" of the conferences, and Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n, are said to have found those two executives agreed that a resumption of the conferences would be desirable. However, there have been "dire" warnings sounded by counsel for a few of the companies, to the effect that any participation in conferences or anything else which smacks of concerted effort may violate the Thacher decree and result in their indictment, for violating the injunction.

Some action in the matter is expected within a week or ten days. Elek J. Ludvigh, Paramount counsel, is to return to New York in a few days and will pass upon the legal aspects of the matter so far as his company is concerned. After this, Myers will submit his views on the subject. M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A president, has indicated that he does not believe future conferences can accomplish anything in view of the Thacher decision. Meanwhile, a number of companies are reported working on new contract forms.

Goulding on His First Film

Hollywood—Edmund Goulding's first for Paramount, "The Devil's Holiday," is in rehearsal with a cast including Nancy Carroll, James Kirkwood, Hobart Bosworth, Morgan, Farley, Jed Prouty, Phillips Holmes and Ned Sparks. Goulding wrote the story and musical numbers, and will personally direct the production.

Nize Bizness

When a certain major chain purchased the interests of a small Eastern operator, the latter went along in the deal to supervise the territory in which he had been active. For some reason, or other, he was all set for a double-cross, telling his new employers to drop expansion in certain towns, and, of course, the big chain took his advice, believing that he knew his territory, but never realizing that the small timer had a gang of his own all set to enter places which were marked off the list.

After several good towns had been sewed up in this manner, the time came for the little guy to walk out on the big chain and assume charge of the new development—but the stock market crashed, and he lost that big pile which was to be used to finance his second string.

And he's still a supervisor with the big chain.

"Gutter" Copy Kickback Is Seen in New St. Louis Censorship Measure

New Ordinance to Regulate All Films, Advertising Follows Use of Raw Copy

St. Louis—That ill-timed "gutter" copy used for "The Love Parade" for its run at the Missouri here, is seen causing a severe kickback, in the form of a drastic censorship bill being introduced Friday by Alderman Samuel L. Wimer. The bill aims to exercise supervision over advertising as well as films.

It calls for a board composed of the prosecuting attorney, chief of police, mayor's secretary and an alderman appointed by the mayor. The board would be empowered to ban showing of any film it disapproved. Fee would be $10 for each film up to 1,200 feet and $15 above that footage. All advertising would have to be submitted to the board for approval.

Failure of an exhibitor to show the approval sign on his screen would subject him to imprisonment of from two to five days. Penalties for other violations are from $50 to $100 for the first offense and from $200 to $500 for subsequent offenses.

"Too many motion pictures and plays now are throwing out immoral suggestions to young people," says Alderman Winer. "I don't want to put any exhibitors out of business or cause them any hardship, but some of the things shown today should be curbed.

"There may be a certain amount of spice in a show and still keep within the bounds of decency, but they are going too far. Motion pictures today are getting too raw with their suggestiveness."

As exclusively reported to the trade by Motion Picture News raw copy used for "The Love Parade," caused censure in St. Louis.

Claim Language Barrier Is Met

Hollywood—"Paramount On Parade" will be released in dialogue, music and sound in all countries of the world. Language handicaps will be overcome through a simple process not divulged, it is claimed, which will allow exhibition internationally.

If Paramount has what it claims to have, the lot will be pretty much the envy of Hollywood.

First in 25 Years

Dallas—The Majestic is holding over "Sunny Side Up" for a second week. This is the theatre's first picture holdover in 25 years.

A new gag in building up word-of-mouth advertising was worked by John H. Thoma, manager of the house, who held three midnight previews at two week intervals and prior to the picture's opening. The local crowd fell for it—complete.

"Troopers Three" Different

In these days of the filmusical epidemic, it is a pleasing change to see a picture like "Troopers Three," Tiffany's talker built around life in the United States cavalry. The story is not outstanding, is familiar stuff, but there's plenty of comedy and some fine and hard riding. It's a picture for the kids—and how we need them—and grownups, too. A hokum picture made to order for the small towns, and has more entertainment than many so-called specials.

Ten exchanges throughout the country now are releasing "Her Unborn Child," with ten more to be added within the next two months, states Windsor Picture Plays. The company has added to its space on the seventh floor of 729 7th Ave., New York. The publicity department has been aided by addition of Arthur McHugh, Harry Sterns and George Gatts.

Conselman Going Paramount

Hollywood. — Paramount is negotiating with William Conselman to join the organization under contract as a writer and supervisor. Conselman is considered one of the first rank writers for pictures, and is author of the Ella Cinders comic strip which is syndicated nationally.

Starring Ruth Chatterton

Hollywood—Ruth Chatterton will be starred in M-G-M's picturization of Frederick Lonsdale's play, "The High Road," with Ralph Forbes in a featured part. Mackenzie Ward, who appeared in the stage production, also will be in the cast.

"P. A.'s" Juggle N. Y. Reviews, But Excerpts Don't Tell All

Several years ago, press agents developed a habit of picking excerpts from newspaper reviews, cutting all adverse criticism and then using what was left in their newspaper ad copy. This practice was played to death. Critics in New York, and elsewhere, grew tired of being misquoted and squawked aplenty, and, as a result of the concerted kick, distributors layed off.

The same gag, however, is again being pulled. In New York, where "Troopers 3" was premiered this week, the company reproduced portions of reviews in the Metropolitan dailies. One line credited the "Daily News" with the following comment: "Can have a lot of fun seeing and hearing it."

What actually appeared in the "News" was this: "You'll think this talkie mediocre, but five-year old Tommy CAN HAVE A LOT OF FUN SEEING AND HEARING IT."

Other Reviews Twisted

"The Times'" opinion in the Tiffany ad ran something like this: "Marvelous horsemanship of Uncle Sam's cavalry," but Tiffany forgot to add the rest. "The Times" really said:

"Low comedy and melodrama go hand in hand in 'Troopers Three' . . . The best scenes in this film are those depicting the MARVELOUS HORSEMANSHIP OF UNCLE SAM'S CAVALRY. These stretches compensate to some degree for the ancient jests and artless complications of this picture. . . ."

"The Evening Telegram" is quoted as saying: "Thrilling and spectacular." The reviewer, however, continued his thought with this: "But that is about all that can be said in favor of the new tenant at the Gaiety, which is pretty mediocre film fare. . . ."

U. A. Pulls Same Gag

And Tiffany is not the only company which is currently switching phrases from reviews for newspaper plugs. United Artists runs this line, from "The Telegram," in its "Puttin' on the Ritz" copy, "Mr. Richman is superb. . . ." That phrase was taken from a "Telegram" line which read: "Except when he is called upon to become emotional HE IS SUPERB, and no better job of casting was ever done. But, as an actor, Mr. Richman is a grand night club entertainer."

Trick Copy Confusing Public Leads New York to Halt Chicago Ad "War"

Song-Indigestion, New Malady

Hollywood—"The public is sick of song numbers wildly inserted in current pictures, and audiences are getting indigestion from too many melodies," asserts a prominent production executive, who continues, "What we need is action pictures, with just as little dialogue and song as necessary." According to the producer, song pictures are driving people away from the theatres today.

The statements were not made for publication, but constituted advice given to a group of writers during a story conference.

Zukor, Kohn, Goetz, Wanger in L. A., Paramount Changes Seen

Hollyood—A big slice of Paramount's starring executive talent is here from New York to discuss production plans for 1930-1931. The group includes Adolph Zukor, Ralph A. Kohn, Harry M. Goetz and Walter Wanger and before they finish a radical change in company's producing plans may be evolved.

These officials will confer with Jesse L. Lasky, Ben P. Schulberg, and other executives on policy for 1930-1931. Definite pictures and specials will be set, together with allocation of various pictures to the eastern and western studios. Zukor, Kohn, Goetz and Wanger will be here two weeks.

Rin-Tin-Tin Up to Snuff in New Film

Rin-Tin-Tin did not disappoint New York critics in his new Warner opus, "On the Border," which is marked up to standard in the catchline reviews following:

Daily News—Rin-Tin-Tin is billed as the star . . . but little Armida . . . takes most of the footage. . . .

Journal— . . . something to delight young and old. . . .

Times—A trite bit of romantic cinematography. . . .

World (Evening)— . . . Rin-Tin-Tin, of course, is always good. . . .

World (Morning) . . . Rin-Tin-Tin's voice reproduces sharp and clear. As usual he charms by his lack of camera consciousness. . . .

B. & K. Takes Sock at R-K-O and Latter Retaliates in Windy City Row

Chicago—Advertising battle between Publix-Balaban & Katz and Radio-Keith-Orpheum was ended here when peremptory orders were received from New York to cut it short, after misrepresentation was resorted to by RKO in retaliation for a Publix thrust, which started the row.

"No misrepresentation was intended," an RKO official here is quoted as saying. However, maybe it was two other fellows.

The objectionable copy prepared by the RKO publicity and advertising department, which is headed by Jack Hess, appears elsewhere on this page. Local opinion has it the yen for retaliation is understandable enough after B. & K.'s dig, but the copy itself was of the kind that usually prompts a speedy comeback.

It Started Like This—

The battle is alleged to have had its origin in a statement contained in a Publix-B. & K. newspaper advertisement to the effect that "when big pictures come to Chicago you see them at our theatres first."

RKO, pointing to "Rio Rita" and "Hit the Deck," took exception to the word "first," and requested its withdrawal from future advertising of the kind. Accordingly the advertisement was run with the word "first" omitted. However, subsequently a third Publix-B. & K. advertisement made its appearance. It was concluded in bold type that said "Publix-Balaban & Katz Theatres Bring the Best to Chicago First." The emphasis on the controversial word is Publix-B. & K.'s.

When RKO announced the opening of "The Grand Parade" at the State-Lake, "drama," "melody" and "love" were ballyhooed as the picture's attractions, but the compositor not only set the word "love" in unusually large and bold type, but brought it into close approximation with the title word, "Parade." The balance of the title, which was "The Grand," stood in between, but in small type. The result was obvious. Particularly inasmuch as Paramount's "The Love Parade" had been set in at Publix-B. & K.'s McVickers.

Home Offices Get Busy

New York took cognizance of the thrust, demanded the withdrawal of the ad and mumbled something about "misrepresentation." The ad was re-set with the word "love" appearing in small type and the words "The Grand" set in exactly the same size type as the word "Parade."

Publix-B. & K. contends that the border design on the ad to which they had taken exception included a military figure at salute, and that this portrait bore a striking resemblance to one that had been widely used in Philco-Paramount billboard advertising of Maurice Chevalier, principal in "The Love Parade."

Fox - Otterson - Stuart Trustee Pact Continues to June 1st, Report Says

Trio Then to Decide if Any New Plan Adopted Is Agreeable and if Agreement Continues Six Months More, Story Goes

Regardless of whatever refinancing deal is agreed upon by Fox Film stockholders, the trusteeship of William Fox, John E. Otterson and Harry Stuart will continue until June 1, under terms of the original trusteeship agreement.

At that time, these three trustees will decide whether any financing plan drafted is a permanent and satisfactory one, and then determine whether the trusteeship will be dissolved, or continued for an additional six months to Dec. 1, as called for in the original agreement.

The adoption of the Lehman Brothers-Bancamerica-Blair-Dillon-Read plan and payment of Fox Film debts to Halsey, Stuart and Electrical Research Products will not end automatically the Fox-Otterson-Stuart trusteeship.

These are among the high lights of the Halsey-Stuart-Electrical Research Products viewpoints, obtained by Motion Picture News in an exclusive interview with an official in position to know the attitude of the two companies. They reveal a hitherto unpublished slant on the now-famous agreement on the trusteeship, which has been impotent since repudiation by William Fox on the ground that Otterson and Stuart violated the compact when they insisted upon resignation of Jack Leo, Fox vice-president,

They indicate that Halsey, Stuart may resort to court action to assure continuance of the trusteeship, in the event that its plan is rejected by stockholders, and effort is made to make the proposed new voting trust agreement trusteeship operative.

Doesn't Want Control

Halsey, Stuart, it is indicated, is concerned first over repayment of its loans to Fox and second over its 15-year preferential agreement on financing of Fox subsidiaries. The company, it is indicated to Motion Picture News from an authoritative source, is not so concerned over continuation of the receivership, as it is over the carrying out of these two aforementioned arrangements.

Meanwhile, Halsey, Stuart is putting finishing touches to its plan for Fox refinancing, confident of favorable acceptance "despite propaganda."

The company is determined to place its plan before stockholders and may seek a court order to assure its presentation at the meeting if efforts are made to block it.

R-K-O Always for Good Buy-Brown

Hollywood—Radio - Keith - Orpheum always is willing to buy a worthwhile article at the right price, Hiram Brown, president, states in answer to queries as to whether his company is dickering for Fox's interest in Loew's and for Pathe. Otherwise, he is non-committal on the subject. If forced sale of Loew's through a receivership is brought about, there is strong possibility R-K-O would be a purchase, it is believed.

WILLIAM FOX

Control Again in Few Years Hoped for by Wm. Fox

William Fox hopes to get back control of his companies within a few years, through payment of the $65,000,000 indebtedness to be incurred by the issue called for in the Bancamerica-Blair-Lehman Brothers-Dillon Read plan of refinancing. This is disclosed by Samuel Untermyer in his statement announcing acceptance of the plan by directors of the two corporations. "Constantly increasing" business of the two companies is expected by Fox to enable repayment, Untermyer said.

Ruscica Named Fox Head in Western South America

Arthur Ruscica has been transferred from management of the Fox Havana exchange to managership of the West Coast territory of South Americas, states Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager. Countries under his supervision include: Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador. J. P. Ryan, formerly in Holland, now is managing the Havana branch.

Halsey, Stuart Plan Rapped as 'Gesture'

Samuel Untermyer's statement, attacking the Halsey, Stuart refinancing plan, follows:

At the meeting of the boards of directors of Fox Film and Fox Theatres corporations held on Friday last the plan of financing offered by the Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, Lehman Brothers and Dillon, Read & Co., on which the bankers had been working with counsel and accountants for months at great expense, and which has been for weeks before the stockholders, was formally adopted by both boards. At subsequent meetings the various notices and circulars were passed.

"Toward the close of yesterday's board meeting and after the directors had been fully committed to the bankers' plan, another plan was presented by Halsey, Stuart & Co., and read to the meeting. An adjournment was thereupon taken until today for its consideration by the directors.

At Wednesday's meeting the Halsey, Stuart plan was rejected. It was so manifestly impossible and impracticable that "he who runs" could readily read that it was a mere gesture to force the company into receivership and was quite in line with the persistent demands of these gentlemen and their allies, in court, for the appointment of receivers.

Again Hits Motive

To the "man in the street" this appears a strange attitude for Messrs. Halsey, Stuart & Co., who do not own a share of stock in the companies and who are being paid their notes in full, with interest, under the bankers' plan that has been approved by the directors. These notes, I understand, are now selling at about 70 in the market.

"Before this controversy is over there are likely to be interesting developments that will disclose the motives that lie behind these efforts to prevent the refinancing of these companies and to force a receivership.

"The Halsey, Stuart plan, besides being more expensive and involving the issue of from 350,000 to 600,000 more shares than the plant that goes today to the stockholders for approval, provides a five-year option to Messrs. Halsey, Stuart & Co. and their associates on 500,000 shares of Fox Film stock in addition to the bankers' and underwriting commissions of over $5,000,000.

Hits Opposition Plan

The Halsey Stuart plan is also impossible because:

1. It takes away from the 7,500 class A stockholders for ten years the power that has just been given them of voting for five of the twelve directors and lodges that power in voting trustees named by Halsey, Stuart & Co. In the light of past experience this is regarded as unsafe for the stockholders, besides which it would require the unanimous consent of the class A stockholders, or a receivership, to put it into effect.

2. Messrs. Halsey, Stuart & Co. are, of course, well aware that every one of the numerous holders of "B" stock, of which Mr. Fox holds a bare majority, and which "B" stock now has the voting power for directors until the new plan goes into effect and under which the "B" stock will continue to vote for seven of the twelve directors will of course refuse to surrender their "B" stock for one and one-half

Sheehan Pivotal Figure in "Battle" Now Nearing Climax for Control of Fox Firm

Proxies Sought for Lehman Plan Votes

Text of letter to stockholders of Fox Film Corporation, calling upon them to grant proxies to William Fox and Jack G. Leo in order to secure ratification of the refinancing plan proposed by Lehman Brothers-Bancamera Blair Co.—Dillon, Read and Co.:

Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., who in 1929 made a public issue of $12,000,000 of your one-year Notes, due April 1, 1930, have, in court proceedings, urged the immediate appointment of receivers of your corporation.

RECEIVERSHIP means the ruin of your investment.

Your board of directors has adopted a plan to avert such disaster and enclose a copy of that plan (without its exhibits) together with a notice of stockholders' meeting to take the necessary action to carry it out. Halsey, Stuart, and a few creditors and stockholders allied with them, oppose the plan.

Are you going to align yourself with those who have asked the Court to destroy your stock by appointing receivers?

Or,

Are you going to align yourself with those who have labored to rescue your Corporation from receivership and save your investment?

If the latter, execute and return the enclosed proxy in the enclosed stamped envelope—and do it immediately!

The corporation faces over $45,000,000 of obligations matured or to mature within sixty days. In addition it has large commitments to meet during the current year, incurred in the acquisition of theatre properties or in the building of theatres. Over $7,000,000 of judgments have been obtained by various creditors, and only the indulgence of these creditors at the earnest solicitation of Hon. Frank J. Coleman, U. S. District Judge, has prevented the complete break up of the corporation's property.

Explains Reasons for Debts

The present heavy debt was incurred primarily in the acquisition of the English Gaumont circuit of theatres and in assisting Fox Theatres Corp. to acquire a substantial block of common stock of Loew's, Inc., both of which acquisitions the board of directors believes will prove to be profitable. These purchases were made after consultation with Halsey, Stuart and with the expectation that that firm would at the proper time effect a refunding of the short term indebtedness thus incurred. Failure to effect such refunding before the decline in market values of securities last autumn is the immediate cause of the corporation's financial embarrassment.

While Halsey, Stuart were pressing for the appointment of receivers the corporation was enjoying the greatest earnings in its history, and notwithstanding the adverse effect of these attacks upon the corporation's credit, its net earnings during January exceeded by approximately 50% the net earnings of January, 1929, the highest the corporation had theretofore attained.

It is the custom of motion picture exhibitors to purchase substantially their entire supply of pictures for a season during the period between May and August, and theatre owners will not contract for their pictures with any source of supply which they believe precarious. Furthermore, the corporation's properties are located in every state of the United States and in almost every foreign country, which means that if there were receivership the unity of the enterprise would inevitably be destroyed. Receivership would, therefore, mean the substantial destruction of the corporation's business and the disintegration of its properties.

Origin of Present Plan

The corporation, in its extremity, invited Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, Lehman Brothers, and Dillon, Read & Co. to investigate its affairs with a view to submitting a plan of financing. Over the opposition of counsel for Halsey, Stuart adjournments were taken in the receivership proceedings to permit this study and the preparation of such a plan.

From conversations had with Halsey, Stuart, and their counsel, it was understood that if any plan were proposed which would provide for the payment of the $12,000,000 of notes due April 1, 1930, which had been sold to the public by them, and the $15,000,000 obligation to Electrical Research Products Inc., they would offer no obstacle to its consummation.

The enclosed plan does provide for paying all these debts in full.

Nevertheless, upon its presentation to the court with the request that further adjournments of the receivership applications be had to enable the stockholders to take action upon the plan, counsel for Halsey, Stuart stated that they had other interests in the situation than the mere payment of the corporation's one year

No Rift with Fox in Vote Against Plan Chief Favors, Which Sheehan Believes Too Costly—Proxies Being Called For

Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corp., is a pivotal figure in the spectacular battle being staged by Wall Street interests for control of Fox.

His action in voting against the Lehman-Bancamerica group plan, favored by William Fox, does not signify any rift between him and Fox, for he voted against it because he believes the cost of refinancing is too high.

WINFIELD SHEEHAN

Sheehan and Saul Rogers, vice-president and general counsel, also voted against the new Halsey-Stuart plan for the same reason.

Bankers concerned in the refinancing plans will pay great heed to Sheehan's wishes, recognizing his importance to the company's future, because of his demonstrated production ability.

These are among revelations made exclusively to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in the Fox-Wall Street drama, rapidly approaching its climax, March 5, when stockholders of Fox Film and Fox Theatres meet to consider the Lehman-Bancamerica plan. Other developments of the week are:

Rejection by Fox Film and Fox Theatres directors of a financing plan submitted by Halsey-Stuart, and a public attack upon it as unsound by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Fox.

Adoption by directors of the Lehman-Bancamerica plan, with Sheehan and Rogers voting against it, and issuing of a call to stockholders for proxies.

Offer of Lehman-Bancamerica group to modify plan to make optional pro-stock, or the granting of an option to purchase stock at $20.

Indication by a new group of Class A stockholders that other plans may be advanced and that they will be considered.

Win Concession

Opposition of Sheehan and Rogers to the Lehman-Bancamerica plan is said to have led to the proposal that instead of the corporation turning over 200,000 shares of Class A as bonus for the refinancing, that the group be given five-year option to purchase 500,000 shares at $20 a share. Subscription to this plan has been hit by Untermyer as unwise, in view of prospective earnings during the period.

Sheehan's vote against the plan occasioned a surprise in film circles, and it was hinted that a rift had developed between him and Fox. This was quickly dispelled, however, by the Fox general manager, whose loyalty to his chief has been unquestioned.

The new group Fox Class A stockholders was formed by J. S. Bache & Co., and E. F. Hutton & Co., and stated members feel the Lehman-Bancamerica plan is the best to date, but that any better one would be given consideration. This was taken to mean these two financial houses may be preparing to submit a new plan.

Fox Appeals for Stockholders' Aid In Fight to Put Over Lehman Plan

Letter Asking Proxies Assails Halsey, Stuart—Full Text Of Plan Is Outlined

Loew Bankers Angled for Wesco Corp.

This is the inside story of the Loew offer to William Fox to purchase Wesco:

Dillon, Read and Company, bankers and holders of a large block of Loew stock, believed acquisition of Wesco would enhance the value of the Loew stock. Fox looked with favor on the idea. Internal opposition from certain Fox executives, however, dissuaded Fox from disposing of the big coast chain.

Loew's, as such, however, did not make the offer of $22,000,000. It was the banking group acting on its own.

William Fox late Thursday added his request to that of the board of directors that stockholders ratify the Lehman-Bancamerica plan, drafted to bring the company out of its present difficulties. In a letter to his stockholders, Fox denounces Halsey, Stuart and its plan, calling upon stockholders to give their proxies to him or to Jack Leo. Full text of the plan follows:

February 11, 1930.

Fox Film Corporation,
Fox Theatres Corporation,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

While the investigation of your affairs which we are making at your invitation has not been completed, the situation thus far disclosed indicates, in our judgment, that approximately $60,000,000 are needed to meet your immediate financial requirements. As you appreciate, this amount is substantially larger than the amount which we were at first advised would be required, and the necessity for this larger amount makes it the more imperative that the new seurities to be created shall be sufficiently attractive to leave no doubt as to their marketability. We have endeavored, however, in the plan which we suggest, to provide that the Class A common stock purchase and conversion privileges of the new securities shall be at no lower price for the Class A common stock than is necessary to accomplish this purpose, and in order to offset whatever dilution of the present stock may result, provision is made that all the new securities to be created shall be offered for subscription to existing stockholders, thus creating valuable rights which the stockholders may sell if they do not care to exercise them.

The plan suggested is as follows:

I.

Securities to Be Created

Fox Film Corporation.

1. Fox Film Corporation (hereinafter called Film) will create an issue of $40,000,000, principal amount, of ten-year seven per cent debentures (hereinafter call the "Film Debentures"), redeemable, in whole or in part, at the option of the corporation, on any interest payment date, on thirty days' notice, at their principal amount and accrued interest plus a premium of 10% for three years from their date, of 7½% for the next three years, and thereafter of 5%. They shall bear stock purchase warrants which shall not be detachable except upon their exercise or upon the redemption of the debentures to which they are annexed, but upon redemption of any debentures the appurtenant warrants shall be detached and retained by the holders of such debentures. These warrants shall entitle the holders thereof to purchase at any time within ten years from their date, twenty-five shares of Class A common stock of film in respect of each $1,000, principal amount, of debentures, at a price to be determined by us at the time the issue is authorized, but not less than $20 per share during the first three years, $25 per share during the next three years and $30 per share during the last four years. The trust agreement under which the debentures are issued shall provide that the corporation shall in each year, after paying or providing for full cumulative dividends to date on the preferred stock herein mentioned, and before paying any dividends on the Class A or Class B common stock, set aside twenty per cent of the remaining net earnings as a sinking fund to be applied to the redemption by lot of debentures at the then redemption price. The trust agreement shall also provide that all proceeds of the exercise by debenture holders of their stock purchase warrants shall be paid into the sinking fund and similarly applied. It shall contain appropriate provisions to protect the purchase warrants in the event of a merger, consolidation or sale of assets, and to prevent dilution in the event of stock split-up, stock dividends, rights to subscribe, or the like.

2. Film shall also authorize an issue of $25,000,000 par value, of seven per cent cumulative preferred stock, which shall be convertible at its par value at the option of the holders at any time into Class A common stock at a price to be determined by us at the time the issue is authorized, but not less than $20 per share during the first five years and thereafter $25 per share (with appropriate provisions to protect the conversion privilege in the event of a merger, consolidation or sale of assets and to prevent dilution in the event of stock split-ups, stock dividends, rights to subscribe or the like), shall be entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of 7% per annum, payable quarterly before any payment upon the Class A common stock or Class B common stock, shall be entitled on liquidation to 110% of the par value thereof and accrued dividends before any payment upon the Class A or Class B common stock, and shall be redeemable at any time at the option of the corporation, in whole or in part, on sixty days' notice at 110% of its par value and accrued dividends, holders of stock called for redemption, however, to be entitled to exercise their right of conversion at any time up to the fifth day preceding the redemption date. The corporation shall not, without the affirmative vote of at least a majority in amount of the preferred stock, create any shares of stock having priority over, or on a parity with, such preferred stock as to tither assets or dividends, or alter the preference of such preferred stock. No holder of preferred stock shall have any preemptive right to purchase or subscribe for any shares of stock or other securities.

The certificate of incorporation of Film will be amended so as to increase the number of the board of directors from 8 to 12 and so as to provide (a) that so long as Film shall not be in default as to dividends as provided in paragraph (b) or (c) below the holders of the Class A common stock of Film shall have the right to elect 5 directors and the holders of the Class B common stock shall have the right to elect 7 directors;

(b) that if Film (not then being in default as to dividends on the preferred stock as provided in paragraph (c) below) shall fail to pay during any calendar year cash dividends aggregating at least $1 per share on each share of the Class A common stock and the Class B common stock, then and in that event the holders of the Class A common stock shall have the right to elect 7 directors and the holders of the Class B common stock shall have the right to elect 5 directors until such time as Film shall have paid in any twelve months period dividends aggregating $1 per share on the Class A common stock and the Class B common stock, and

(c) that if Film shall fail to pay full cumulative dividends to date upon the preferred stock for 4 successive quarterly dividend periods then and in that event and so long as there shall be any dividends in arrears upon the preferred stock the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to elect 7 directors, the holders of the Class A common stock 3 directors and the holders of the Class B common stock 2 directors.

Fox Theatres Corporation.

Fox Theatres Corporation (hereinafter called Theatres) will create an issue of $40,000,000, principal amount, of Ten Year seven per cent convertible debentures (hereinafter called the Theatre Debentures), redeemable, in whole or in part, at the option of the corporation on any interest payment date, at 105 per cent of their principal amount and accrued interest, convertible at their principal amount into Class A common stock of Theatres at a price to be determined by us at the time the issue is authorized, but not less than $10 per share during the first year, and thereafter $15 per share, and to be secured by the pledge of Theatres' equity in the stock of Loew's, Inc., and such other collateral as Theatres may have available. The trust agreement under which they are issued shall provide that the corporation shall in each year, before paying any dividends on its Class A or Class B common stock, set aside all of its net earnings up to the sum of $2,000,000, cumulatively, as a sinking fund to be applied to the purchase of debentures at not exceeding the redemption price and to the extent debentures cannot be so purchased to the redemption of debentures.

II.

Offerings to Stockholders

The Film debentures and preferred stock shall be offered for subscription at their principal amount and par value to holders of the Class A Common stock and Class B common stock of Film in proportion to their holdings thereof. At least ten days' notice shall be given of the meeting of the stockholders of Film to authorize the proceedings to carry out the plan, and at the time of the giving of such notice the stockholders of Film shall be advised that, subject to the stockholders' action at said meeting, stockholders of record of Film on the day following the date on which the issue shall be authorized shall be entitled during such period as we may determine, not less than

Dropping or Re-negotiating of Number of Theatre Deals Demanded

Seeking New Deals

Dropping or re-negotiation of several theatre deals is provided for in reorganization plans of Fox. These are said to include the M. B. Shanberg chain in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska; Libson chain in Ohio and Michigan, and the Hoblitzelle chain in the South. These deals previously were announced as closed, but the owners are still operating them. Adolph Zukor made an unsuccessful bid for the Libson chain. Harold B. one week from such record date, to subscribe for debentures; and said notice of meeting shall be accompanied by appropriate forms for the exercise by stockholders of such right of subscription, but unless we shall otherwise determine, no warrants of certificates evidencing such right shall be issued. The rights to subscribe to preferred stock shall be evidenced by warrants or certificates issuable to stockholders of record of Film on the day after the preferred stock is authorized by the stockholders of Film, and said rights shall expire twenty days after said date.

The Theatres debentures shall be offered for subscription at their principal amount to the holders of the Class A common stock and Class B common stock of Theatres in proportion to their holdings thereof. The rights to subscribe for the Theatres debentures shall be evidenced by warrants or certificates which shall be issued to stockholders of Theatres of record on a date not more than ten days following the authorization of their issue by the stockholders of Theatres, and said rights to subscribe shall expire one year from said date or on the earlier call of the debentures for redemption.

III.

Underwriting

We will endeavor, on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth, to organize a syndicate or syndicates (of which we may be managers and members) to underwrite said offerings to stockholders of Film of the Film debentures and preferred stock at the offering prices. The compensation of these syndicates and their syndicate managers shall aggregate an amount in cash equal to 9 per cent of the aggregate principal amount and par value of the respective offerings, and in addition thereto, 65,000 shares* of Class A common stock of Film, fully paid and non-assessable, provided, however, that if by reason of the non-fulfillment of any condition herein set forth other than that set forth in Clause 10 of paragraph X hereof or for any other reason other than a default on the part of ourselves or any syndicate which we may cause to be organized hereunder, said Film debentures or preferred stock shall not be created or tendered to or accepted by the syndicate in accordance with the terms and conditions hereof, Film shall pay to us, in case we shall have organized a syndicate or syndicates for the purposes of the plan and so notified Film in writing, in full payment for our services and of the services of any syndicates which we may have caused to be organized, an amount in cash equal to 1½ per cent of the aggregate principal amount and par value of said proposed offerings.

The offering of the Theatres debentures to the stockholders of Theatres shall be underwritten by Film at the offering price, and as compensation therefor Film shall receive an amount in cash equal to 9 per cent of the principal amount of the Theatres debentures offered. In view of the long period of time during which the Theatres stockholders are to be entitled to subscribe for the Theatres debentures and the immediate need of Theatres for cash, Film shall on the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, take up the Theatres debentures, subject to the subscription rights of the Theatres stockholders.

We may, if we so determine, cause to be issued and sold at any time interim receipts or certificates calling for the delivery of any of the new securities if, as and when issued and delivered to us, and Film shall pay all expenses in connection with the printing and delivery thereof and shall make the usual adjustment for loss of interest in connection therewith.

Film shall, at our request, make application to list the Film debentures and preferred stock on such exchanges as we may designate. Film shall also furnish us with such information, and shall take such action as we may reasonably request in order to qualify the Film debentures and preferred stock for public issue under the so-called blue sky laws in the states where we may desire to offer said debentures and preferred stock.

IV.

Voting Trusts

Inasmuch as the new money to be provided by the financing is approximately twice the present market value of the equity of Film, based on current quotations of its Class A common stock, it is imperative that the holders of the new securities shall be assured of continuity of satisfactory management. To that end at least a majority of the outstanding shares of Class B common stock of Film and all the shares of the Class B common stock of Theatres shall be deposited under voting trusts, the voting trustees under both of which shall be satisfactory to us. Both voting trusts shall continue for a period of 5 years and thereafter so long as any of the Film debentures or Film preferred stock shall be outstanding, but not exceeding an additional 5 years. During the continuance of the voting trusts the entire voting power of the deposited stock shall be vested in the voting trustees, provided, however, that the voting trustees shall not, without the consent of at least a majority in interest of the voting trust certificates exercise their voting power;

(a) to make any alteration or amendment of any provision of the certificate of incorporation of either of the corporations which would tend to change or diminish the voting power of the deposited Class B common stock, except as contemplated by the foregoing plan ;

(b) to sell or convey substantially all the property, rights, privileges and franchises of either of the corporations, except to the other of them, or, in the case of Film, unless the net earnings available for dividends on stock and sinking fund on the debentures shall in each of two consecutive years be less than $5,000,000;

(c) to merge or consolidate either corporation into or with, another corporation, except into, or with, the other of the corporations, or, in the case of Film, unless the net earnings available for dividends on stock and sinking fund on the debentures shall in each of two consecutive years be less than $5,000,000; or

(d) to dissolve either of the corporations.

Prior to the delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock there shall have been elected twelve directors of Film, all of whom shall be satisfactory to us, and a full board of directors of Theatres, which may include directors of Film, all of whom shall also be satisfactory to us, and the resignations of all officers of Film and Theatres shall be placed in the hands of the voting trustees.

Prior to the delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock there shall have been elected a chairman of the board, president, treasurer and comptroller of Film and Theatres satisfactory to us.

V.

Disposition of Proceeds

Theatres shall apply the net proceeds of the Theatres debentures approximately as follows:

$18,000,000 to the payment of Theatres' existing indebtedness to Film,

$15,000,000 to the payment of indebtedness to Electrical Research Products, Inc., and

$3,400,000 to miscellaneous corporate purposes.

Film shall apply the net proceeds of the offerings of the Film debentures and preferred stock approximately as follows:

$18,000,000, or such part thereof as may be necessary, to the payment of its underwriting obligations to Theatres,

$12,000,000, to the payment of the $12,000,000, principal amount, of 6% gold notes of Film dated April 1, 1929, due April 1, 1930,

$14,300,000 to the payment of obligations incurred in connection with the acquisition of an interest in Gaumont-British Picture Corp., Ltd.,

$5,800,000 to the payment of unsecured bank loans, and $9,050,000, and any part of the above-mentioned $18,000,000 not required to meet said underwriting obligations, for payment of indebtedness, construction requirements and miscellaneous corporate purposes.

VI.

Adjustment with Mr. Fox

We understand that Mr. Fox has voluntarily offered and agreed to assign to Film all of his interest in Fox-Hearst Corp.

You have also advised us that Mr. Fox has personally paid for and now personally owns ninety per cent of the stock of American Tri-Ergon Corporation and fifty per cent of the stock of Grandeur Corporation and that he has made the following agreements with you:

1. That on or before February 13 he will cause American Tri-Ergon Corp., on behalf of itself and any successor corporation by merger, consolidation or sale of substantially all its assets, and its subsidiaries, to execute and deposit with Hon. Frank J. Coleman, for delivery to Film and Theatres on the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, an agreement granting and agreeing to grant to Film and Theatres, and their similar successors and subsidiaries, non-exclusive, non-assignable, royalty-free licenses under all patents or patent rights now owned or controlled by American Tri-Ergon Corporation, its successors and subsidiaries, and under all patents and patent rights useful in connection with recording or reproducing sound or pictures which at any time within twenty-five years shall be owned or controlled by said American Tri-Ergon Corporation, its successors and subsidiaries; provided, however, that if it shall be necessary for the purpose of providing for the holders of the remaining ten per cent of the stock of American Tri-Ergon Corporation, Film and Theatres, their successors and subsidiaries, may be required to pay royalties at a rate not exceeding ten per cent of the lowest rate from time to time charged by American Tri-Ergon Corporation to any other licensee: and

2. That on or before February 13 he will cause to be vested in a new company to be organized under the laws of the State of New York, fifty per cent of the stock of Grandeur, Inc.; that the new company shall have no power to enter into any business other than to hold said stock or any other securities or other property which it may receive as such stockholder; that on or before February 13 he will cause the new company to execute and deposit with Bank of America N. A., for delivery to Film and Theatres on the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, an agreement with Film and Theatres for the benefit of themselves and any successor corporations by merger, consolidation or sale of substantially all their assets, and their subsidiaries, (1) that it will indemnify Film and Theatres, their successors and subsidiaries, from and against (a) fifty per cent of all amounts which Grandeur, Inc., its successors or subsidiaries, may require to be paid by Film or Theatres, their successors or subsidiaries, whether by way of royalties, damages or accounting for profits or otherwise (excluding reasonable service charges) for the use or infringement of the patents or patent rights of Grandeur, its successors or subsidiaries, useful in connection with recording or reproducing sound or pictures, and (b) fifty per cent of the profits of Grandeur, Inc., its successors or subsidiaries, on any apparatus or service furnished by it or them to Film or Theatres, their successors or subsidiaries, and (2) that it will not dispose of any of said stock in Grandeur, Inc., or permit Grandeur, Inc., its successors or subsidiaries, to dispose of any of their patents or patent rights unless such new company shall first have caused Grandeur, Inc., its successors or subsidiaries, as the case may be, to grant and agree to grant to Film and Theatres, their successors and subsidiaries, licenses under all patents or patent rights useful in connection with recording or reproducing sound or pictures then owned or controlled by Grandeur, Inc., or which at any time within twenty-five years shall be owned or controlled by Grandeur, Inc., its successors or subsidiaries, and to use apparatus supplied by Grandeur, Inc., at rates not exceeding fifty per cent of the lowest rates from time to time charged by Grandeur, Inc., to any other licensee, and otherwise on as favorable terms as are granted to any other licensee; and that on or before the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock he will cause the certificates for said stock of Grandeur, Inc., held by the new company to be transferred into its name, an appropriate notation of said agreement to be stamped upon the certificates for said stock and Grandeur, Inc., to be given an appropriate notice of the existence of said agreement.

We also understand that Mr. Fox and Film, and Mr. Fox and Theatres, have agreed to submit to arbitration under the Arbitration Law of New York whatever claims, if any, Film or Theatres, or any subsidiary of either of them, may have against him (other than as above provided for), or he may have against any of them. In each case one arbiter shall be appointed by Mr. Fox, one by Film or Theatres, as the case may be, after the election of the new boards of directors contemplated by the plan, and one by the two arbiters thus chosen, or in the event of their failure to agree, by the court.

VII.

Compensation

As compensation to us for our services in devising and carrying out the plan, there shall be issued and delivered to us, upon the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, 135,000 shares of Class A common stock of Film, fully paid and non-assessable.*

You shall also reimburse us for the fees and disbursements of our auditors and counsel, whether or not the plan is consummated.

VIII.

Conditions

The obligations of any syndicate which we may organize to underwrite the offerings to the stockholders of Film, as above provided, and our obligation to endeavor to form such a syndicate or syndicates, shall be subject to the following further conditions:

1. That on or before the date fixed for the delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, we shall have received from Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. a report confirming that the annexed balance sheets, income and other financial statements of Film and Theatres, and their subsidiaries, which you have furnished us (being Exhibits A to J inclusive), are substantially correct and represent the financial condition of each of said corporations as of the date thereof and that on the date thereof there were no liabilities, contingent or otherwise, not appearing on said balance sheets other than (a) obligations under contracts incurred in the normal course of business with stars, dramatists, producers (for not more than one year's production) and salaries to officers and executives, (b) rental obligations under leases incurred in the normal course of operations, and (c) obligations not exceeding $50,000 under any other one contract.

2. That there shall have been no substantial adverse change in the financial condition of said corporations from the dates of said balance sheets to the date of delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock.

3. That the form and terms (subject to the terms hereof) of the Film debentures, the trust agreement under which they are issued, the warrants to be attached to the Film debentures, the preferred stock of Film, the Theatres debentures, the indenture under which they are to be issued, the voting trust agreements, the warrants or certificates evidencing the subscription rights granted to Film and Theatres stockholders, and all other instruments used in carrying out the plan, shall be satisfactory to us.

4. That on or before the date of delivery of the Film debentures and the preferred stock, the holders of Class A and Class B common stock of Film and Theatres shall have approved this plan, shall have taken all necessary corporate action to authorize its being carried out, and all the provisions of the plan, other than such delivery and payment therefor, shall have been consummated.

Number of Properties to be Turned Over by Fox to Film and Theatres

5. That all legal matters in connection with the consummation of the plan shall be subject to the approval of our counsel, Messrs. Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, and Messrs Chadbourne, Stanchfield & Levy on our behalf.

6. That at the date of delivery of the Film debentures and the preferred stock (a) there shall have been cancelled, or re-negotiated in a manner satisfactory to us, the contracts for the purchase by Film of certain theatres in the State of Ohio and in Grand Rapids, Michigan, known as the Libson and Heidingsfeld Circuit and certain theatres in the Southwest known as the Hoblitzelle Circuit and for the purchase by West Coast Theatres Corporation of the Midland Circuit, the T. & D. Jr. Circuit and the Arkush Circuit; (b) all amounts owing by Film to Wesco Corporation or any of its subsidiaries, shall have been liquidated or adjusted in a manner satisfactory to us; and (c) there shall not be outstanding any contracts of Film or Theatres, or any of the subsidiaries of either of them, which in our opinion materially adversely affect the interests of Film or Theatres.

7. That all preferential banking contracts of Film and Theatres and their subsidiaries with bankers shall be cancelled.

8. That all proceedings by Film and Theatres necessary in the opinion of our counsel to authorize the consummation of the plan shall have been completed on or before March 20, or such later date as may be agreed to by us, and any Film debentures or preferred stock which the syndicates shall be obligated to take up and pay for upon said underwritings shall be tendered at the office of Bancamerica-Blair Corp., 24 Broad Street, New York, N. Y., on or before April 15, 1930, such Film debentures and preferred stock to be tendered simultaneously.

9. That hearings upon the motions now pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York for the appointment of receivers of your properties and assets shall, from time to time, be adjourned until the date fixed for delivery of the Film debentures and preferred stock, and at the time of such delivery the bills upon which such motions have been made shall have been dismissed and no similar proceedings shall be pending in any court.

10. That there shall not have occurred, prior to the date of the delivery of and payment for the Film debentures and preferred stock by any underwriting syndicate formed by us, any event of a political or financial character affecting market conditions, which in the judgment of the undersigned shall have rendered impracticable the public offering or sale of the Film debentures or the preferred stock.

If the foregoing plan is acceptable to you, please advise us that it has been accepted by action of your respective boards of directors, subject to the action of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in the proceedings now pending for the

Fox Film Gross Up $4,000,000

For the first twenty-six weeks of the 1929-1930 fiscal year domestic collections and billings for Fix Film were $4,000,000 in excess of 1928.

These figures came to light this week as part of an audit of Fox books prepared for Lehman Brothers, Bancamerica-Blair Company and Dillon, Read & Co. in connection with the refinancing plan of the Fox enterprises.

Beginning August 28, 1929, and ending February 15, 1930, which comprises the first half of the corporation's year, total film sales for the United States and Canada reached approximately $26,000,000. For the entire 1928-1929 year, the company did a domestic business of $29,000,000.

Present indications are this will be topped by about $1,000,000 for 1929-1930. The financial difficulties of the Fox corporations have left no mark on the intensive activity maintained in the sales department by James R. Grainger. The business this year is record. All branches are in the midst of an anniversary drive, spotting in play dates which mean immediate cash and annexing accounts hitherto new on Fox books.

With the end of the season in sight, Grainger has set the week of May 25 for the annual sales convention. Los Angeles, Atlantic City and New York are under consideration, final decision to be made before Grainger leaves Hollywood some time in March.

Winfield Sheehan expects to leave for the coast in a few weeks and will discuss 1930-1931 pictures with Grainger at the studio.

J. R. Grainger Week to Be Observed by Fox Force

J. R. Grainger Week will be observed June 15 to 21 by the Fox sales organization, as a tribute to the Fox general sales manager.

The home office committee named to aid Fox managers to handle the event includes: Jack Sichelman, E. C. Grainger, George Roberts, W. J. Kupper, Max Roth, John Nolan, Jack Schlaifer, Nat B. Finkler and Roger Ferri.

Grainger in New Orleans On Quick Selling Trip

New Orleans—James R. Grainger is here from Atlanta, conferring with Southern Fox managers. Clyde Eckhardt, Chicago sales chief, came from Chicago to meet him. Together they will return to the Windy City and then Grainger will head for New York.

Fire-eating Jimmy Grainger, restless sales manager for Fox, who answers charges that financial difficulties have shattered the morale of his selling crew, by pointing to record business rolled up the first 26 weeks of the Fox fiscal year.

shares of stock, and that the outcome would necessarily be a receivership if there were not, fortunately, another and more practical plan accepted by the board of directors and now on its way to the stockholders.

That is why I refer to the Halsey, Stuart plan as a "mere gesture" and an attempt to force a receivership, which disaster the companies are in a fair way of averting through the bankers' plan.

In order to rescue these companies from receivership, Mr. Fox is surrendering his controlling stock to the voting trustees named by the bankers, in whose good faith and sense of fair play he has confidence. They will name seven of the twelve directors and Class A stockholders will name the other five until the $65,000,000 of securities about to be issued are repaid.

appointment of receivers. Upon receipt of such advice on or before February 13 and prior to the hearings now set in said proceedings for said date, and upon the further advice that said hearings are being adjourned to enable the consummation of the plan, we will proceed with our efforts to carry out the plan with all possible dispatch.

Restraint of Trade Charged in Extended Clearance at Affiliated Houses

Pittsburgh—Marshaling of forces to assure speedy prosecution of its intended court fight against extended protection, is under way by the western Pennsylvania exhibitor unit, charging clearance given affiliated houses is driving independents out of business and constitutes a conspiracy in restraint of trade. Members are being asked to pledge all they can afford to aid in the fight.

The association takes the position other independents have assumed, insisting that talkers, particularly those containing popular songs, must be played within a reasonable time or they become valueless. Ageing of the songs automatically kills off draw of the pictures, it is asserted, and unless some relief is forthcoming independents will be driven out of business. The organization terms its campaign "the battle for existence."

Similar court action is planned by New Jersey exhibitors.

Rap Copyright Bureau Tactics

Pittsburgh—Pledging co-operation in just enforcement of copyright laws, the western Pennsylvania exhibitor unit has launched an attack upon activities of the Copyright Protection Bureau, sponsored by distributors.

Wholesale prosecution for infringements, alleged caused in most cases by exchangemen, and which could be prevented by notice to the exhibitor when he makes an apparent mistake of his contract rights, are denounced by the organization. These prosecutions do not tend to bring about enforcement of the law, but, instead, tend to demoralize the industry and confuse exhibitors, it is asserted.

Giant Building to House Six N. Y. Amusements

A 63-story amusement center which would house six theatres with garage to accommodate 20,000 cars, is in the stage of planning by the National Broadcasting Co. on Fifth Ave. between 48th and 51st Sts., RCA and RKO. All three companies have denied any such intended building

Plans call for a picture theatre as one of the six places of amusement under one roof, that will seat 6,700, making it the largest in the world. A smaller picture theatre also will be included as well as a legitimate, musical comedy, and vaudeville house, and an auditorium to house a symphony orchestra. Sound films of each successful show running would be roadshowed, under tentative plans. S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) is reported as con-

Decorated

Frederick L. Herron, manager of the foreign department of the Hays organization, has received from King Alfonzo XIII of Spain, a decoration known as the “Encomienda de la Real Orden de Isabel la Catolica of Spain.” This decoration which comes through Don Alejandro Padilla y Bell, Ambassador of Spain, at Washington, is in recognition of Colonel Herron's interest and activities in seeking to have Spanish nationals correctly portrayed in American pictures.

Street Says “Yes” to Denied B. & H. Merger Rumors

Wall Street insists that Bell and Howell are all set for a merger deal, reports crediting Eastman Kodak, and others, with acquisition of the old-line camera outfit.

Bell and Howell's New York manager told a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that there was absolutely no truth to the report, and Eastman Kodak denied the reported purchase, but Wall Street still insists that Bell and Howell are all set for a merger deal.

An official at Eastman pointed out that the government's eagle eye would stand in the way of such a deal, stating that Eastman was “cagey” over a deal of this kind, because it would sew up the 16 mm. field, leaving but one competitor—Q. R. S.-De Vry, and the Federal Trade Commission “would never stand for that.”

Students Riot When Free Theatre Seats Are Denied

Albion, Mich.—When George Bohn, theatre owner, refused to admit free 300 students of Albion College, a riotous celebration followed which sent many students to the city jail. The students stormed the theatre in celebration of a basketball victory, claiming the management agreed to admit them free in case of victory.

N.D. Invasion Threat Seen If Sunday Shows Granted

Bismark, N. D.—Sunday show campaign is continuing in this state, although some exhibitors fear that victory for the measure will bring wholesale invasion of the state by Publix, which now operates in but few towns of the state. Petitions now are being circulated calling for a referendum on Sunday shows.

Famous Players Canadian on Velvet After 3 Months

Montreal—Dividend of $2 on the common already has been earned by Famous Players Canadian Corp., in the first quarter of the current fiscal year, it is understood, so that the net for the remaining nine months will be velvet.

Some Album

Because he recognized from a photograph in a fan magazine the name of his wife inscribed with that of Lew Cody on the door of the star's dressing room, with an A. W. O. L. inscription, Capt. Wallace C. Ayer divorced his actress wife, Mae Ayer in Kentucky, he declared in Supreme Court, New York in reply to her motion for counsel fees and alimony. “All kinds of wisecracks and endearing legends were inscribed on the door,” it is alleged.

French Industry In Tough State; Hits Low Level

Washington—Abrupt change from silent to sound and the protracted quota controversy in France during 1929 resulted in depressing the industry in that country to the lowest level reached in seven years.

U. S. Trade Commissioner Canty, in Paris, reports to the M. P. Division of the Dept. of Commerce that production in France reflected a 44 per cent. slump under 1929. Total picture consumption dropped 25 per cent.; American importations dropped over 32 per cent., while German films continued their steady increase since 1924, with a 6 per cent. jump in 1929 over 1928 figures.

Manitoba Censor Law Has Queer Twist for Kids

Winnipeg—Adult scale admissions only may be sold for films placed by censors in the "special" class, under terms of the regulations recently adopted by the provincial government. This is to discourage kid attendance, although this can be overcome through purchase by children of adult tickets. The new law specifies that films must be designated as "special" or "general," according to their suitability. Ontario and Alberta have the "adult" and "universal" classification.

"Free and Easy," M-G-M'S First Talker in Spanish

Hollywood—M-G-M will produce a Spanish version of "Free and Easy," Buster Keaton's first musical talker. The picture was selected as the initial try in Spanish dialogue because of its adaptability through long sequences of silent and sound passages, plus the fact that Keaton's lines are very brief throughout. The comedian will dialogue in Spanish, with Anita Page, also in the regular production, playing opposite. Ralph de Alberich will coach Keaton in his Spanish, besides supervising the production.

Novel Silent Feature Proves Box Office Hit

Montreal—"Shiraz," a novel silent film produced in India, is having quite a run in Eastern Canada. At the Roxy, the feature was held over for a second week despite the presence of big wired theatres in the immediate vicinity.

Flagpole Sitters

Hollywood—A dialogue writer at M-G-M stopped in for a conference with Irving Thalberg. The waiting room was crowded with writers and directors ahead of him. Two hours later he returned, but still the same group sat fast. Three hours later—but no one had moved apparently. As he was exiting this time, the writer turned to a director recently imported from New York and said:

"Now I know where all of these professional flagpole sitters get their training."

Standard Camera Silencing Device To Improve Recording Sought by Studios

Preliminary Tests Completed, To Be Followed by Others Until Aim Is Reached

Hollywood—A standard silencing device with an efficiency as close to maximum as can be obtained, is the aim of producers. Efforts to improve recording by reducing the whirr of gears in camera hoods are responsible for an analysis of the merits of sixteen different camera silencing devices used in Hollywood. The data forms the basis of a report just made public by the Producers-Technicians Joint Committee of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences, of which Irving G. Thalberg is chairman.

The aim is not an attempt at new camera design, but concerns the development of a standard silencing device of maximum efficiency without the expense and delay entailed in perfecting entirely new cameras.

The tests, just concluded, were made by a sub-committee headed by H. G. Knox, vice president of Electrical Research Products and F. M. Sammis, coast representative of RCA Photophone. Sound booths large enough to hold camera and cameraman were not embraced in the tests which were limited to "blimps," "bungalows" and camera blankets. Preliminary recommendations include:

Motors should be mounted as an integral part of the camera so that any external silencing device will be effective for both.

Devices for coupling the motors to the cameras, including cables and gears, should be improved to provide more quiet operation.

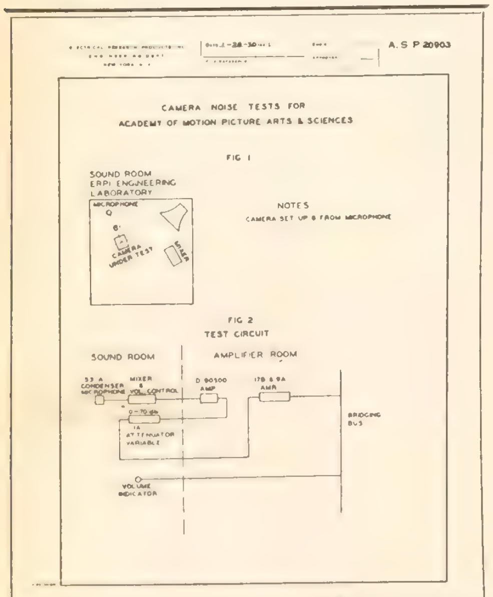
The type of tripod used does not seem to have much effect on the noise. On the basis of these preliminary results, the use of a heavy steel tripod seems unnecessary in so far as sound insulation is concerned. Covering the tripod with blankets seems to help in reducing any tendency to vibrate.

Photographing through glass reduces the noise transmitted through the silencing device.

The amount of noise transmitted through the silencing device appeared to be nearly independent of the direction of the pickup device from the camera.

Rough quantitative observations indicate that the various blimps and bungalows absorb more high than low frequencies.

The camera mechanism should be properly serviced and maintained so that it will remain quiet. Some cameras tested were noisier than others of the same make.



Sound proof rooms in the Hollywood laboratory of Electrical Research Products, Inc., were used for the tests. Figure No. 1 shows the arrangement of the camera and microphone.

The microphone was suspended at normal camera height and placed as shown, six feet from the center of the tripod supporting the camera. Since this setup was used for all of the tests, the results are directly comparable from the point of view of sound insulation for the various camera silencing devices.

Figure No. 2 presents a schematic diagram of the circuit employed, similar to a standard recording channel, with the introduction of an accurate variable accenuator. The mixer and volume control dials were not used for the quantitative measurements, but were set on their minimum loss positions.

The method used in determining the noise from a given camera, and associated motor, was to measure the noise with the volume indicator. A variable attenuator was adjusted to give standard deflection to the volume indicator, sufficient gain being provided by the amplifiers so that a definite attenuator reading could be obtained even for a quiet room. The amplifier gains and volume indicator readings were kept constant throughout the series of tests. The sound insulation value of the device under test, whether it be a blanket, bag, composition bungalow or metal housing. will then be the difference between the attenuator readings for the camera and motor without and with the silencing device. Room noise during the tests was in all cases five to ten db below the quietest camera condition measured.

As a means of determining roughly the relation between the sound intensity obtained from the cameras with their silencing devices and the sound level occurring under talking picture conditions, a few measurements were made of normal speech and whispering at a distance of six feet from the microphone, that is, from the tripod position. The noise from many of the cameras tested with the better silencing devices gave a sound intensity of the same order of magnitude as a loud whisper, and could not therefore be used for very quiet scenes, unless the camera is some distance from the microphone. Since this condition exists, many of the cameras tested must be used at least ten to fifteen feet from the microphone in order that the camera noise will not be objectionably loud.

The use of heavy steel tripods does not seem to contribute to noise reduction. Wrapping blankets around the tripod legs seems to reduce the nose picked up by the microphone in some cases. It is probable that excessive vibration in a camera caused by a defective mechanism, loose film in the spools in the magazines, or loose gears in the motor drive, will be more readily transmitted to the legs and so cause trouble. The effect of insulation of the tripod head has not been definitely determined.

It should be kept in mind that elaborate silencing devices are not required in all of the places where the camera is used, the report points out. For outdoor shots, crowd sequences, musical sequences, in fact most scenes where the camera is quite far from the microphone, only a moderate degree of sound insulation is required. Pre-recorded and silent shots, of course, require no sound insulation.

Hear RCA Photophone Sales Plan Outlined

Selling methods to put over RCA Photophone's Type G equipment in all houses seating up to 1,000 were explained to district managers and sales representatives at a luncheon held at the N. Y. Athletic Club in New York the other day.

At the head table, reading from left to right: H. L. Sommerer, manager recording division; J. W. Rafferty, assistant sales manager in charge of industrial and educational department; Gerald K. Rudulph, director of publicity and advertising; L. B. Morris, general counsel; A. E. Reoch, vice-president; Charles J. Ross, executive vice-president; Sydney E. Abel, general sales manager; C. C. Chapelle, treasurer; J. E. Francis, manager of the installation and service department.

Three New District Heads Appointed by Sydney Abel

Three district managers have been named by Sydney E. Abel, sales manager of RCA Photophone. They are: George H. Wiley, northern New York with headquarters at Buffalo; H. L. Petty, Michigan with headquarters at Detroit; A. R. Johnson, the Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis territories with headquarters at Chicago.

Hollywood Highlights

By William A. Johnston

Hollywood—Three revues are in the making here, each of which is going to cause the first such efforts of the talkers to look pretty crude. In fact, they will probably eclipse any further efforts until the wide film comes along. They are "Paramount On Parade," Universal's "King of Jazz," and M-G-M'S "March of Time" (title tentative).

All are incomplete, but far enough advanced to make possible a definite enough appraisal, and the writer has been afforded the unusual opportunity of seeing theme in their present stage of production.

All are essentially different. There can be no comparison of excellence. If I were aswed which I would book I would have to answer: "All three." Any community that doesn't see each one will be cheated just that much—and that is very much.

"Paramount On Parade" is dominated by smartness and intimacy. The sweep of the picture is large; just the roster of Paramount personalities—Chevalier, George Bancroft, Clara Bow, Charles Rogers, William Powell, Harold Lloyd, Jack Oakie, Dennis King, Jeannette MacDonald, Mary Brian—to mention only a few stellar names—is a big show in itself. It is plain, however, that there has been a studied and successful effort to keep away from hippodroming and to please with a deft succession of highly original acts of varied emotional appeal. To mention a few: Lubitsch does a brilliant bit of direction with Chevalier in a park bench skit; Charles Rogers and Lillian Roth do so well in a song novelty number that Rogers has been cast for the lead in "Follow Through." Helen Kane has a successful "Boop-a-doop" number with a schoolroom of kiddies. Chevalier's rainbow number couples beauty with a sure-fire song hit, "Sweeping the Clouds Away." To me the grin of all was Ruth Chatterton's skit as a Parisian demi monde in an after the war sketch. Dennis King does the finale song of "The Vagabond King," with a travesty introduction in which Skeets Gallagher and Ludwig Berger assist. Remarkable originality has been achieved in the manner of introducing each number. "Paramount On Parade" will score heavily.

"The King of Jazz" is positively dazzling. It has magnitude, startling originality; its beauty is superb. John Murray Anderson has outdone himself—and incidentally Ziegfeld. The danger might have been in so grand an endeavor to miss the human emotional appeal. But it is generously there. Whiteman himself constitutes no small part of the fun. The beautiful and touching "Bridal Veil" scene will strain the feminine hearts and tear ducts. There are many intimate numbers with skilled performers and striking backgrounds. The song, beautifully portrayed at length, "A Bench in the Park," seems certain to be a hit. The finale of the melting pot is undoubtedly the greatest in concept, sweep, magnificence and music ever presented or likely to be presented for some time to this bewildering new vehicle of the so-called talking picture. And even so, people will talk most about the marvelous "Rhapsody in Blue" scene, which, in music, beauty and originality, is an outstanding thing. Whiteman's band and Whiteman himself, with fantastic backgrounds and surprise effects, knit and hold together the whole remarkable production.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer revue shows us the greatest of Broadway's favorites of a generation ago; Fay Templeton, Marie Dressler, DeWolf Hopper, Willie Collier, Joe Weber, Lew Fields, Louis Mann, Barney Fagan and, revising the procedure, shows to these celebrities the modern stage empire of Jazz and Ballet. The title, only tentative, "March of Time," expresses the concept, namely, a review of the American musical comedy stage. There will be many everywhere who will grow sentimental over the famous songs, skits and acting that sent the country's population treking to New York in the gay nineties; and the new generation will lack only the sentimental to their desire to see and their appreciation of these masters of entertainment. There will be two or more distinct parts to the review, each with a rousing finale. In one of these there is the largest chorus of the most beautiful dancing girls ever seen on stage or screen; as they sweep down from the wings of a huge golden stairway, Fay Templeton appears from a lift to the rear and sings, while the group of stage celebrities wheel to a line in the foreground. Back of the enormous set is a lofty shadow of Father Time. Fay Templeton preserves to a wonderful degree her famous golden voice.

Overseas Talkers

American talking pictures are the rage in the Orient.

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford return from their Far East trip with amazing stories of motion picture progress in Japan and the trade ports of China. All of which is of significance in the present tangle of thought among the studios on foreign versions of American talking pictures.

Japan, Shanghai, Hong Kong, etc., don't want any foreign versions. They want the Simon pure English speaking pictures. That is, young Japan and young China want them. They want to learn to speak English, the study of which, by the way, is compulsory in the schools of Japan; also they want to see everything that illustrates American life and progress. This young generation is packing the theatres today. Tokyo has a big, modern talker-equipped theatre, seating four thousand. Shanghai has a chain of forty theatres, many of them equipped for sound, within her city limits.

Japan has a lot of studios. One of them turns out a hundred and four pictures a year. The most popular are those that show the up-to-the-minute life of the large centres. The older generation doesn't care much for the movies.

I hear also that an American talking picture—Paramount's "The Doctor's Secret"—ran three weeks in Stockholm. Evidently they are content there with American versions. Also, one recalls the important fact that English is taught in the schools of Holland.

So we need domestic as well as foreign versions abroad.

Iwerks Turns Producer Making Cartoon Series

UB Iwerks, cartoonist of the "Mickey" Mouse" and "Silly Symphony" series of Disney sound cartoons, has become a producer in his own right and is now preparing a new star to be known as "Flip the Frog." The debut will be made in the next few weeks under the auspices of Celebrity Prod., current distributors of the Disney cartoons. Definite releasing arrangements subsequently will be announced. Plans call for production of this new series of cartoons in color as well as in black and white form. The series will consist of 12 subjects to be released at the rate of one each month beginning on or about March 1.

M-G-M Renews Two Contracts

Hollywood—M-G-M has exercised options on contracts of Frances Marion, scenarist, and Arthur Freed, song writer.

Shift in Publix Houses

Tampa, Fla.—Another shift of managers in the Publix houses here. Paul Short, recently appointed manager of the Victory, was transferred to the Tampa, succeeding John McKenna, who goes to Jackson, Tenn. O. G. Finley, former manager of the Seminole, takes over management of the Victory.

Bill Calls for Repeal of N. Y. Censorship Law

Albany—Repeal of New York's censorship law is provided for in a bill now in committee. Assemblyman Langdon W. Post, New York, is sponsor.

If sufficient interest develops there will be a public hearing later on. The bill proposes to wind up the picture censorship division, which is located in the Education Department, on July 1 next, but carries the provision that the abolishment of censorship shall not affect any suits or pending proceedings before the division.

1 or 2 Talkers Per Year Is Plan of Harold Lloyd

One release a year and perhaps two will be made by Harold Lloyd, who intends to stick to his policy of filming originals, rather than remake any of his past successes. Lloyd's last two pictures were 18 months apart.

Progress on the idea Lloyd is developing for his new film indicates it will be started by the first of April. One-third of the picture will be filmed aboard an ocean liner.

Warner Theatre Policy Change

Switch of policy at the New York Strand, giving that house precedence over the Beacon and the Strand, Brooklyn, has been made by Harry Charnas, managing director of Warners' metropolitan theatres. Under the plan, the latter houses play pictures following the New York run. Heretofore, the policy was day and date at the three houses.

"U," Planning New Policy, Hasn't a Thought of Mergers, Metzger States

Company to Continue Silents; Make Multi-Linguals—Less Emphasis on Shorts

Chicago—Universal, planning a policy of specials only, as outlined exclusively by Motion Picture News, is not considering any mergers and intends to continue production of silents, as well as to make multi-lingual films.

The company's plans were outlined here by Lou B. Metzger, general manager, while en route to the Coast, where he will confer with Carl Laemmle and other Universal officials on the new policy. Eighteen is the tentative number of films to be made under the new plan.

The new policy of concentrating on big productions, Metzger believes, will lead to fewer feature releases and less emphasis being placed on short subjects.

No Abatement in Silents

"Just as long as there are enough unwired houses remaining to justify the procedure, Universal will continue to make silent pictures," Metzger stated. "Multi-lingual releases are also on the program and are certain to include at the outset French, German and Spanish versions in addition to the English."

The Universal foreign market is sound, even prosperous, according to N. Manheim, director of Universal's foreign department, who was a member of Mr. Metzger's party.

The month of April looms large on Universal's calendar for the immediate future. "All Quiet on the Western Front" has been completed, it was announced, and will be released that month. In addition, April will see the release of "The King of Jazz Revue," featuring Paul Whiteman's band, John Boles and a selected cast; "La Marseillaise" and "Singing Caballero."

Color will be a feature of these and future Universal releases, Mr. Metzger stated. He predicted the opening of a new era of color which, he said, has been accepted by the public and will eventually be demanded of all productions in the future.

One Recording System Seen

Metzger also voiced the opinion that sound reproduction will eventually be by one method only. Either disc or sound on film, he said, must give way, one to the other, the advantage resting with the process which will be first to give the best results at least cost to the exhibitor.

"It does not seem probable that both methods will exist forever," he said.

Mr. Metzger was questioned on the possibility of a merger involving Universal.

"Our record of 23 years as an independent speaks for itself," was his answer. "And that record is not in danger of being terminated while it is fostered by Carl Laemmle," he added.

Besides Manheim, the party included Mrs. Metzger and Verne Porter, former Hearst newspaper and publication chieftain, recently made eastern scenario editor of Universal.

Free Lance Contract Approved

Hollywood—Final ratification of the new standard free lance players contract was made at a meeting attended by more than 250 actors. All players present affixed their signatures to a resolution endorsing the new contract which goes into effect as soon as forms can be secured from the printer.

Concessions to the actor, embodied in the contract, are generally believed to have been influenced by efforts of Actors' Equity in introducing Equity-shop into coast studios

Garson to Do Jungle Film for Universal in Borneo

Hollywood—Harry Garson will produce an all-sounder in the wilds of Borneo for Universal. Garson leaves for Singapore May 5 with three principal players and staff of technicians and cameramen. A chartered yacht will be boarded at Singapore, and all locations will be covered via this boat, which will be permanent headquarters during production. Garson says the story is a strong melodrama with a jungle background.

Indianapolis to Have $1,000,000 Suburban

Indianapolis—Spring will witness the laying of foundation on the north side, of what is expected to be the most pretentious picture house in a neighborhood district in this territory. The theatre, seating 4,000, will be built at an estimated cost of $1,000,000, designed in the Chinese motif, and covers an entire block. It will be a link in one of the national chain theatre organizations, the name of which was not divulged.

Fox Renews Options with 12 Players and Directors

Hollywood.—Fox has renewed options on contracts with 12 players, directors and writers during the past two weeks. Maureen O'Sullivan and Thomas Clifford, youthful Irish players who appeared in John McCormack's first production, have been given contracts.

Mona Maris, Frank Albertson, Rex Bell, Richard Keene, Thomas Clifford and Frank Richardson are contract players continuing on options.

John Blystone and A. F. Erickson, directors with Fox for several years, also had options renewed for additional terms, as were William Kernell, composer, and Frank Tresselt, in charge of singing choruses.

Pauline Frederick Row on Yarns Causes W. B. Split

Hollywood—Pauline Frederick's starring contract with Warners, calling for her appearance in two more pictures for that company, has been cancelled by mutual agreement. Cause of the break was reported as dissatisfaction on the part of the star over her next story, "Fame," but this is denied. Another report stated Miss Frederick had not rated starring potentialities in talkers, with the company wishing to get from under the two-picture contract.

Belle Bennett goes into the featured spot in "Fame" instead of Frederick.

Three for Bow All Set

Hollywood.—With Clara Bow returning from an eastern vacation in a few weeks, Paramount has rearranged the production schedule of Bow starring pictures. Her first will be "True to the Navy" under direction of Frank Tuttle, with "Quarantine" and "The Humming Bird" to follow.

2 Sunday Show Convictions

Jacksonville, Tex.—Sunday shows continue to be a subject of controversy in a number of Texas towns. At Jacksonville, H. Cook, Palace operator, was fined $50 for a Sunday show, while at Gainesville A. V. Wade was fined $40 and Jack Nolan $20 for violating the "blue" law.

New Studio for Burbank

Burbank, Cal.—An ordinance is being drafted by the city council to permit building of a studio building on Delaware road, in Benmar Hills subdivision near Burbank.

Hudson Federal Censor Bill, the Most Drastic to Date, Slated for Junk Pile

Washington Produces a Super-Man

Washington—Can you imagine any commission determining the length of a kiss, or the costume worn by a cabaret performer? Yet that is what Representative Hudson would do via his measure proposing a Federal censorship commission. That's not all. He would prohibit block booking and settle all trade disputes and generally watch this business from author right down the line to audience. It's a job, but the estimable Congressman says it can be done.

Rabid Measure Has No Chance In Either House or Senate, Washington Believes

Washington—The most drastic censorship bill which this industry has ever faced—the Hudson bill—hasn't a chance. This is the opinion of legislative observers in Washington.

Before any action could be taken it would be necessary to hold hearings which would prove lengthy and bitterly controversial. Any effort to pass the bill in the House would also start a partisan squabble. Regardless of what action the House might take, moreover, there is no chance that the Senate would give the measure any consideration during this session in view of the mass of legislation now piling up.

Hudson proposes to establish a Federal M. P. Commission, four of the nine members of which would be women. The legislation holds motion pictures to be a public utility and then would regulate them to an extent never before attempted with any other public utility. Every picture made, sound or silent, would be produced under supervision of this dictatorial commission and no picture could be exhibited without a license. Hudson went the limit in arming his proposed measure with teeth.

A Few Ideas

For instance, censorship would be made effective by withholding licenses from the following:

Pictures which emphasize or exaggerate sex appeal or depict scenes exploiting interest in sex in a suggestive manner.

Pictures based on white slavery or commercialized vice or showing any activities attendant upon this traffic.

Pictures making prominent an illicit love affair which tends "to make virtue odious and vice attractive."

Pictures which exhibit nakedness or persons scantily dressed, particularly bedroom and bathroom scenes, and scenes of inciting dances.

Pictures which unnecessarily prolong expressions or demonstrations of passionate love.

Pictures predominantly concerned with the underworld of vice or crime, unless scenes are an essential part of a conflict between good and evil.

Pictures which make drunkenness and gambling attractive or which show the use of narcotics and other unnatural practices dangerous to social morality.

Pictures which by cumulative processes emphasize crime and the commission of crime

Pictures which ridicule or depreciate public officials, enforcement officers, Army or Navy officers, or which tend to weaken the authority of the law.

Pictures which offend the religious belief of anyone or which are disrespectful to religious symbols.

Pictures which unduly emphasize bloodshed or violence without justification in the structure of the story.

Pictures which are vulgar and portray improper gestures, posturing or attitudes.

Judge and Jury in One

In fact, under the Hudson bill the new commission would be set up as the final judge on almost every picture produced, and so wide a set of principles would be established that almost any picture made might be prohibited, changed or cut at the commission's order. Ninety percent of the pictures now showing could be scrapped by the commission on one count or another.

A little greater leeway would be given newsreels and educationals, but the commission would require that where polit-

24 Shorts, 3 Features on 1930 Colorart Schedule

Twenty-four shorts and three features all to be done in color, will comprise the 1930 program of Colorart Synchrotone Corp. The company, for the current season, scheduled 12 shorts and one feature, "Mamba," for release through Tiffany. Features scheduled for this year are: "Unkissed," "The Thrill Killer" and "The Beggars of Bagdad," by Perry Newberry and L. B. Jacobs, with music by Thomas Vincent Cator.

"U" Deal with Music Firm for Hook-Up

Handman, Kent & Goodman, Inc., music publishers, are understood to have closed a deal with Universal, under terms of which the firm will have publishing rights to all the music in future Universal pictures. Lou Handman and Frank Goodman are still in California where the deal is reported to have been made. William Kent, of the music firm, has no comment to make on the report.

Warner Brothers Not Seeking Site at Toronto

"Nothing to it," was comment of I. Silverman of the Warner theatre department, when questioned concerning report that Warners has made a bid for the Massey Music Hall, Toronto, as site for a theatre which would be the first house in a proposed Canadian chain.

Open Shop for Twin City Suburbans Seen Certain

Minneapolis—Independent Twin City suburban theatres are regarded as practically certain to go on an open shop basis. There is no concerted action, nor have overtures been made to the union by their association, the exhibitors adopting open shop one at a time. The union is declared making overtures to individual theatre men, asking that a second man be placed in the booth at $30, instead of $48.50.

Spoor Sells Out to H. J. Yates of Consolidated?

H. J. Yates is understood to have secured the Spoor-Thompson developing-machine patents from George K. Spoor, for Consolidated Film Industries.

50-50 Break for Tiffany on New "Troopers 3" Comedy

New York newspaper critics give widely-varied opinions on "Troopers Three" (Tiffany), ranging from "slapstick of the most elemental kind" to "an amusing, actionful photoplay."

Here's the line-up:

American . . . an amusing, actionful photoplay good enough to hold its own with most attractions, and to do even better than that with juvenile audiences. . . . audience fairly enjoyed the picture.

Daily Mirror—Good. . . . Thrilling horsemanship of the cavalry furnishes plenty of excitement . . . plenty of laughs. . . .

Daily News—You'll think this talkie mediocre, but five-year old Tommy can have a lot of fun seeing and hearing it. . . .

Graphic—. . . This talkie is undistinguished in its plot, direction and acting—just another bit of khaki-covered movie entertainment.

Herald-Tribune—. . . slapstick comedy which promises to have a favorable box-office draw . . . manages to be lively most of the time. . . .

Journal—Slapstick of the most elemental kind . . . an average program picture aimed at those who like their humor handed out in the most obvious form. . . .

Post—. . . manages at times to be amusing in a roughly naive way. . . .

Sun—. . . only the calvary scenes . . . are worth while . . . practically all . . . old stuff. What is worse, in that case, it isn't even done well.

Telegram—Several thrilling and spectacular sequences showing crack 11th U. S. Cavalry going through their maneouvres are the outstanding features . . . some of the feats performed are positively breath-taking. . . .

Telegraph—. . . Outside of its comedy . . . has little to offer that is novel or diverting. . . . But as long as it can keep spectators laughing, nothing else matters much. . . .

Times—Low comedy and melodrama go hand in hand . . . best scenes in the picture are those depicting the marvelous horsemanship of Uncle Sam's cavalry. . . .

World (Evening)—Thrilling scenes of dare-devil riding . . . about a hundred laughs and a fair story go to make up "Troopers Three" . . . story could have been improved upon. . . .

World (Morning)—. . . it is the undiscerning stab for laughter which offers most. . . and I think it will be found diverting.

"Troopers Three" is described as "good audience hokum" by Motion Picture News in the review appearing this week on page 39.

British & Dominions and Gramophone End Contract

London—Joint production contract of British & Dominions Film Corp. and the Gramophone Co. has been terminated by mutual consent, it is stated. No comment is forthcoming as to whether this means Gramophone is withdrawing from the talking film field. British & Dominion intends to continue using Western Electric.

Referendum on Sunday Show

Athol, Mass.—Sunday shows will be voted upon at the annual town meeting here next month. Many of the neighboring communities have Sunday shows, which has caused agitation here.

• Briefly Told •

Shrader with Sono-Art

Cleveland—R. S. (Bob) Shrader, who for 14 years was connected with Pathe during a number of which he was Midwest district manager, has been named feature sales manager here for Sono-Art World Wide.

Named Desberg Aide

Cleveland—H. H. Maloney, who has been managing the Loew Midland, Kansas City, has been appointed assistant to Fred Desberg, general manager of the Loew theatres in Ohio.

Buy "Cinci" House

Cincinnati—Judge W. B. Ruth and William Petrakis, Columbus, I. J. Collins and Thomas C. Fulton, Lancaster, have taken over the Ohio here. Theodore Perkas retained as manager.

Talkers as Teachers

Greencastle, Ind.—Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of De Paul University here, believes talkers will supplant theatres in all colleges in the future.

M-G-M, RKO Move in Boston

Boston—RKO's Exchange, formerly located at 57 Church St., has moved to the opposite corner at 60 Church St., in the building which was vacated by M-G-M exchange when it moved into its new building one block further south on Church St.

Managers Shifted

San Antonio—Publix has made a shift in managers in two of its local houses. R. P. Allison, manager of the Aztec has been transferred to the Texas. Floyd Smith has replaced Allison at the Aztec. He comes from Dallas where he was manager of the Melba.

Manchester House Being Remodeled

Manchester, N. H.—The Strand here is being remodeled with reopening date set early in March.

Spokane Lease Taken Over

Spokane, Wash.—Ray A. Grombacher, president of Spokane Theatres, Inc., has taken over the lease of the American. This gives Grombacher his fifth theatre.

New Manager at Norwalk

Well, How?

And then there is the troubled exhibitor who wants to know how Universal expects to make "All Quiet on the Western Front" in sound.

A Good Idea

Cleveland—M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington circuit, has inaugurated the Saturday Stamp plan in all of his theatres. This is to attract a large junior trade. Every Saturday afternoon an envelope containing ten foreign stamps is given to every child. In addition, forty stamp books will be given out each week. The plan runs for ten weeks and is being supported by local schools and branch libraries. It is a great hit, not only with the children, but also with the parents and educational institutions.

Roth Heads Board

Boston—At the annual meeting of the Film Board, Joseph L. Roth of Consolidated Films was elected president, succeeding Joseph A. McConville of Columbia, who declined reelection. Thomas B. Spry of First National was elected first vice-president and W. H. Erb of Paramount, second vice-president; C. McGerrigle of RKO was elected executive secretary and Martha W. Ferris was reelected secretary and treasurer.

To Reopen Port Arthur House

Port Arthur, Ont.—The Lyceum, long dark after being condemned as unsafe, is to be remodeled and enlarged at a cost of $100,000. The present building will be extended about 80 feet, taking in some vacant adjoining property. When rebuilt it will have a seating capacity of between 850 and 900.

Meet the Referee

Hollywood—He's a demon at Malibu. At the Hollywood Athletic Club, he's a wow at squash. Not so dusty at football either. Now Hollywood calls him the town referee for when John Gilbert and Jim Tully mixed at the Brown Derby last week, it was Edmund Grainger, son of fire-eating Jimmy, who stepped into the thick of the fracas and parted the two scrappers.

Young Grainger met with no opposition. Reason? He is five feet eleven, weighs 180 pounds and has a pair of shoulders on his assistant director's head like an all-American.

notes, and suggested that they be given an opportunity to prepare and submit to the stockholders some other plan than that which your board of directors have approved. Halsey, Stuart attempt to justify their position by the assertion of a fifteen-year monopoly of the right to sell your corporation's securities. Your corporation's counsel advise that no such right was ever legally created and that even if any such right had been granted by your corporation to Halsey, Stuart, they would have forfeited it when in open court they urged the appointment of receivers of your corporation.

Until noon on February 17, when notices of the stockholders' meeting were about to be mailed, and nearly a week after the acceptance by your board of the enclosed plan, Halsey, Stuart had made no other suggestion than that, by the appointment of receivers and the ruin of your investment, they be given complete control of the management and operation of your corporation. This, notwithstanding the fact that Halsey, Stuart are asserting a claim of $1,000,000 against Fox Theatres Corp. for work alleged to have been done by them in endeavoring to formulate a plan.

On February 17, for the first time, they submitted a financial plan. This belated Halsey, Stuart plan contemplates the exchange of both the Class A Stock and the Class B Stock of the corporation for common stock, all to be of one class, thus eliminating the present voting power of the Class B Stock. Such a change cannot be effected without the consent of the Class B Stock. Neither Mr. William Fox nor any of the other holders of Class B Stock whom the board of directors has been able to consult, are willing so to consent. It also contemplates the deposit of all the new common stock under a voting trust, thus depriving the Class A stockholders of that share in the management of the corporation which the plan approved by the board preserves to them. Furthermore, the securities contemplated by the Halsey, Stuart plan are not, so far as their effect upon the interests of stockholders and their cost to the corporation is concerned, greatly different from those contemplated by the plan which your board of directors has approved. The compensation which the Halsey, Stuart plan provides shall be given to those bankers, their associates and syndicates, for taking up the securities which it contemplates is, in the opinion of your board of directors, even apart from the above mentioned million dollar claim, at least as expensive to the corporation as that provided by the plan approved by your board of directors. Your board also find it difficult to see how bankers who in open court have stated that their interests lie beyond the payment of their just debts and have pressed for receivers, can, upon any terms, command the confidence of the stockholders. Accordingly, the Halsey, Stuart plan has been rejected by your board.

Under the plan now submitted to you, the corporation will create the following securities, all of which will be offered for subscription to stockholders as hereinafter stated:

> 1. $40,000,000 principal amount of ten year 7% sinking fund gold debentures, which will bear stock purchase warrants entitling the holders to purchase 25 shares of Class A common stock in respect of each $1,000 debenture. The price at which common stock may be so purchased will be determined in the light of market conditions as they exist at the time the issue is authorized, but will not be less than $20 per share during the first three years, $25 per share during the next three years and $30 per share during the last four years.
> 2. $25,000,000 par value of 7% cumulative convertible preferred stock, which will be convertible, at the holder's option, into Class A common stock at a price to be determined in the light of market conditions at the time the issue is authorized, but not less than $20 per share during the first five years and thereafter $25 per share.

In order to fund its present indebtedness of approximately $18,000,000 to the corporation and to provide for the payment of its $15 000,000 of indebtedness to Electrical Research Products, Inc. (which was made to assist in the Loew stock purchase and which has been guaranteed by the corporation), and to provide also approximately $3,400,000 for various corporate purposes, Fox Theatres Corporation will issue $40,000,000 principal amount of its ten year 7% convertible debentures which are more particularly described in the enclosed copy of the plan. These debentures will be offered to the stockholders of Fox Theatres Corp. and the offer will be underwritten by the corporation for a cash commission of 9%. In view of the immediate need of Fox Theatres Corp. for cash they will be taken up immediately by the corporation, subject to the subscription rights of the stockholders of Fox Theatres Corp.

It is of the essence of the plan that all the new securities shall be offered to the stockholders for subscription, so that every stockholder who exercises his subscription rights will not only retain the interest in the corporation which he now has but will also in effect become the owner of his proportion of the existing debt, and obtain whatever special benefits the new securities afford.

These offerings will be as follows:

1. The debentures: Holders of record of stock of the corporation on the second day following the authorization of the issue of the debentures (which it is expected will be March 7) may subscribe for debentures, at the price of principal amount and accrued interest, in proportion to their respective holdings, that is, at the rate of $43.44 principal amount of debentures for each share of their stock. Subscriptions for the debentures will be accepted, however, only in multiples of $100. This right to subscribe will be held open for a period of ten days from the record date. While it is not expected that warrants will be issued in respect of these rights, appropriate subscription forms will be mailed to the stockholders in due course and arrangements made for the receipt of stockholders' subscriptions at various places throughout the United States of which notice will be given to the stockholders.

2. Preferred stock: Holders of record of stock of the corporation on the second day following the authorization of the issue of the preferred stock (which it is expected will be March 7) may subscribe for preferred stock, at its par value and accrued dividends, in proportion to their respective holdings, that is, at the rate of $27.15 par value of preferred stock for each share of their present stock. Appropriate forms of subscription warrants evidencing such subscription right will be mailed to stockholders of record on said date. Warrants for fractional shares will not entitle the holder thereof to subscribe for the fractional shares expressed therein but will entitle the holder when surrendered together with other fractional warrants in multiples of one or more complete shares, to subscribe for full shares or receive full share subscription warrants. The subscription rights under the warrants will expire twenty days after the record date. Appropriate instructions will be mailed to the stockholders with the warrants.

The plan contemplates the underwriting of both these offerings by syndicates to be organized by the bankers under the plan.

In order to insure to the holders of the new securities proper management of the corporation, and of Fox Theatres Corp., the plan provides for voting trusts of at least a majority of the Class B common stock of the corporation and all the Class B common stock of Fox Theatres Corp., to continue for five years and thereafter so long as any of the debentures or preferred stock of Fox Film Corp. shall be outstanding, but not exceeding an additional five years. The voting trustees under both voting trust agreements are to be satisfactory to the bankers under the plan.

Furthermore, the board of directors of the corporation is to be increased from eight to twelve, and the right to elect the directors vested in the various classes of stock as follows:

> (a) so long as there are no defaults as to dividends, the Class A common stock to elect five directors and the Class B common stock seven;
> (b) if in any one year the corporation (without being in default on the preferred stock) fails to pay dividends aggregating at least $1 per share on the Class A and Class B common stock, the Class A to elect seven directors and the Class B five;
> (c) if the corporation is in default for four successive quarterly dividend periods on the preferred stock, the preferred stock to elect seven directors, the Class A common stock three directors and the Class B common stock two directors.

The entire first boards of directors after the adoption of the plan, of both the corporation and Fox Theatres Corp., and a chairman of the board, president, treasurer and comptroller of each corporation are required to be satisfactory to the bankers under the plan.

Every stockholder is urged, in order to prevent the destruction of his investment, immediately to sign and return the enclosed proxy in the enclosed stamped envelope.

Very truly yours,
FOX FILM CORPORATION,
By order of its Board of Directors.

ical or propaganda speeches were shown in the former, the same space and time should be allotted to each side of a question. Similarly, if a candidate hired newsreel space for a campaign, his opponent would be required to hire space at the same price.

Opposes Block Booking

Censorship would be only part of the functions of the new commission. It would have general supervision of the production and exhibition machinery, with mandatory instructions to stamp out unfair trade practices, misrepresentations and deceptions. Block booking would be prohibited and all exhibitors, regardless of their affiliations with the producers, would have the right to bid in open competition for the privilege of exhibiting any picture. Trade disputes would be settled by the commission, as would everything else entering into the production, distribution or exhibition of pictures.

Violations of any of the provisions of the legislation or of any order issued by the proposed commission would be subject to fines of from $500 to $10,000, or imprisonment for from six months to five years, or both.

Sheehan Voted Against Plans Because He Felt Them Costly

The Halsey, Stuart plan authorizes 3,850,000 shares of common, with but one class of equal voting rights. The 900,000 shares of the present Class A would be exchanged share for share for the new stock and the 99,900 shares of Class B—the voting stock —at the rate of one and one-half for each share of new.

An offering of 1,250,000 shares of the new stock would be made at $21 a share, pro rata to stockholders. The underwriters would receive $1 a share for every share sold and $1.50 for every share unsold. Against exercise of warrants, 1,000,000 shares would be reserved and 500,000 under the banker's option to purchase the lot at any time within five years for $20 a share. Stockholders would receive voting trust certificates.

A $40,000,000 issue of ten year, 7 per cent sinking fund debentures would be created and offered stockholders, redeemable at $105 for five years and a dollar less for each succeeding year. They would carry warrants to purchase 25 shares of common stock for each $1,000 face value of debentures at not less than $25 a share or more than $30.

The plan calls for the Fox Theatres Corp. to change its capitalization similarly with an issue of $40,000,000 in 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, which the film corporation would underwrite.

R-K-O Site for Film Outlet in Loop Is Sought

Radio-Keith-Orpheum is looking for a Loop site for a new house here. The circuit intends wiring its RKO Palace, the only exclusive straight vaudeville house of the chain west of New York. However, it is denied by officials that decision to wire the house means a switch to a picture policy.

"Wiring," they say, "is standard equipment for any show house nowadays, as it prepares the house for any eventuality."

It also is denied that the Erlanger is to be acquired as the circuit's major vaudeville house here, it being contended that the location is impractical as a vaude spot.

Double Features In Sound Appear In "Chi" Houses

The double feature program which, in the era of "silents" came in for its share of criticism and condemnation, is being revived here in the neighborhoods, and at least one loop house has advertised such a program.

The outlying houses—all of them on the north side—which are making a policy of showing two all-talking features are: the Howard, Adelphi, Rosewood, Music Box, DeLuxe and Bugg. Loop house running a double feature for a time was the Adams, now running "tabloid talkies" exclusively.

Simple Cure-Alls Are Usually Best Way To Improve Sound, Experience Shows

Cite Typical Examples and Show How Practical Aids Can Be Applied

Minor Troubles Prove Chief Troubles, M-G-M Experts Have Discovered

MINOR troubles of sound reproduction, some of which have nothing to do with equipment, product or theatre acoustics, are described by M-G-M sound technicians in this article.

One of them tells of a long drill he held to effect smoothness in change-overs. Another describes how constant experimentation with the fader drove half of two audiences out of a theatre. A third one tells the result of installing good equipment in a make-shift booth.

All of the experiences are taken from official reports and are related in the technicians' own language. Nothing has been changed except the names of exhibitors, cities and theatres.

Confusion of Sound

"I visited the Barge Theatre at the request of the management, which desired assistance in overcoming a confusion of sound about three-fourths of the way back in the auditorium. Upon investigation, I found that this trouble was most manifest in the very center of the house, where most of the people sit and where the sound ordinarily should be best.

"Several factors were involved. The horns were flared to the sides at too great an angle. There was considerable echo. A beam across the ceiling was breaking sound waves. Several layers of felt had been placed over the horns and the tendency was to greatly muffle the sound. These diffculties were corrected by reflaring the horns, draping the beam, removing the felt muffling on the horns and acoustically treating certain portions of the wall area."

Tendency to Sourness

"At the Paris Theatre I found that both tone arms were over-weighted and that the left arm was very badly out of line, which gave it a tendency to cause repeats. At my suggestion, the arms were adjusted and lined up and I do not believe they will have further cause of trouble from this source.

"One of the machines was running at a speed of only eighty-three feet a minute and this gave a sour and barrelly effect from discs which were run on that machine. It developed that this lack of speed was due to the fact that the gears are badly worn. The best we could succeed in doing was to raise the speed to eighty-seven feet a minute. New gears, however, will fully correct this difficulty.

"The horns are a little high for this house and should be lowered. There is also considerable volume being lost back-stage which can be remedied by boxing the horns. The sides of the house have not been treated. This should be done."

Lack of Information

"The experience which Mr. Regan is having illustrates very effectively what is likely to happen to the exhibitor who believes that the only essential to inaugurating a sound policy is to put in reproducing equipment. In the case of the Regan theatre all of the troubles which the exhibitor is having are results of lack of proper preparation for making sound installation.

"In the first place, the booth is constructed of wood and the floor has considerably sagged so that it is impossible to level the disc plates permanently. There was a good deal of sagging before the sound equipment was set up, but the angle of the floor has considerable increased, due to weight having been added without proper supports having first been provided. The machines were not bolted to the floor and there was not room enough in the booth to place the arms properly without their hitting the front partition. The tone arms are so placed that they play almost at right angles to the disc instead of being in line with them.

"I suggested to the exhibitor that he have a carpenter come to the theatre and undertake levelling the disc plates temporarily. This he did while I was present and in this manner we got rid of some of the sourness. The bad angle of the tone arms, however, still produces an unsatisfactory condition during the first half of any record. This situation does not right itself until the angle of the arm to the record, in the process of playing, becomes less acute. This cannot be remedied because of lack of space. When I told the exhibitor it would be necessary to enlarge the booth in order to correct this difficulty he became panic stricken.

"Several other minor troubles were discovered in this theatre. It was necessary to reflare the horns, which were crossing each other at too sharp an angle. It was also necessary to bring up the speed of one of the machines which was running at only eighty-four feet a minute."

Of Practical Value

This is the tenth, and perhaps the concluding article in the sound series prepared by M-G-M and published exclusively in Motion Picture News.

Exhibitors all over the country have welcomed the articles as the one clear exposition of the best methods of improving sound reproduction published to date. Each instalment, complete in itself, has been written from the angle of the theatre owner and sought to explain to him in language he understood how to meet his difficulties practically and at a minimum of cost.

Unused Balcony Troublesome

"Several troubles manifested themselves during my inspection of the auditorium and equipment of the Regent. One of these difficulties was with the tone arms, which were bad. There was also considerable volume being lost backstage, which can be overcome by boxing the horns. There is a vacant space at the top of this theatre which was formerly used as a balcony. This should be covered as it is not treated and is now acting as a sound box, creating considerable reverberation. The other side of the house upstairs is still being used as a balcony and as this is usually filled, there does not seem to be any necessity for specially treating it."

Failed to Demand Service

"The visit to the Columbia was really not necessary. I made the call on the direct complaint that needles would not track properly on either of the theatre's machines. I found the trouble was due to the reproducer arms not being levelled and also that the arms had too much gravity, drifting to the outer edge of the disc. The management had been fully instructed how to remedy this condition but feared the remedy might not effect an improvement and therefore had taken no action.

"The installation was comparatively new and was of one of the very best types of equipment. I asked why the service department of the equipper had not been called and learned that this phase of the matter had been overlooked. By calling the service department myself from the theatre, I had a man on the job before I left. I remained while the service man was at work and at the conclusion we played several test records. At my suggestion, the service department also went back stage and slightly reflared the horns. The result of all of this was an improvement of at least ninety per cent. in the quality of the sound reproduction."

Poor Projection

"This is a large circuit house and the manager has only been on the job for a short time. The trouble is that his film machines do not line up properly on the screen. In consequence, at every change-over, there is a jump in action of at least a foot from one side of the screen to the other. Every change-over throughout the two entire shows was missed, sometimes two pictures showing on the screen at one time, at other times the ends of parts of two pictures showing.

"Apparently no attention was paid to the cue sheet. At the change of every scene there was a disposition to readjust the fader. First the sound would be too soft and then too loud, but the scene would nearly always be practically completed before the film would be at the right level. This happened over and over again throughout two entire shows. At one time during the show even the carbons went out.

"A long talk with the management and personnel of the theatre developed the fact that very little practical information about sound reproduction had previously been obtained. I am making this report principally to give you some idea of what can happen to good pictures through poor projection. There was absolutely no fault with the equipment nor the auditorium, but the number of people who left the theatre during the first show indicated to me that the public was fully aware of the difficulties which the house was having."

Tone Arm Side Play

"When I called upon Mr. Vogel he told me that there was something the matter with his tone quality and asked me to see if I could make suggestions which would improve it. Upon inspection of his machines I found one tone arm had a great deal of side play and was considerably over-weighted. The side play was so great that the needle was hitting the walls of the grooves hard enough to chip them. Naturally, there was a great deal of sound distortion and blasting.

"After my suggestion for tightening the arms had been acted upon, we ran several records through perfectly. Incidentally, he took five ounces of weight from one of the tone arms. It developed also that no one connected with the theatre understood the operation of the fader. They had been controlling volume from the main control, thus making rather awkward change-overs. I explained the necessity for establishing a house level and then using the fader for volume control.

"Very little draping had been done in the house and as the auditorium had plaster walls all around, I suggested certain treatment, particularly at the back."

Exciting Lamp Trouble

"The Victory had both non-synchronous and synchronous equipment. In order to test the house I had the non-synchronous machine put in operation first. This developed that the auditorium acoustics were very good. However, when the synchronous machine was put into operation, the sound was terrible. Upon looking at the machines I found the light from the exciting lamp was hitting the film at a very bad angle. The beam was very blunt and thick, instead of being properly focused.

"When I called this to the attention of the management they at once got in touch with the installers of the device, who spent considerable time making adjustments. I left before the adjustment on the other machine had been completed, but the test records which had been run on the first machine before my departure indicated that the trouble had been located."

Carbon Flame Spot

"The Lincoln is a legitimate theatre which is running pictures between stage shows. Naturally, the acoustics are good. At the time of my visit, the sound motion picture service had just started—that is, I was present at the first sound show.

"The only things which were not perfect were the new light houses and automatic carbon feeder. The latter did not feed fast enough. This threw a carbon flame spot on the screen in the center. When the installers were called in to correct this, they spent three hours trying to make adjustments. The final decision was to change the lamp house at the close of the afternoon show."

Tone Arm Length Wrong

"I was sent to the Grand because of trouble being reported with discs. There had been several repeats and cut-overs on each of two reels. After attempting to run the picture with five new sets of discs, the management had given up and returned the prints and discs.

"I took with me a print and two sets of discs. However, before projecting the picture and running the discs, I discovered that there was a material difference in the lengths of the reproducer arms on the two machines and that they were not level and therefore must be drifting.

"In consequence of this examination, I was able to suggest a number of adjustments which were made before our test run was started. This eliminated practically all of the difficulties regarding which the theatre had complained, except that one of the reproducer arms was too long. I found that the theatre had a spare arm and this was substituted for the one which was being used with still further improvement in the results."

Trouble With Film

"I was called to the Beverly, not on account of equipment or acoustical troubles, but because a break had occurred in film which was being run and the theatre employees, after making replacements, were unable to get the film back into synchronization. Measuring the first scene from the start mark demonstrated that three feet of excess black leader had been inserted in the fade-in of the trade mark. Then I discovered by measuring the second scene, which happened to be the title, that this was one foot short. As a result the whole reel was out of synchronization for two feet.

"The visit here would have been considerably shorter than it was except for the fact that I had not been informed about the break in the second scene. It was only after the corrections in the first scene failed to bring the picture back into synchronization and I had found the other break that those present recalled the film having broken twice."

—But, Lady

On the question of faulty sound reproduction in a theatre, a dear old lady wrote to the manager suggesting that perhaps the smoking in the balcony affects the players' voices.

Stepin Steps OUT

"Stepin Fetchit, famed temperamental sepia comic, is out at Columbia studios. He was cast for an important role in 'Lover Come Back,' but after two days, officials could not put up with him longer and he was aired. Stephin has been quite the focus of attention in Hollywood since his tremendous hit in 'Hearts of Dixie.' First, he got sealed to a hi-yaller hi-school gal. Then, for several weeks he spent most of his time being scolded by judges for failing to answer traffic law violations committed in his noisy-looking car.

"Clarence Muse, another colored comedian, has been engaged to replace the brown clown, and all the film shot up to date on Fetchit has been scrapped, which is one cure for inflated skulls."—Walter Winchell in the New York "Daily Mirror."

Difficulty With Change-Overs

"My visit to the Seaside, made at the request of the management, was solely for the purpose of explaining the proper method of making smooth change-overs. First, I had a talk with the theatre personnel and then we spent an hour merely practicing change-overs. After matters had been thoroughly understood, they made the shift perfectly. It seems they had feared that if they waited for the change-over until reaching the spot indicated by the cue sheet, they would not have sufficient film on the incoming reel. The results very much surprised them."

Incorrect Starting

"The only trouble at the Cinderella was that the film was not being properly started. The result was that everything which was played was out of synchronization. This would apply to every reel of every attraction. The tendency apparently was to disregard the start marks indicated on the film and to make experimental runs for the purpose of determining where the film should start.

"I assume this from the fact that there would be three or four crosses in ink against various frame lines. My job, of course, was to demonstrate that the starting mark printed on the reel was the correct one to use. This was not at all difficult. Incidentally, I noticed that pieces of metal were being placed in the film to warn the operators of the necessity for a change-over. I explained how the cue sheets should be used for this purpose."

Everything Seemed Wrong

"Mr. Tompkins had advised our office that he was having trouble both with equipment and acoustical conditions and requested that I visit his theatre. Upon listening to his reproduction my first suggestion was that the horn be moved from a corner of the stage to the center so it would point directly toward the back.

'Frisco House Rebuilt

San Francisco—Golden State Theatre Circuit next month will open the Uptown, which formerly was the Alcazar, Sutter and Steiner Sts. The house was stripped to the four walls and rebuilt.

New Changeover Runs Whole Show By Electric Aid

Portland, Ore.—An automatic changeover which is designed to insure a smooth unbroken flow of pictures has just been installed in the Columbia. It is the first installation, and consists of a special switchbox and copper release tabs on special reels which flash a buzzer on the alternate machine to warn the operator to turn on his light and start the motor running for the pickup.

It is impossible to detect the changing of reels despite the knowledge imparted by the buzzer and flashing lights that such a change is being made, so rapid does the device work, is is claimed.

The device was installed by the Northwest Brogdex Co. of Yakima, Wash., which has secured patent rights and will market the change-over, known as the Crabtree change-over device.

3 Theatres Planned

Ybor City, Fla.—Three new theatres are planned here, two of them to cost $100,000 each, the other $50,000. One is at 15th St. and 7th Ave., and is being sponsored by Mrs. Ignacio Haya, while the Knights of the Golden Eagle are sponsoring the second at 16th St. and Ninth Ave. Ike Weiss is planning the third house at 18th St. and 7th Ave.

Operator Burned in Fire

San Francisco—H. A. Olson, 50, operator of the Acme, is recovering from burns received when he put out a film fire in the booth. When the film burst into flames, scores of the Sunday audience rush for exits while Olson seized a fire extinguisher and kept the flames under control until firemen arrived.

Okla. "Blue" Law Defeated

Weatherford, Okla.—Although effort to pass a Sunday closing ordinance here was defeated by 85 votes in a referendum on the subject, the local theatre will show only Sunday matinees, closing on Sunday night.

3-Way Lighting Ordered

Fond du Lac, Wis.—Control of theatre lights in at least three points of vantage, as a fire precaution, is provided for in a new ordinance passed here.

Splitting Time

Oklahoma City—Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville will split time with Fanchon and Marco Ideas at the Orpheum here, effective Feb. 14.

Sunday Shows at Westwood

Westwood, N. J.—Sunday shows now are being presented at the Fox Pascack, culminating a long fight for a liberal Sabbath here.

The Last Word

"And you," she said acidly, "are one of the worst players in Hollywood."

"Why, dearie," came back the retort swell, "you're forgetting yourself."

Simmons Joining Sono Art-World Wide on March 3

Michael L. Simmons, well known in the industry for his activities in trade paper work and radio broadcasting, on March 3 will join Sono Art-World Wide Prod., New York, as director of advertising and publicity. He succeeds C. L. (Bill) Yearsley, who resigned recently.

M. L. SIMMONS

Simmons, better known to the indusrty as "Mike," brings a broad background of picture experience to his task. He was on the editorial staffs of "The Film Daily" and "Exhibitors Daily Review," and later was motion picture editor of "The Morning Telegraph." In 1925 he traveled obroad for Universal, in the capacity of European director of advertising and publicity, and for a year studied conditions in every country on the continent.

National Radio Hook-Up in Honor of Indusary

On his eighth anniversary as head of the Producer-Distributor Association, March 4, Will H. Hays will receive for the industry salute of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., to be broadcast over the NBC network of 32 stations. The salute is a weekly tribute to great American industries. Prior to Hays' microphone appearance, the program will consist of a musical program and an exposition of facts concerning the rise, development and present importance of pictures.

No Deal Set for Release of Buck Jones Talker Series

Hollywood—No distribution has been arranged, it is understood, for the 16 talker westerns which Buck Jones will produce under his new two-year contract with Sol Lesser. The first picture of the series will be James Oliver Curwood's "The Man From Hell's River."

Show Better Films or Else Is Order for Dark House

Chelsea, Mass.—Before he will permit reopening of the Chelsea, better pictures must be shown and additional supervision over children attending will have to be provided, Mayor John J. Whelan states. He closed the house following a personal visit.

Plan DeForest K.C. Branch

Kansas City—R. F. Woodhull, vice president, and Irving Lesser, general sales manager, of General Talking Pictures Corp., are preparing to establish a sales branch and service station here. The office will be opened within the next two weeks, Woodhull said. No manager has been named.

She Found Out

Hollywood—Beautiful, blonde and so dumb. A Hollywood "name", waxing confidential with her supervisor one day:

"Tell me. What do they really think of me on the lot?"

"Do you really want to know?" asked the supervisor.

"Honestly."

"Well, they think you are the dumbest gal that ever breezed past the front gate watchman."

"I thought so," was the reply.

Sound Screening Room for Boston Censors Is Opened

Boston—Screening room for the censors has been opened at the State House. In addition to projection equipment, the new quarters are provided with sound equipment, a Western Electric unit being installed. There are two projection rooms, one for sound pictures and the other for the silent films.

Installation of the equipment and furnishings of the two rooms was done by the Film Board of Trade for the Department of Public Safety and its opening will do away with a problem which has long faced the distributors in Boston and other New England states, who have been obliged to arrange for their showings for censorship purposes in one of the Boston or suburban theatres during the morning hours and at considerable expense.

N. Y. Censors Install Sound

Western Electric equipment is being installed in projection room of the censor board in New York.

Unemployment Hits Business

Philadelphia—Many neighborhood houses are experiencing a slackening up in business due to the unemployment prevailing in Philadelphia at the present time and are making plans for retrenching during the Lenten season.

9 Year Fight for Theatre Goes to Public for Vote

Winchester, Mass.—Fight of George A. Daley to secure permission to erect a theatre in this wealthy and "exclusive" community will be carried to the voters if councilmen March 3 reject his application for a house. The town is one of two large Boston suburbs, which steadfastly have refused to permit operation of a theatre in their precincts.

Nine years ago the town declined to grant a theatre license, 1,895 to 1,108, with a total of 4,314 registered voters in the town. This year there are more than 5,600 registered voters.

Interest in the proposal is at its height, with both sides actively engaged in debate. Families are split on the question and even churches show a decided difference of opinion. An example is the First Congregational church, one of the largest in the town, whose pastor, Rev. Howard J. Chidley, is opposed, and the assistant pastor, Rev. William W. Malcolm, favors movies.

Statistics have been gathered preparatory to the coming battle and show that local newsstands deliver fan magazines to 500 families each week, that 20 theatres advertise in the Winchester weekly newspaper, that theatre trains and trolleys are heavily patronized despite the fact that the town averages one automobile for every family residing there.

While leadership of the opposition is largely vested in the hands of clergymen of the town, the proponents points out that the only place movies are shown in the town has been in the churches or for church benefits.

$11,300,000 Expansion Is Planned by RCA Victor

Camden, N. J.—RCA-Victor Co. will undertake an expansion program calling for the expenditure of $11,300,000 during the next 12 months, according to Edward E. Shumaker. The new manufacturing plant to be constructed will occupy an entire city block in Camden and will be of the most modern type. It was announced that the new plant would require 3,000 employees and that 2,000 additional workers would be needed in other plants as the result of activity in the new unit.

S.M.P.E. to Discuss Sound and Wide Films at Confab

New improvements in recording and reproducing sound, wide film and color are expected to highlight spring meeting of the Society of M. P. Engineers to be held May 5 to 8 at Washington. The various committees now are at work preparing a program of papers and entertainment.

Election Writ Dissolved

Bloomfield, Ia.—Setting of a new date for a referendum on Sunday shows is anticipated here soon, following dissolution by District Court of an injunction restraining the holding of the election.

High and Low Along Music Row

PAT FLAHERTY, general manager of the Red Star Music Co., has announced several additions to the Red Star personnel. Herman Schenck, formerly with Shapiro-Bernstein & Co., Inc., will be manager of the West Coast office, Eddie Peterson takes charge in Detroit, Robert Earle will be southern representative with headquarters in Atlanta, Tom Houston, manager of the Philadelphia office, and Carl Moore, manager of Boston office. Sam Wigler, formerly with Metro, has joined the staff at the New York office.

Otto Motzan and Billy Frisch forego their cheesecakes long enough to romp over to Danny Winkler and place a novelty tune entitled "Let's Do Something Different Tonight," with DeSylva, Brown & Henderson. It's a new twist to an old theme, has a catchy melody and should garner some shekels.

PINCUS

Arbitration in Some Form Held Need at 'Philly'

Philadelphia—Arbitration in this territory is a necessity, exhibitors and exchangemen agree, and they are doing their utmost to bring about a return to out-of-court settlement of trade disputes. Committees of exhibitors and exchangemen plan to continue their meetings to agree upon a system of arbitration which will be mutually agreeable and legal.

Ninety-eight per cent of exhibitors of the territory are in favor of arbitration, it is estimated, despite which they are witnessing a return of trade evils which preceded adoption of arbitration several years ago.

Brin Sells Three of His at Madison and Portage

Milwaukee—L. K. Brin, chief circuit opposition in Wisconsin to Fox and Universal, has disposed of three of his houses, the Parkway at Madison, purchased by the newly-formed Madison Theatre Co., and the Portage and Home at Portage to the Portage Theatre Co. Incorporators of both these concerns are A. E. Kilmer, J. A. Modral and J. M. Rooney.

Nat Levine, veteran independent producer and distributor, will release Edward Small's production, "Clancy in Wall Street," together with the series to follow. Negotiations between Small and Columbia recently were dropped.

Fuller Australia Chain to Be Wired for Sound Films

Melbourne, Australia—Legitimate and vaudeville houses of the Sir Benjamin Fuller chain are to be wired for sound, because in Sir Benjamin's opinion "apparently the people no longer want flesh and blood entertainment."

Hoxie Re-Enters Production

Fort Davis, Tex.—Jack Hoxie has leased the old Fort Davis military garrison, abandoned by the army 40 years ago, to film a number of Westerns. He is here with a company of ten and 24 horses.

You Name Him!

Chicago—A correspondent for one of the local sheets, just in from Los Angeles, tells this one.

At a dinner given at the Malibu beach home of a popular male star was a visiting authoress, seated next to the host. Concurrently with the cocktail that opened the dinner service, the star began on his favorite subject—himself. Conscience failed to smite him until coffee was being served, a matter of several hours later. He turned apologetically to his dinner companion.

"Here," he murmured, "I've said about enough for the time being. Let's talk about you, now. What did you think of my last picture?"

THE STUDIO SLEUTH

Opinions On Pictures

The Golden Calf

(Folx—All-Talker)

Just Ordinary

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

BASED on the threadbare plot of an old-fashioned secretary who finally bursts forth as a ravishing beauty so her employer falls in love, "The Golden Calf" has a most obvious plot which provides little in the way of entertainment. Performances by El Brendel, Marjorie White and Jack Mulhall save this one from being decidedly mediocre. Miss White is a vivacious comedienne with fine possibilities.

The story is built around the search of an artist for a pair of perfect legs. A classified advertisement brings hundreds of girls, none of whom qualify. Then, most obviously, the old-fashioned secretary discovers she fits the requirements, dresses up in modern fashion, and masquerades for the posing job. The artist falls for her, finally discovering her identity right down near the finish. For a close, a stage revue is presented with musical and dancing numbers, but it somehow fails to click to any extent.

"The Golden Calf" cannot hope for better than ordinary program spots, and will depend on the names of Sue Carol and Jack Mulhall for draw purposes.

Strong two-reel comedy is needed with this one in addition to news.

Produced and released by Fox. Story by Aaron Davis. Directed by Millard Webb. Scenario by Marion Orth. Dialogue by Harold Atteridge. Running time, 1 hour, 10 minutes. Release date, March 23, 1930.

She Couldn't Say No

(Warners—All-Talker)

Winnie Snaps It Up

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

WILD WINNIE LIGHTNER in another Broadway racketeer-night club yarn. They won't mind the repetition because it's rich and racy. Winnie hits the paces successfully, taking full advantage of a well-suited vehicle, the lightness of which does not detract to any great extent from the fine entertainment value of the picture. They offer several tuneful pieces. The lineup of stage settings is attractive, all built up around Miss Lightner. Chester Morris, Sally Eilers, and Johnny Arthur are well placed in the support.

Winnie, a ham-and-egger in a cheap cabaret, has a crush on Chester Morris, a racketeer, who sees starring possibilties in Winnie and develops her into a big-name night club star. Chester hovers between Winnie and Sally Eilers, a good looking debbie with lots of dough, until a shot from the gun of another racketeer writes finish to the fast-stepping career of Chet, who kicks off swearing allegiance to Winnie.

Winnie, of course, is the highlight of the picture, supplying a barrel of laughs with her fast-clicking wisecracks, and fully redeeming what would otherwise be a flat yarn of Broadway night life.

Run a short dramatic number and a novelty for well-rounded support.

Produced and distributed by Warner. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Story by Benjamin M. Kane. Dialogue by Robert Mord and Arthur Caesar. Scenario by Harvey Thew. Running time, 1 hour, 10 minutes. Length, 6413 feet. Release date, Feb. 15, 1930.

The Circle

(M-G-M—All-Talker)

Slow and Boresome

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

SOMERSET MAUGHAM'S "The Circle" is a decided washout as screen material, and the film picturization is dull, uninteresting and boresome. Neither the adaptation nor direction helped to inject audience interest of any kind, and the cast with a few exceptions is negative.

The picture will be limited in any sort of first-run bookings, and should be considered as just one of those things that must be played as part of a block booking group.

The story rolls on and on with little dramatic action. Mostly throughout the 65 minutes it's a talkative talker. Just why M-G-M figures Catherine Dale Owen a potential lead is a question. She is blank and expressionless, aside from a pair of jumping eyebrows that try to convey emotion. Lewis Stone and Ernest Torrence deliver acceptably in their roles, but both are only seen briefly. Paul Cavanaugh, Tyrrell Davis, Alison Skipworth and Mary Forbes are just members of the supporting cast.

"Draw" comedies are badly needed here, as neither cast nor picture will impress.

Produced and released by M-G-M. From "The Circle," play by Somerset Maugham. Directed by David Burton. Screen version by Sylvia Thalberg and Frank Butler. Photographed by Oliver Marsh. Running time, 65 minutes. Release date (tentative), April 19, 1930.

Keaton Talkes—It's In

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene.)

BUSTER KEATON'S initial talker has plenty of regulation comedy and laugh values, and further carries decided interest in taking audiences to a Hollywood opening and through a sound studio. In addition, the script allows introduction of several musical numbers, and the final presents a musical comedy last act with Keaton to the fore as a Fred Stone type comic.

Keaton arrives in Hollywood as manager of a beauty contest winner who wants to crash into pictures. A typical Grauman's Chinese premiere introduces arriving screen celebrities, with Keaton spotted for the laughs. Later the comedian crashes into the studio, and this allows a comedy chase through various sound sets where "name" players are working. Finally, Keaton gets a job as extra—balls things up—but finally stumbles into the spot of comedian in a picture. The girl falls in love with the screen lover, and Keaton is left with a contract at the fadeout.

Anita Page is satisfactory as the girl, while Robert Montgomery does splendidly as the film hero. William Haines, Gwen Lee, William Collier, sr., John Miljan, Karl Dane, Dorothy 7Sebastian, Fred Niblo and others appear in various studio sequences.

Cartoons and newsreels only needed to fill program here.

Produced and released by M-G-M. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Scenario by Richard Schayer. Adapted by Paul Dickey. Words and music by Roy Turk and Fred Ahlert. Photographed by Leonard Smith. Running time, 1 hour, 15 minutes. Release date, March 22, 1930.

Honey

(Paramount—All-Talker)

Mighty Sweet

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

SUGAR for the box office — that's what "Honey" is. Wesley Ruggles' picture, starring Nancy Carroll, lives up to its name. It has everything for the box office—good songs, a fine cast, a pleasant "cream-puffy" plot, and plenty of humor.

Every member of the cast bursts forth into melody at the slightest provocation, but that is expected. "Skeets" Gallagher and Lillian Roth score the outstanding song hit with "Let's Be Domestic." Nancy's best song bet is "In My Little Hope Chest." Jobyna Howland and Mitzi Green are capital in the supporting cast, which is of outstanding calibre.

The picture is a musical romance based on Alice Duerr Miller's "Come Out of the Kitchen." Music and comedy predominate, well rounded out for excellent audience appeal. "Honey" almost rates in the big feature class, and has plenty of advertising angles to get it over big.

Novelty shorts will fill with this one—comedies and musicals not needed.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. From story and play "Come Out of the Kitchen" by Alice Duerr Miller and A. E. Thomas. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Adapted by Herman Mankiewicz. Dialogue by Herman Mankiewicz. Photographed by Henry Gerrard. Length, not set. Running time, 1 hour, 15 minutes. Release date, not set.

Troopers Three

(Tiffany—All-Talker)

Real Audience Stuff

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

ACTION, comedy and love interest, and real cavalry maneuvers which are sensational and exciting, make this stand out as an audience picture which should click anywhere. The story is rather a far-fetched affair, but this is more than offset by the fine comedy and speedy action. Tiffany has a picture in this which should make a lot of money as a popular price attraction. The cavalry stuff is immense.

This is a story of three ham actors who join the cavalry for a vacation at Uncle Sam's expense. Rex Lease is the hero, a wsiecracking, crusty smart alec of the Haines type, and he surely puts over the role. He has the advantage of a tenor voice and ability to play the ukelele to help him. Good looks and real horsemanship are among other assets of this personable young man. Slim Summerville gets plenty of laughs in a comedy role, while Roscoe Karns is the third member of the strange troupe. Dorothy Gulliver is the girl and Tom London the rival in the well-balanced cast.

Go after this one from the cavalry angle, and tell them it's a rollicking comedy melodrama of the service, which will please. The kids will cheer it.

Cartoons and novelty subjects with this.

The Green Goddess

(Warners—All Talker)

Arliss Fine; Film Average

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

GEORGE ARLISS, with a long and successful stage record behind him, does more with the raising of an eyebrow than most Hollywood actors get over with an emotional St. Vitus dance. This Arliss man simply knows how.

His finished performance as the rajah makes "The Green Goddess" worthwhile. True, the story is melodramatic which, in turn, gives it a rating of entertainment value with the mob, but essentially the yarn is trashy and considerably below Arliss' capabilities. It concerns the forced descent of two Englishmen and the wife of one of them; their imprisonment by Arliss to avenge the death of his three brothers by the Government of India and how a wireless message gets through to the British air base in time for planes to effect a rescue.

Second in acting honors comes H. B. Warner as the English officer. Alice Joyce is unimpressive in this, and Ralph Forbes merely satisfactory. The natives must have been selected by someone with a real sense of humor. They're very funny and always ludicrous.

Shorts with Indian background will plant locale of feature.

Why Cry at Parting

(International—All-German Talker)

Among Best Foreign Comedies

(Reviewed By Joseph Kelley.)

COMEDY is the exception and not the rule of pictures from foreign lands. Here is one done in Berlin that is comedy from introduction to fadeout. The plot, sprinkled with mystery, moves with unusual snap for foreign drama. Action laid in Germany, England and Africa. Harry Halm, with Dina Gralla, an accomplished comedienne, carries the major roles.

Girl detective is put on the trial of the fiance of the daughter of a bank president who is thought to have absconded with his future bride's dowry. The chase takes her aboard transatlantic steamer, into unwelcomed jails and ends by her falling in love with the man she seeks to capture.

There are complications aplenty, each one giving rise to good comedy. A bit choppy as to continuity but never vague, it represents one of the best comedies that has come from foreign shores. There is a colored band of jazzy musicians, cabaret scenes and scenes aboard a liner, all done with a lavishness unusual in foreign production. Germany's Houdini also does the "impossible."

German patronage, especially, will welcome this one.

Produced in Germany and distributed in U. S. International. Directed by Richard Eichberg. Adaption by Alfred Halm and Frederick Stein. Based on musical play by Hugo Hirsch. Running time, 1 hour and 20 minutes. Length, approximately 7,0000 feet.

Puttin' on the Ritz

(U. A.—All Talker)

In the Money Class

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

STORY terrible, cast fine, songs tuneful—Irving Berlin wrote them—picture box-office.

Harry Richman delivers a surprisingly good performance, bearing in mind this is his first effort. The camera is not always kind to him and when he emotes, it's just that. But as soon as this night club and musical comedy trouper swings into his forte which is singing, the picture tones up considerably. It's all about the ham vaudeville team—four this time —and how one pair reaches Broadway, which proceeds to knock Richman silly, and the obvious byways through which said hero travels before he learns his old pals were true blue and the girl in the case the one he really loved.

Joan Bennett is exquisitely lovely as the girl. Her photographic charm far outdistances her acting, but maybe it was the innocuous part she was given. Jimmy Gleason and Lilyan Tashman as the vaudeville hams carry away acting honors, while Aileen Pringle proves uninteresting as the other woman.

Richman will have to be plugged to the limit. He means nothing to the rank and file. Remember that.

Cartoon short O. K. here.

Produced and distributed by United Artists. Story by John W. Considine, Jr. Directed by Edward Sloman. Dialogue by William K. Wells and James Gleason. Edited by Hal Kern. Photographed by Ray June. Length, 8,225 feet. Release date, March 1, 1930.

Dangerous Paradise

(Paramount—All-Talker)

Thrilling Program Film

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THE thrilling climax saves this one, after an impossible story and impossible situations threaten to classify it as just one of those things. There are fine acting and beautiful backgrounds to compensate for the wild story, based on incidents from Joseph Conrad's novel, "Victory." Outstanding is the villainy of Gustav von Seyffertitz and the sweetness of Nancy Carroll.

This tells of a girl stranded with an orchestra troupe on a South Sea Island, where she is kept busy warding off the unwelcome attentions of the men who frequent the hotel at which she is playing. In desperation she stows away on the sloop of a young American living in solitude on a nearby island. They successfully ward off the attack of three murderers, who are seeking the gold the young man presumably has hoarded.

There are chills in the visit of the three villains to the island, the leader a polished scoundrel; the others, a knife thrower and an ape man. They take their killings seriously, those three musketeers of crime, and they offer the big selling angle of the picture. This will stand some ukelele strumming and South Sea Island effect exploitation.

Hawaiian shorts fine with this.

Lovin' the Ladies

(RKO—All Talker)

Entertaining Programmer

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

ALTHOUGH weak insofar as basic story is concerned, "Lovin' the Ladies" nevertheless contains enough entertaining qualities to rate it as good program entertainment. Good dialogue and direction keeps things moving in a yarn which would otherwise be rather dull.

It is a typical Richard Dix vehicle, and gives the star opportunity to shine as a heavy lover. Dix, as an electrician, becomes innocently involved in a bet which provides that he make an heiress fall in love with him. He does his best, but ends in falling hard for another girl—with the wager losing both his wager and his own girl friend.

Practically all of the cast aside from Dix and Lois Wilson are from the stage, with each satisfactory in their particular parts. The story waxes inmplausible in spots, but holds entertainment regardless of that drawback.

Spotted for the key week runs and general bookings, this should do satisfactory business.

There is, however, nothing to rave about in way of magnetic drawing power aside from Dix and Miss Wilson.

Two reel comedy or musicals would fit here.

Produced and distriubted by RKO. From original play by William Le Baron. Dialogue and adaptation by J. Walter Ruben. Directed by Melville Brown. Phitographed by Edward Cronjager. Running time 1 hour, 5 minutes.

Co-Optimists

(New Era—All Talker)

Revue Type Minus American Ideas

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

BRITISH-MADE, all-dialogue revue which is reported to be one of the initial sound efforts of British production. It is a good first attempt. The title won't mean much, if anything, to the average picture audience here. Some of England's best histrionic talent has been mustered to lend their specialties, all of which are artistically done but lacking the American audience's idea of humor.

A series of vaudeville sketches drawn together with the revue idea as the connecting links, and you have the story, if so it may be called.

Obviously the director was shooting on a limited appropriation for virtually only one set has been used and that anything but pretentious. RCA Photophone recording stands out like a mole on a beauty's face. To pick out stars in this offering would be naming the entire cast. All give every evidence of being thorough-going artists behind the make-up. Patrons acquainted with English society and things English will relish this one. The typical American audience will wonder wherein lies the subtle humor. With a bit more pretentious staging and better continuity this might rank high.

Fast-moving comedy suggested with this.

At the South Pole

(Pole Prod.—Silent)

Pretends More Than It Offers

(Reviewed by Joseph Kelley)

OBVIOUSLY trading on possibilities in daily publicity given Commander Byrd's expedition this offering pretends much more than it actually serves. Running 72 minutes (much too long) with half of those minutes taken up with oftentimes flowery and pedantic sub-titles meant for description plus humor. It shows flashes of real entertainment in bird and animal life near the South Pole.

This purports to be an account of Captain Scott's tragic expedition and, for no reason at all, drags in a sequence showing Byrd leaving New York harbor on a similar expedition. When a blizzard is announced as imperiling the lives of the explorers it looks very much as though an airplane propeller stirred up the so-called blizzard. Tragedy stalked through Captain Scott's actual adventure. There is no indication of it in the picture excepting in the brain of the title writer.

There are icebergs aplenty, snow, ice and all other accessories associated with North or South Pole but none of it rings true nor even begins to measure up to the fatal adventure we are told Captain Scott had. When a still picture serves the purpose it is dragged in and sub-titled with all the synthetic tragedy of a rural Hamlet.

This has merit but lacks the convincer.

Photographed by Pole Productions. Cameraman, Herbert Powling. Running time, 72 minutes. Length, approximately six reels. Current release.

Good—But Not Too Good

(Reviewed by Pierre M. Arnaud)

BY far, the best Spanish all-talker made to date, although the story is not ideal for the Latin American market, for which it is intended, because Jose Bohr, the lead, was grossly miscast as an American soldier, and not a Latin American or Spaniard type.

This one point may greatly influence its career, because the illusion of being a real Spanish vehicle is killed. No doubt, Americans who see it will not recognize the bull, but, surely, the Spaniards and Latin Americans will.

Francisco Maran is immense, and although Italian with a peculiar accent, which is attractive, he is such an excellent actor that you forget his nationality. Not so with Bohr, who, sings in English and French, and is referred to as "Eddie." which constantly reminds one of bad judgment in casting. Had the producers recognized that Bohr speaks with a typically "che" accent, and not with a Castillian accent, they would, no doubt, have changed the part.

The story is weakly handled, especially the locale.

Produced and distributed by World Wide-Sono Art. Directed by Andrew Stone. Music by Jose Bohr and James F. Hanley. Photographed by Arthur Martinelli. Spanish dialogue, Fernando C. Tamayo. Length, approximately 9,500 feet. Running time, 1 hr, 42 min. Release date, Feb., 1930.

Universal Serial Highlights New Group of Shorts

"The Jade Box"

(Universal-Serial—10 Episodes)

Great for Serial Fans

IF they like serials, they'll go for this, with its quick action, spooks and heavy mystery. Typical serial material, maintaining lots of interest throughout. An Oriental cult is interested in securing possession of a long-lost jade box from a group of American tourists. In one battle, Jack Perrin's father mysteriously disappeared, and, after a search of several months, is given up as lost. His sweetheart, Louise Lorraine, and an old friend of Jack's father, Francis Ford, are haunted by evil spirits of the Oriental cult. Ford, unknown to the others, obtained the jade box and is anxious to cash in on its supposed great value, but up to the fourth episode, he has received nothing from the secret except a barrel of trouble. Ray Taylor directed and set a good pace for serial material. Running time, about 20 minutes for each episode.

Run light feature material with this.

"More Sinned Against Than Usual"

(Vitaphone Varieties—2 Reels)

A Wow

EIGHTEEN minutes of well done burlesque on stock companies of the days gone by. Shows the old-time audience in a small town hall watching a ham-and-egg troupe going through the paces in one of those harsh-villain pieces where the misunderstood blonde girl is ejected from the house of her foster parents. The son goes, too, rather than swear allegiance to his stern old father. Packed with laughs. A treat.

If your feature is heavy and needs comedy, here it is.

"Home Sweet Home"

(Pathe—Sound Topics—1 Reel)

Blah

VAN BEUREN again uses the professor and Nifty in the ventriloquist gag, and again the humor, as taken from newspapers throughout the country, falls pretty flat. This stuff varies very little, and doesn't measure up to the old silent "Topics of the Day." Running time, 6 minutes.

"Slow Beau"

(Krazy Kat—Columbia—1 Reel)

Immensely Clever

KRAZY KAT again, maneuvered by the clever cartooning of Manny Gould and Ben Harrison through an extremely diverting series of mad pranks. Another of the Winkler series and way up in the forefront of cartoon comedies. Scene, a vaudeville theatre with the music supplied by every ridiculous—and clever—contraption and contortion available. Time, nine minutes.

If feature is good, this will make them feel better. If it's bad, this will tonic 'em.

"Station S-T-A-R"

(Tiffany Talker—1 Reel)

Splendid Short

THESE informal radio parties have a lot of audience appeal and this one is no exception. Norman Kerry is the guest announcer introducing a number of celebs, but the show is Joe E. Brown, who gets off a good bedtime story which will bring down any house, in fact it's an act in itself. You can build up real following for this series.

Wow audience stuff. Goes with any feature.

"Caviar"

(Educ'l—Terry Toon—1 Reel)

Has Laughs

IF the balance of these subjects measures up to the standards of this one, Educational has a real bet in this new series of Paul Terry cartoons. These subjects are being produced at the Audio-Cinema Studios, Long Island City by Terry and Frank Moser, for years Terry's associate. There are to be no central characters running through the series, but a general assortment of animals. This one features a mouse and his efforts to save his lady love from the wolves. Running time, seven and one-half minutes.

Clever cartoons are easy to spot in with any feature.

Pathe Audio Review, No. 8

(Pathe—Talker—1½ Reels)

Good Stuff

NUMBER eight in the Audio Review series is better than many of its predecessors. Its three units are crammed full of interest and entertainment, starting with (a) "Fancy Steppers," which synchronizes the gaits of well-known military organizations in various countries, to music and sound; (b) "Red Hot Hollywood," a number embracing five Tin Pan Alley hounds at the ivories, turning out new jazz numbers; and (c), night shots of well-known New York spots photographed with the new Du Pont highly sensitized night stock. The latter unit highlights the reel. Running time, 10 minutes.

Where interesting novelty is needed, use this.

"Low Down"

(Vitaphone-Varieties—1½ Reels)

Red Hot Jazz

DESCRIBED as "a bird's-eye view of Harlem, featuring songs and dances by darkies who know the meaning of rhythm—and how. There's plenty of pep in this number. The songs and the steppers are great. Running time, 10 minutes.

"Arabian Daze"

(Vitaphone-Varieties—1½ Reels)

ting more pleasing than previous releases in the series. This one concerns a dream of Judy's, who awakes to find the whole gang in Arabia, where a fight to save her sweetie from the hard-boiled sheik lands the whole crew in trouble. Ben Holmes directed. Running time, 20 minutes.

Will fit in nicely with a dramatic feature.

"Evolution of the Dance"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 389-96)

Real Addition to Any Program

SERIES of interpretive dance numbers done in Technicolor. Pretty girls, clever dancers, abbreviated costumes and excellent recording vie for honors with the color scheme. An Hawaiian number is a real treat, as is the Spanish. There are two reels of entertainment that wouldn't make any audience mad if they were extended to a couple more. Jack Haskell directed and did a commendable job. About 25 minutes screen time.

Couple with melodrama and you have nice contrast.

"Screen Snapshots No. 13"

(Columbia Talker—1 Reel)

Tiptop Audience Material

THE public's apparently insatiable desire to see—and now hear—well known screen players explains the vast appeal which films like the Screen Snapshots series hold for picture audiences. In No. 13, Fred Kelsey, playing his usual ham detective role, is asked by the Snapshots cameraman to take the audience on a tour of the studios. Kelsey does, and around this simple but clever subterfuge is built an excuse for the reel. Time, 10 minutes.

One of those rare shorts suitable for any type of feature.

"Match Play"

(Sennett Educ'l Talker—2 Reels)

Real Stuff for Golf Fans

WHEREVER there are golf fans, this attraction should be plugged hard for extra business. For the general run of picture audiences, "Match Play" has enough good comedy to make it acceptable.

The two golf pros naturally perform on the links, but they do not battle to win spectacularly at the last hole. The story is just a lot of laughs through a round of golf wherein both Hagen and Diegel wisecrack their way through, while both show off a number of trick shots. And Hagen and Diegel are not exactly "dubs" when it comes to appearing in talkers. A fine spot for a "draw" comedy where the two golf names mean something, but also good where a laugh comedy is required.

Popular theme suitable for general run of features.

Woof!

Marie Dressler was sporting a new ermine coat at the studio, and Polly Moran was examining it. "I could have a plush coat myself, one time, if I'd wanted it," sniffed Polly. "Well, why didn't you have a plush coat then?" sneered Marie. "Well," confessed Polly, "I'm so tender-hearted it hurt me to think of all those baby plushes being killed for it."—Motion Picture Magazine.

Crabby

"Look, Willie! Mama brought a new book home for you! Just see all the pretty pictures! There's one on every page!

"Aw, lookit that ol' cow! Ain't he crazy! . . . This ol' cat! . . . He's a dumb-looking cat, aint' he? . . . Here's another pitcher of an ol' chicken! I never saw a chicken look like that! . . . Lookit this horse, ma! . . . Ain't that a nutty ol' horse? . . . Here's a boy with some puppies! Lookit him, ma! . . . Ain't he a simp? But the puppies are pretty good, ain't they?"

"Willie! You ought to be ashamed! Making fun of those nice pictures? I don't know what you are going to be like when you grow up!"

"Aw, I'm gonna be one of those guys that writes movie reviews!"—Judge.

"The Dear Slayer"

(Darmour-RKO Talker—2 Reels)

Acceptable Comedy

QUITE a lot of action in a coherent story where laughs are generous, spots this as a satisfactory offering.

Alberta Vaughn, Lewis Sargent, Dell Henderson, Al Cooke and Arthur Houseman comprise a nicely balanced cast of dependable players, each a veteran in the comedy field.

A young matron is loaned a fine apartment by her cousin, who is janitor of the apartment house. Difficulties are encountered by the wife and husband when the real owner arrives just when the couple are entertaining psuedo ritzy friends of theirs. The apartment owner overhears the bragging of the ritzy husband, who happens to be in the owner's employ—and fires him pronto. He then immediately hires Lew Sargent, borrower of the apartment, to take the job, and everything ends with a laugh.

Acceptable where a situation comedy with laughs is required to round out a rather dramatic feature.

"Big Jewel Case"

(Educ'l-Talker—2 Reels)

Fairly Good Comedy

RATES above the average chiefly because of Eddie Lambert's funnyJewish antics as a detective. With Fred Kelsey, he is protecting the jewels in the home of a big business man, while the latter and his wife are on a week-end trip. Clown spooks and burlesque mystery twitches are padded too much, but outside of that, the stuff is okay, with lots of laughs. Directed by Stephen Roberts. Running time, 16 minutes.

Enough comedy in this for its effective use as contrast to a heavy feature.

Pathe Review, No. 7

(Pathe—Silent—1½ Reels)

Good Novelty

INTEREST is maintained fairly well with shots of the Roman hills, followed by "Machine," described as "a cinematic impressions of our mechanical age"; a study of monkeys and their animal neighbors, and "Bust—and How," which, for no excuse at all, offers a French player in various colored poses. Running time, 13 minutes.

Will go well in a spot where novelty and silent relief can be used.

"The Cossack's Bride"

(Tiffany Talker—1 Reel)

THIS color subject is a splendidly done offering, which will fit well on any program. It's in reality a featurette, containing a story done against Russian background. A cossack sets out to recapture his bride, who has been stolen by an enemy. With a friend, the Cossack disguised himself as a musician, and the pair go to an inn where the enemy is staging a feast. They wager the latter that they can keep singing longer than he can keep drinking, and he falls for the gag. After a long session the pair walk out on the party with the bride.

Good with comedy feature.

"Darktown Blues"

(Pathe Talker—2 Reels)

Good Number

BUCK AND BUBBLES show their all-around ability in this new talker, which gives them a chance to sing, dance and play the piano. The boys are looking for a job and walk into a booking agency, where they go through their routine, only to learn that the big colored gent for whom their putting on the show, is also waiting to see the manager. It's a good comedy number with plenty of pep and some good laughs.

For any bill that needs comedy relief.

"Bulls and Bears"

(Educ'l-Talker—2 Reels)

A Humdinger

MACK SENNETT standard. Andy Clyde, as usual, provides enough mirth to chase away the blues—for 20 minutes, at least. Supported by Daphne Pollard, Marjorie Beebe, Bud Jamison and Rosemary Theby. Andy, a grocery store owner of the old school, refuses to sink his pile in the rapidly-rising stock market, despite urgings of his wife and friends. The latter are sitting on top of the world—until the crash comes and then all topple back to earth. Of course, Andy eventually has the laugh on the bunch. He again delivers strong comedy material. Sennett directed and he did a good job. Running time, 20 minutes.

Use this with a feature musical comedy and you will have a splendid bill of light entertainment.

"Do It Now"

(Columbia Talker—1 Reel)

Weaker Than Weak

CLARK and Bergman, vaudeville headliners, may have rooters in their own line of endeavor, but on the screen they simply don't click. Perhaps it is the material which is terrible enough, but certainly the performers don't add anything to the proceedings. Dull, obvious and decidedly unfunny. Directed by Jasper Ewing Brady. Time, 10 minutes.

Won't help any feature no matter how terrible.

Competition

San Antonio—While "The Lone Star Ranger" was enacting his Wild West performance on the screen of the Majestic, he had some competition in the basement of the theatre.

Dave Krisch, electrician, heard a prowler in the basement. Grabbing a flashlight, he turned on the intruder to face a tall red-haired youth with a revolver in his hand. Krisch leaped on the young man, disarmed him and called the police.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

CHARLES E. LEWIS
Chairman and Editor

A National Association of Showmen Meeting in MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

Builders???

SO once more we get back onto a most abused phase of the show business and keep on wondering how long it will continue. All the time praying that "the powers that be" will get wise to themselves and the "false alarms" they have tied themselves up with and do justice to the boys who are entitled to a square deal.

You know the men we are talking about. Those "make-believe" high powered executives (we can think of other names for them) who are drafted from here, there and everywhere, to "build up an organization" and really believe that to start construction work they must secure all different material than what they have on hand when they took the job.

Little by little they eliminate the faithful managers from the picture, recruiting in their places a raft of mostly incompetent men. And all the time they had material of the finest kind in the manpower which existed when they started to construct that now famous expression—"organization."

We have knocked about the business long enough to lay claim to the statement that from actual experience we know that any outfit, regardless of how poorly it may have been run in the past, possesses many fine managers and showmen. These men properly handled can be moulded to fit into anybody's scheme of things.

But, no. The "executive" who came in cold must figure out by his little lonesome that they are ALL no good and he sets out to replace them with others.

Funny psychology that. Maybe the "bosses" who hired those managers in the first place were all "wet." The "slam," if you want to call it that, is really at the men who built up large and profitable circuits and chains. They certainly did not know their business or they would never have kept such "rotten" managers on the job.

When those circuit owners get "time off" long enough to sit back and think things over, we wonder what their reaction will be as to their past actions while creating such profitable chains. They must either decide they did not know what it was all about, despite the success they achieved, or else they will wake up to the fact that the "executives" themselves perhaps don't know such a hell of a lot.

And then again, maybe I'm all wrong, so I guess I'll crawl me back into my den of "loneliness" and drown my thoughts on the subject in hard "likker."

"YOUR PROBLEMS AND MINE"

This most interesting series was delayed because of the large amount of material received from members.

Keep your eye open for tips on how your brother managers solved their problems.

Note the Way Art Taylor Puts Over Shows Down in Tex.

That smiling chap in the photograph we are reproducing is Art. B. Taylor!

When we last heard from Taylor he was managing the Rialto and Mission Theatres in Beeville, Texas, for the Hall Industries, but now Taylor proudly informs us that he is handling the exploitation and special advertising for the entire circuit of ten houses. And with his new job running smoothly he tells us he is going to let us have some good stuff in the near future, and just to back up his assertion he sends us in a picture of his display on the "Big Parade," which though it is not new we are passing it on to show you the resourcefulness of those boys down in Southern Texas.

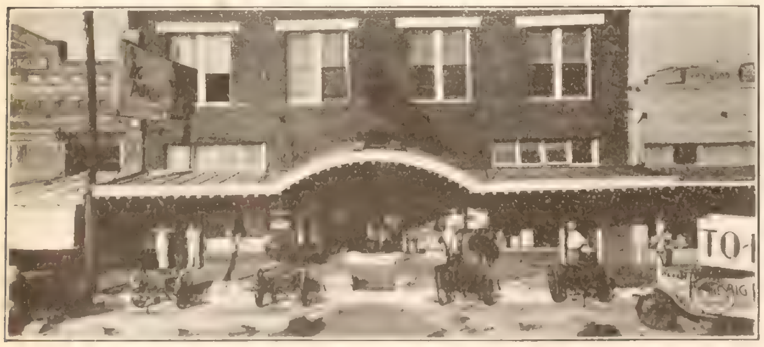
As you will notice from the cut, Taylor has transformed the theatre's front into a military stronghold. He secured a number of caissons and lined them up in front of the theatre. A bunch of sandbags, such as constitute the parapets of trenches were piled about the front of the theatre. A machine gun, flanked by sandbags, was set up near the box office. This display created a lot of interest in the picture and aided materially in putting the show across.

An old truck painted in army grey was used as a street ballyhoo for Beeville and the adjoining towns. The "Big Parade" was painted all over the truck on every available space, while a great big "To-Day" sign adorned the top of the truck.

Another angle on what Taylor is doing down there in Beeville comes to us in the form of a mimeographed letter which was distributed to the patrons through a mailing list. This letter, of a personal nature, is very well made up, and calls attention to the next attraction at the theatre, with an effort being made to sell the picture by describing its highlights.

We want to tell you at this time of how Taylor in addition to revising his mailing list, also secured additional names.

A letter was enclosed with the weekly program bulletin which carried a request asking the patron whether he or she would care to have the program continued. A card was inserted for the reply, and carried in addition to the space for the regular patron's name, a space was left for the inclusion of another name and address with a paragraph in the weekly letter carrying an explanation to the effect that if the patron desired a friend's name to be placed on the mailing list the management would be glad to comply. This little stunt secured 250 additional names to the regular mailing list.



When you stop to consider the limited means Taylor has at his command, you can readily understand the value of the work he is doing in putting the Hall Industries houses across, in a showmanlike manner.

Keep up the fine work Taylor and we want you to know that we're always glad to hear from you and we want to hear all about the future activities, of you and your "gang" down in Southern Texas.

Newspaper Space On Ad Pages Was Secured in Tie-Up

Manager "Monty" Salmon of the Rialto Theatre in Macon, Ga., secured some valuable free publicity on "Show of Shows" by tieing up with the local merchants and newspapers.

Monty persuaded the local dealers to run "ads," and offer money as prizes to the readers identifying the name of a particular star who appeared at the head of the ad. The contestant was informed that he or she could secure the correct identification by going to the establishments of the merchants featuring the stunt.

After making the rounds of the stores the contestants having found out the names, were instructed to paste them together on a large piece of cardboard and forward them to the Macon "Telegraph," the local newspaper co-operating with Salmon and the dealers, for judging. The prizes were awarded according to originality of design, with the first four winners dividing a purse of $100. The next fifty prizes were good for one ticket each to the Rialto.

In addition to the free newspaper publicity Salmon also grabbed off a lot of window space as the dealers plugged the contest there as well.

Over four hundred answers were submitted to the contest, and of which many were really elaborate and no doubt Monty featured them in his lobby and the prominent stores.

In view of the popularity of the contest and the subsequent interest involved Salmon followed up the close of the contest by making an announcement through the newspapers that "consolation prizes" of one ticket each to the Rialto would be awarded to the losers.

This is a new angle on an old gag and one that might be worth trying, as it would not be necessary to shell out anything and in return you would receive a lot of free publicity.

Oak "Monty" we're glad to know that you're still stepping on the gas down there at the Rialto and we know that we can expect to hear a lot more interesting things from you in the future.

Frank B. Mattox

It is with keen regret that we must report the death of our brother member and showman, Frank B. Mattox, formerly manager of the Ritz Theatre in Mansfield, Ohio.

Mr. Mattox died from injuries received in an automobile accident, and without fear of contradiction we can say that he left behind him many friends in the Industry who will miss his smiling personality.

To his family we extend our heartfelt condolences.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Mumford's Activities Are Always Interesting to Us

Leon O. Mumford, manager of the Roth Strand Theatre in Summit, N. J., once more comes through with a letter to let us know that he is not only on the map but interested as usual in the activities of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. We are only sorry that he pasted a clipping over one of his recent newspaper advertisements, or we would be tickled to death to take the ad and reproduce it here to show you how a theatre in a town like Summit sells its attractions with the use of proper types and ordinary exchange mats in a very impressive way.

Since newspaper advertising is the subject of one of our chief hobbies in pestering you fellows who insist on reading everything we have to say on these pages, we naturally fell for this type of stuff before anything else came along. However, to get back to the story Leon has been accomplishing some great things out there at the Roth Strand and from some of the stories that reach our ears, he is slated for a pretty good future in the show business around the Metropolitan district.

Let's hear some more from you Leon, and tell us what you are doing to stimulate business on those "weak sister" nights when the cash customers are few and far between. We know that this condition exists practically all through your country but what we want to know is how you get by that angle.

Egan Gathers More Free Space With A Newsboys' Party

Pete Egan, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan, Can., just can't keep out of the papers.

Pete's crashed in again, this time with a benefit he engineered for the local newsboys of the Regina Daily Post. And we want you to know, Pete, that we think that is a swell stunt. If you'll just read through another story we're running on F. L. Bowers in this issue you'll see what we mean when we say it's a swell stunt.

We have to hand it to the men up in Canada there. They're certainly a live wire bunch of showmen. Too much importance can not be stressed on the fact that the greatest asset a showman can have is his local papers' good will. And you've shown us that you have all of that, Pete—because you seem to have the Capitol in there every time we get a slant at the sheet.

We wish you'd take a jump around and tell the rest of that live wire gang up there that they'd better start sending us more stuff pronto. If their laying off for a Canadian Number snap 'em out of it. We don't want to hold up on anything if we can help it. So if you'll just tell them that the rest of the Club wants to know more often what you and the gang are doing up there we'll reward you with a choice murder tale from one of the papers of any date, which makes a marvelous decoration to hang in your office. And if business is slow you just look at it and laff. Oak, Pete?

Lee Gives Credit For Thrift Idea To David C. Flamm

Harold C. Lee, manager of the Babcock Theatre in Bath, N. Y. hastens to tell us that on his Thrift Book Shopping List idea, which in conjunction with the plugging of his feature picture, we credited on these pages a while ago, we gave him entire credit for the idea, instead of allowing some credit to David Flamm, director of publicity for Fox Metropolitan Theatres, whose original stunt was the Thrift Book Shopping List plan, with credit for the picture plugging on the back of the Shopping List going to

We are always glad to credit the proper party with his idea, "H. C.," and we're glad to be able to hand a compliment to Dave Flamm, whose many activities with the Metropolitan Playhouses always interest us.

Thanks a lot for the novel throwaway on "Sweetie," which you permitted us to see, Harold, and also the clipping commending your ability at window decorating for the snappy display you arranged on "Sweetie." Remember we're always interested in your activities.

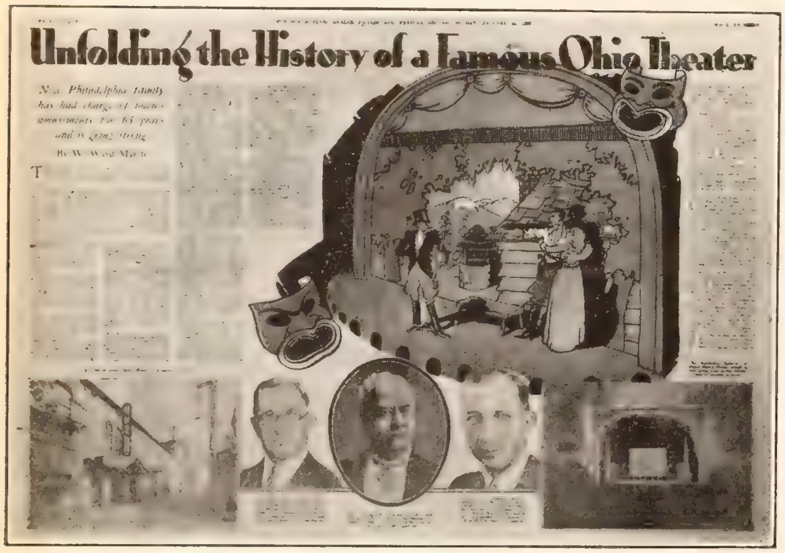
MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Bower's Newspaper Story Real Masterpiece of Publicity

Three generations of Bowers' in the theatre game is some record. And if you don't believe it just ask Manager F. L. Bowers, of the Union Opera House in New Philadelphia, Ohio. And F. L. will point with pardonable pride to a great big two page magazine spread which appeared in the Sunday colored supplement of the Cleveland Plain Dealer and say, "Seeing is Believing."

Way back at the close of the Civil War, Captain George W. Bowers returned to his home town and leased the auditorium of the village school, which was called Union Hall. Captain Bowers then proceeded to make a "real" theatre out of it, and brought to the little country town all attractions which were available at the time, and when they weren't available—road shows were scarce at this time—Captain Bowers put on the old thinking cap and organized a "Histrionic Society," in which all the townfolk with stage aspirations received free tutelage from Bowers and whenever the house threatened to go dark due to lack of attractions the Captain put on the local company. The Captain kept things humming until he opened his new theatre, "City Hall," and the Music Hall, which he managed until 1886, when after being induced into office as Sheriff of the county he turned over the theatre's reins to his son A. A. Bowers, who proceeded to go ahead with the work the Captain had accomplished. It wasn't until 1897 that the two men worked together again, the occasion being the organization of a company and the building of the theatre now known as the Union Opera House, with Captain Bowers installed a manager and A. A. acting as secretary and treasurer, and which they operated successfully until the death of the captain in 1907, at which time A. A. took over the management, holding it until 1920, when the house was sold to its present owners, the Skirboll Brothers, with the stipulation that either A. A. or his son Forney L., having grown up with the theatre and in the town, should become the local managers.



Unfolding the History of a Famous Ohio Theater

New Philadelphia family has had charge of theatre amusements for 63 years and is going strong

By W. Ward Marsh

We could rave on and on about the many things that the Bowers family accomplished out there in New Philadelphia from 1886 until the present time, but we're not here to devote our time to handing out flowery tributes, much as we'd like to, for F. L. Bowers and his forebears certainly deserve them. It takes showmanship, to put across a house that had an established reputation for legitimate shows and went to pictures. And you all know what hellions the old timers were before they became reconciled to movies. You'll notice that big cut on top of this article. Well, that's the reason for our story here. How many of you boys can step out and grab yourself all that space in an established newspaper. Don't say it can't be done because it sure can, and it isn't necessary to have any illustrious forebears to do it. Bowers saw the opportunity for hooking some swell publicity onto his theatre and he jumped at it. Your greatest help any place is the newspapers. IF YOU HELP THEM THEY IN TURN WILL HELP YOU. Keep on friendly terms with them at all times. The live wire manager is able to get most anything from a newspaper. Put on your thinking caps, boys, and let's see what you can do to grab a flock of publicity that will stand as an institutional achievement as well as a box office smash. We've always boasted that the Round Table Club is composed of the finest showmen in the world and when a man like Bowers comes through with a stunt like this we continue to keep on boasting.

We're proud to proclaim Bowers a member of the Club and we're only sorry that we haven't his dad A. A., whose picture appears on the extreme left center of the cut, and his grandfather, the late George W. Bowers, founder of theatrical amusement in New Philadelphia, in the center, on our rolls. While on the right you see the present manager of the Union Opera House and the youngest representative of sixty-three years of progress in showmanship, F. L. Bowers.

Thank you "F. L. for letting us in on this one. We're more than glad to pass it on and we want you to know that not only does it give us a great sense of pride to hear that you're "STILL GOING STRONG," but we feel sure that you're going to continue to keep on "GOING STRONG."

Notice to Members

PLEASE be sure to notify the chairman of any change of address.

Gill Cashes in on Smart Looking Displays for Theatre

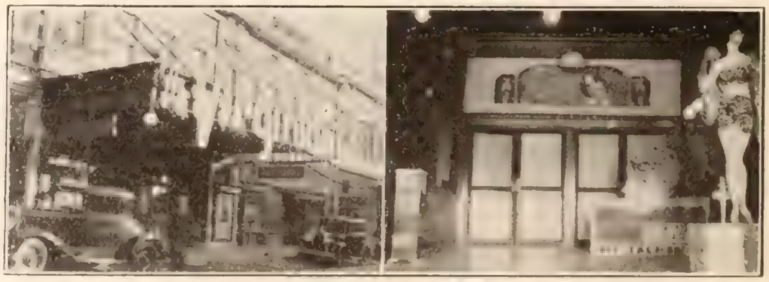
L. O. Gill, manager of the Marshall and Wareham Theatres in Manhattan, Kansas, took a couple of photos of his recent displays, which we are reproducing below.

As you will notice, Gill used some large cutout letters on the front of his marquee for "The Virginian," and has fastened them on by means of slats and made a very attractive "eye-arrester."

The use of slats for fastening on the letters kept expenses down to a minimum and in addition the cutout letters were easily handled, as the whole thing was probably made at the artists, and attached onto the marquee with little trouble.

This type of advertising is not a bad idea, for in the case of a four-change-a-week house a very attractive marquee flash can be erected at practically no cost.

The other photo shows the interior of Gill's lobby, which he has decorated very attractively with cutouts of coming attractions. In the foreground is a life size cutout of a chorus girl as a plug for "Glorifying the American Girl," while in the background a lifesize head cutout of Will Rogers enhances the display's effectiveness.



Thank you, Gill, we're always glad to hear of your activities out there in Manhattan. Let's hear from you again real soon. We were sorry to hear the compositor spelled your name Hill, but we'll get those "typographical errors" straightened out in the future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Keep Your Eye on G. B. Odlum and the Wheeling Capitol

G. B. Odlum, whose name was more or less a fixture on the CLUB pages for many, many months in connection with the Capitol Theatre in Elmira, N. Y., now is firmly entrenched at the Capitol Theatre in Wheeling, West Va., and when "G. B." gets hitting on all cylinders there is no doubting the fact that the other theatres down that way will have to do plenty of stepping to keep up with him.

Some of you boys, especially those out in the middle west, may recall the comment I made about Wheeling on my trip through that part of the country in 1928 when I was very much disappointed in theatrical conditions in general in and around Wheeling. It seems to me that there was plenty in the line of pep and showmanship that could be applied to that town to boost it out of its sleeping-sickness appearance, and to pep up the business in general.

With the coming of the new beautiful Capitol Theatre which justly earned the title of "The Show Place of West Virginia" much was expected but little developed due to various contributing conditions probably the chief angle being the film situation and even at this writing we are not qualified to pass on this particular phase.

This much we will say regardless of what the surrounding phases are that G. B. has to contend with, and that is give him something to work with, let him inject the same pep that has made him outstanding as a showman wherever he has run a theatre, and the house has more than a passing chance to click at the box office, from every conceivable angle.

Greetings, "G. B.," and we want you to know that we appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending us the printed matter and the two for one coupons particularly appealed to us because of its dual angle. First that it will create more business for the theatre, and second it will arm you with a mailing list, a feature of your showmanship that we know will click at the B. O. with the patrons out your way.

Let's have one of your chummy long-hand letters again, so that we will know you haven't forgotten us entirely, and here's hoping that in the not too distant future we get a chance to stop in and shake you by the hand, which will be about the greatest pleasure we can think of at this particular moment.

Billings Booth is Hard at Work in Springfield, Mass

Billings Booth, former city manager of the Princess and Orpheum Theatres in Oxford, N. C., writes in to inform us that he has connected with the Winchester Amusement Co. of Springfield, Mass., as manager of the Jefferson Theatre.

Booth has enclosed one of his program "card heralds," with his letter and we notice that he is already active in Springfield. On the back of the card, which carries copy concerning the prices and giving the sound a "plug," he has printed a "Ladies Free Ticket," which upon presentation of the card admits a lady free on two designated days a week, providing she is accompanied by a person holding a paid admission ticket.

This is a good bet for getting the matinee trade and should react favorably; we're passing it on in case any of our readers would like to try it. It is also valuable since it insures the holding of the program which is on the reverse side of the card, and if the cards are distributed in plenty of time, the box office will benefit.

We want to wish you lots of luck, Billings, and we know that if you continue your activities in the future as in the past everyone will be more than satisfied.

"SCHEDULES"

In the majority of theatres, the house manager is expected to understand enough about theatre operation to make up a time schedule that will best fit the individual needs of the theatre he is running.

The making up of such schedules, in advance of the opening date, must, therefore, means getting as accurate a line on the footages for the particular coming show as is possible.

In this respect, we would call our many members' and readers' attention to the Release Chart in Motion Picture News, immediately following the Club section, which is as near one hundred per cent perfect as is possible.

Use this Chart at all times. Not only will it furnish you with the much needed information on footage, but it will also show just what issue contains the review on each subject. Then, if you are filing your News properly each week, it's a cinch to turn to the issue needed and get correct casts, picture angles and other important data on all subjects released.

We are fortunate in offering a reviewing service that, in many cases, is 'way ahead of the actual release date and you can therefore get the "dope" you want, When You Want It. M.R.T.C.

Joseph Luntz A Peppy Manager and Makes Fine Tie-Ups

Step up, fellows, and meet Joseph Luntz, manager of the Valley Stream Theatre in Valley Stream, L. I., for the Fox Metropolitan chain, who promises to send us in some interesting accounts of his activities and tells us that we may look forward to some peppy stuff from him.

Okay, Luntz; step on it and shoot in the stuff, and it had better be good because from what we have heard of your activities we know that you are the type of showman who can put across an "A No. 1" campaign at a moment's notice, and we learned that the campaign you put out on "Flight" was a wow.

And it's that type of news of your activities that we want to receive every so often from you because we know you have to "step" out there in Long Island to keep up with the rest of the boys whose exploits we record in the pages, too, and we think you're a stepper.

We're happy to see you expressing the spirit of the rest of your outfit and to note that you, too, have decided to fall in line and become an active member of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE.

We want to welcome you into the organization, Luntz, and we're all set and waiting to hear from you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

NOW!!!

You may recall that we told you about Frank Whitbeck and Fox-West Coast's own publication "Now."

In which case we'd have to shout it from the housetops that the "baby" has grown overnight to such an enormous size that you'd be more than surprised. "Now" is the answer to a manager's prayer.

It has everything, including Clara Bow's once famous "It" and is crammed full of just that kind of stuff that the H. M. and P. A. is always looking for in the way of news, advice, exploitation tips, b. o. slants and what have you.

Our hats are off to Harold Franklin's latest "brain-child" born out of Fox-West Coast, by F. W. and we're here to tell the world, cock-eyed or otherwise, that it's a real showman's magazine.

"Chick"

Holden Utilized a Good Idea to Sell This Production

"Guess Who" in this particular instance has no reference to the new parlor game as exemplified by Donald Ogden Stewart in Marion Davies' new picture, "Not So Dumb," but has reference to a contest used by Earle M. Holden in advertising "Show of Shows" playing at the Fairfax Theatre, Miami, Fla.

The Daily News had a large 3 column-eight inches cut of the faces of all the 77 stars appearing in "Show of Shows." A prize of $10 was awarded to the person naming the greatest number of these stars with other prizes in the form of theatre tickets for the runners-up.

The newspaper had three lengthy stories on this stunt in addition to showing the huge three-column cut.

The newspaper contest was also given publicity on the screen in advance as well as on circulars handed out to patrons as they left the theatre.

Good for Earle.

Once again he proves that he is living up to the fine reputation he holds with the Publix Outfit and as far as the ROUND TABLE CLUB is concerned we never tire of hearing about his activities and we are certain that our host of members and readers feel the same when they see his name repeated so often on the CLUB pages in connection with different stunts. You keep sending them, Holden, and we'll keep using them. Oak?

H. E. Stevens Says:

"To miss one edition of the ROUND TABLE CLUB is like missing a good Sunday dinner. And we all hate to do that."

Many Fine Angles Feature Activities Of Mgr. Paul Krier

Manager Paul Krier of the Rialto and Valencia Theatres in Walsenberg, Col., put over a swell campaign on "Welcome Danger," that did much toward swelling the box office receipts at the Valencia Theatre.

At the start of the campaign Krier was fortunate enough to secure the co-operation of the city authorities, due to the fact that "Welcome Danger" opened about two weeks after Christmas and many of the children in town were the happy possessors of roller skates. In fact, there were so many children with roller skates that the Chief of Police and the town board, in order to prevent accidents, issued an edict prohibiting roller skating on the main thoroughfares. Krier immediately tied up with the most desirable store window in town and placed a hospital bed in the window. A boy was then engaged to play sick. A card was placed in the window with copy reading: "DON'T WELCOME DANGER" AS THIS BOY DID ROLLER SKATING ON THE PAVEMENTS. SEE HAROLD LLOYD IN "WELCOME DANGER" AT THE VALENCIA THEATRE." To make this ballyhoo more effective, Krier secured an ambulance and parked it in front of the window. These stunts caused a lot of word-of-mouth advertising in addition to attracting an endless amount of attention. We are reproducing below a picture of Krier's well done window ballyhoo, and also a picture of the ambulance. The entire cost at this stage of the campaign was only $2.45, which covered the painting of a sign and the transporting of the hospital equipment.

As the Valencia derives a large part of its patronage from the miners working in the district, Krier promoted a valuable tie-up with the mines by having placards printed which read: "DON'T WELCOME DANGER by violating these safety rules." And the rest of the copy went on to enumerate the rules devised by the State Mine Inspector. At the bottom of the cards the name and play dates of the attraction were featured in headline type. The cards, through the whole-hearted co-operation of the mine officials were tacked at the entrances, bulletin boards, down in the mines and in every conspicuous spot. The cards were printed in black type on a red background. The newspapers, realizing the news value of this type of safety crusade, gave to the picture and the stunt much free publicity. The cost of pulling this angle on 'Welcome Danger" totaled $15.95, which included printing and distribution of cards.

For a street ballyhoo stunt a large T. N. T. stick was made up and carried about the town by two girls, one girl carrying a large match to correspond with the stick, while a boy walked behind the pair carrying a sign, "WELCOME DANGER—an explosion of LAUGHS at the Valencia." This ballyhoo attracted a great deal of attention and in addition to supplying a number of laughs aided the box office. We are reproducing a picture of the stunt.

Some novel window displays were also arranged by Krier, chief among them being tie-ups with a local dealer whereby a window display of powder cans, painted with the name of the attraction and the theatre, was effected and created a lot of interest. A tie-up with the leading confectioner in town enabled Krier to secure a window and place a placard therein labeled "IF YOU WOULD WELCOME DANGER SAY IT WITH JOHNSON'S CANDY TO ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE." This created a lot of laffs and let the dealer in for some good natured joshing. The entire cost of Krier's complete exploitation campaign was only about twenty-three dollars, which is pretty good exploiting in any man's language, and shows that Krier has an eye for getting a maximum of results at a minimum of cost.

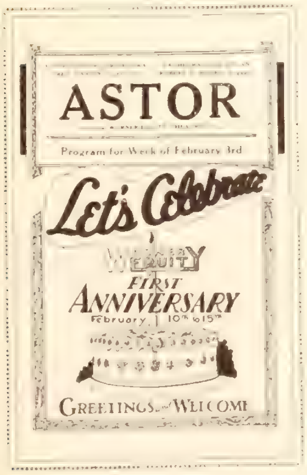
Thank you, Krier, and we know that you and your assistant, Michael Zalensky, must surely have been well pleased with your efforts when you heard of the old cash register jingling its merry tune. And don't forget we want to hear more of your snappy activities out there at the Rialto and Valencia, because when we receive good campaigns like the one you just pulled off we want to pass it along to the boys.

House a Year Old So Paul E. Glase Has Birthday Fete

We can't help but pass comment on the fine anniversary program turned out under the direction of Paul E. Glase, general manager of the Warner Equity Theatres in Reading, Pa., and his happy staff, who have accomplished so many fine showmanship stunts ever since we made their acquaintance through the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages.



ASTOR

Program for Week of February 3rd

Let's Celebrate

Equity

First Anniversary

February 10th to 15th

Greetings—Welcome

We are always glad to hear from the live-wire group of managers and we know that everything that they put across can be used by other members and readers of these pages, regardless of where they are located.

Thanks kindly, Paul, for your thoughtfulness and I want to assure you that anything you send will be more than appreciated as we are anxious to include your contributions regularly on the CLUB pages as frequently as we can get them. Convey our regards to our many friends in Reading and here's hoping we get to see you soon

This anniversary program which we have mentioned above was printed on good, heavy, coated stock and in red and black ink on a glossy white background. As the reproduction shows on the cut with this story it was an invitation to all the theatregoers of Reading to celebrate their first anniversary and we do not doubt that the business created through this and other anniversary plugs made a whole lot at the box-office.

Telephone Gag is Used in Drachman's Exploitation Work

Roy P. Drachman used the old phone stunt to give Clara Bow in "The Saturday Night Kid," playing at the Rialto Theatre, Tucson, Ariz., a wide range of publicity.

Drachman had a number of girls call practically every number in the phone book and they would always ask for a man if a lady happened to answer the phone. And then the girls would sy, "I'm the Saturday Night Kid and I'd like to make a date with you for Saturday night. I'll be at the Rialto. Goodbye."

Of course, every one's interest was aroused and, although many sensed it was a publicity stunt of some kind, it afforded much comment and favorable publicity for the picture.

On day before picture opened, teasers were run on several pages of the paper with picture of Clara holding receiver to ear. Copy in these ads: "I'm the girl that called you. Don't forget our date for tomorrow night at the Rialto. I'm the Saturday Night Kid and expect a big time."

More favorable comment was received from these teaser ads from all parties whether they happened to be one of the persons receiving the phone calls or not.

Business was unusually good throughout the entire run of picture, which is attributed in a large measure to the excellent stunts used in exploiting it.

We must hasten to add to this story that there IS the possibility of a reaction to this type of stuff unless you happen to be so well-set in your town that no one will give you a razz for such exploitation. If everything is "jake," go to it and see if you can't make as much out of it as Roy did. Shoot us some more Drachman, and while you're at it send along one of your own photos so we can give you the proper introduction on the Club pages.

"Sound Advice"

Many recent visits to theatres in and around New York have compelled us to sound another warning to house managers on their apparent oversight regarding the regulation of sound volume in their theatres.

It seems that many of the boys just won't learn the necessity of increasing or decreasing the sound volume depending on the attendance in the theatre and when we called attention to this point to one manager, whom we knew quite well, he replied, much surprised: "Why we set the fader for that subject last night and it was perfect."

Never having set ourselves up as experts in this particular line we don't intend to create any great furore about it, but we pioneered many a sound theatre when the talkies first crashed the b. o. and know from actual experience the importance of watching the control of volume and how vital it is for the proper presentation of sound subjects.

Remember our previous advice dealing with this same subject and you will recall that we took sides with the projectionists because they have only a monitor horn to go by in the booth and even if they were to lean out of one of the booth openings, they are hardly in a good position to gauge the volume from a point so far distant from the screen.

It's the manager's job, in most houses, to watch this phase of his theatre's operation the same as all the other details and so it's up to him to keep the booth instructed as to volume whenever such instructions are necessary.

RIGHT?

This line struck our fancy:

"TO THE MAN WHO DOES NOT KNOW YOU, YOU DO NOT EXIST."

So all you need do is start becoming active in the Managers' Round Table Club, then everyone will know you——AND HOW!

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

January was "Economy Month" on this bustling circuit which may be the reason why discarded cigar butts were much shorter than usual.

A bunch of news gleaned from the paragraphs bearing Tom Olson's by-line, informing of different activities.

HARRY YETTE effected some excellent exploitation at the Liberty Theatre in Herkimer, N. Y., by tieing up with the local "rag" to such effect as to procure free space for the publishing of big "splash" story on "Marianne."

SIM ALLEN, managing the Avon Theatre in Utica, N. Y., pepped up the town with his live wire exploitation on "Sunny Side Up," by having a special electric sign erected on the marquee which lit up the town in a blaze o' glory and attracted considerable comment. A special card reading "Have Your Eggs Sunny Side up and Then See Janet Gaynor in 'Sunny Side Up,'" was distributed in the restaurants throughout the town to great results.

G. DE PAW, manager of the Capital Theatre in Newark, N. Y., by a tie-up with the local ballroom, which featured a "Broadway" dance number that attracted a number of contestants and resulted in some valuable newspaper and ballyhoo publicity for "Broadway." The winners of the dance contest received free passes to the Capital.

C. J. ROSE, managing the Palace Theatre in Oneonta, N. Y., knowing the feminine penchant for John Gilbert's "IT," placed a special cutout of Gilbert's latest picture near the entrance of the Woman's Normal School in the city. This bit of foresight attracted some extra shekels into the Palace's coffers.

From New Jersey, the land of mosquitoes and bootlegger's strongholds we are informed by JULES FIELDS that:

MAURICE BROOKS of Nutley is one of the town's leading Rotarians, which connection enabled him to affect a tie-up with the Rotary Club that resulted in additional "bucks office" on Xmas.

DAN LEE, representing Fox Metropolitan in Bound Brook has received the commendation from the other prominent citizens of the town for the manner in which he disports himself while carrying on William Fox's interest. DAN is a member of the local Moose, and in addition is an Elk, an Owl and a Redman.

METROPOLITAN ACTIVITIES

Gleaned from the Official House Organ "FOX PROGRESS"

FREDDY SCHROEDER, new managing director of the Plaza in Englewood, enjoys the distinction of being an expert on house management. Which doesn't stop him from still being "one of the boys."

BILL MADDEN, who manages which theatre has requisitioned more seats for his theatre in order to hold another Saturday Toy Matinee, the first one going over with such complete success that they were picking kids off the chandeliers.

CLIFF GILL is guiding the publicity destinies of the N. J. chain from his new office in the Monticello Theatre building. And the femme with the pleasant voice who asks, "Whose calling, please?" is DOROTHY SCOTT whom, we note, takes notes for PHIL.

FLOYD VOGHT, at the Broadway Theatre in Nyack, we are informed, is pulling some snappy publicity and exploitation stunts up there. We'd like to hear more of them. How about it FLOYD?

CHARLIE LITT, managing the Levonia Theatre, has recently been elected a member of Levonia's snappy Volunteer Firemen. And just a little while ago he landed a benefit from the "smoke eaters."

FRED SETIN, whose name adorns a two column box shouts out that concerning Brooklyn activities:

MANAGER FRIED, of the Parthenon Theatre, played to a sweet business on "Sweetie." Which is good news and terribly punny. FRIED gave "Sweetie" a lot of advance plugging via his non-synch turntable.

SUPERVISOR STEINMAN celebrated his wedding anniversary and his daughter's birthday on Christmas. Oh, yes, that guy Santy Claus was in on the festivities.

MURRAY WEISER, managing the Glenwood Theatre, secured a tie-up with a local jewelry store which enabled him to give away free a ladies' and man's wrist watch weekly at no cost to the theatre. And in his spare time promoted a tie-up with a radio company who agreed to furnish a radio to be given away free. It's a lucky thing for the Rolls-Royce people that they haven't an agency near the Glenwood.

SUPERVISORS LANGBART AND DAVIS, on Friday the Thirteenth, parked their chariots afront one of the local houses and took the subway to the office. When they returned the cars had vanished. But prestidigitator "Ten Buck" effected a reappearance, though the boys were reluctant to discuss what the Judge said. And LANGBART bears a strong facial resemblance to George O'Brian the movie star.

SYDNEY P. LEVINE, manager of the Congress Theatre, proudly points out that his house harbors ushers who attended college in the day time and at night receive his knowledge procured from the "University of Showmanship." And there's a grand Alma Mater, huh Syd?

MANAGER STOFFER of the Biltmore Theatre used the drug stores as an exploitation medium by tieing up with the pharmacists for the sale of tremendous amounts of Thrift Books.

MANAGER SEED, of the Benson Theatre, who, when his lobby looks bare, calls upon his prolific ingenuity to the extent of attaching himself to all loose cutouts in the various theatre lobby has been officially proclaimed by his colleagues as a man to be feared. Which may account for the sudden nailing down of all advertising matter.

AND fifteen managers and their respective staffs are unanimous in their declarations of CHARLEY STEINMAN'S popularity. WITH CHARLEY'S Mrs. concurring.

JACK HOBBY gives us the low down on the Queens' boys by writing:

MANAGERS BURKE AND BINSTOCK of the Meserole and Broadway Theatres respectively staged Gift Night's with success being inscribed in both box offices.

JOHN HEINZ, managing the Forest Hills Theatre, secured a personal appearance of Homer Croy, author of "They Had to See Paris," in connection with that picture's showing. Croy sprang a surprise by bringing Fred Stone, stage star, with him. Both men did a bit on the stage. Box office receipts swelled considerably.

With Long Island activities being sounded by HARRY DAVEY we are informed via his column that:

FRED WEILER, managing the Roosevelt Theatre, secured reams on newspaper publicity by a tie-up he affected with the Flushing Journal, whereby a Junior Club under the sponsorship of the newspaper which yearly ran a theatre party for members who had met the Club's requirements during the year. Weiler sold the paper the idea of holding the party at the Roosevelt this year with the result that hundreds of children who had never been in the Roosevelt were introduced to its policy, and the theatre secured some excellent publicity.

TOM LORENZO, handling the Cove Theatre in Glen Cove, was on the "qui vive" to the extent of having motion pictures taken showing the annual gridiron clash of the local amateur football gladiators, and projecting them at the Cove, for extra business, with the newspapers giving it a plug.

JOE LUNZ, manager of the Valley Stream, procured a nice tie-up by arranging with the local airport at Curtis Field whereby he obtained various plane parts and arranged an interesting lobby exhibit which included a parachute formerly the property of "Lindy" and in addition to the display flew a number of "Flight" banners on the aircraft hangars.

BOB HUTCHINSON, manager of the Lynbrook Theatre, arranged a fine lobby display for the holidays by building a fireplace on one side of the lobby with an imitation fire log supplying the "heat," and a few chairs and rugs for atmosphere. A novel touch was added by having a man dressed as Santa Claus sitting in one of the chairs greeting the children.

BENNETT BRANDON, managing the Great Neck Playhouse, in conjunction with the local charities arranged a special matinee for crippled children from nearby towns. The kiddies were transported to the theatre by bus. A special program was shown. When the kiddies left the theatre, tired but happy, their faces were smeared and their hands sticky with candy, the gift of the local merchants. Brandon's stunt did much to promote good will, with plenty of front page newspaper publicity the result.

WE COMMEND THEIR LINES: "YOU ARE KNOWN BY WHAT YOU DO! NOT BY WHAT YOU CAN DO!"

"THE ATTITUDE TOWARD THE JOB IS JUST AS IMPORTANT AS THE APTITUDE FOR THE JOB."

WHICH IS DARN FINE "HORSE SENSE" IN ANY SHOWMAN'S LANGUAGE.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Ackery is a Peppy Canadian Showman Here's Reason Why

Our good friend, I. F. W. (Ack) Ackery, manager of the Dominion Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., Canada, continues to show his marvelous CLUB spirit by reason of the details of his activities.

His latest contribution showed us how he went about exploiting that tough baby "Disraeli."

There's no denying the fact that here is a corking good picture, but one that calls for every ounce of showmanship and tact in the handling of it from the beginning of its booking until the end of its run, and every showman who has succeeded in putting it over with any degree of success, has only done so by injecting some unusual slant into his campaign that created interest in the type of picture that "Disraeli" happens to be.

Ack used his showman's dome by extending an invitation to a private screening which was attended by the press, clergy and many other prominent people of Vancouver and their word of mouth advertising about the picture itself certainly did no harm at the B. O.

In addition, Mr. Ackery succeeded in putting across a tie-up with the Vancouver "Star" for an essay contest about the attraction for boys and girls in the community up to 18 years of age. The main idea was that they had to see the picture and then write a 500 word essay on Mr. Arliss's work as Disraeli. He was successful in grabbing some editorial space in addition to the regular newspaper clippings, several of which he so kindly sent to us so as to show us how the thing went over, as well as the newspaper reproduction of the silver loving cup which was awarded to one of the winners in connection with the contest.

At this time we want you to see a most beautiful and dignified window-display on this attraction which Mr. Ackery succeeded in putting across in one of the leading jewelry stores in town. The spot, incidentally, where this jeweler is located is one of the most prominent in the city and naturally created a tremendous amount of interest in both the attraction and the theatre.

Good work, Ack, but nothing more than we would expect from a showman of your calibre. Give our best regards to the rest of the Canadian boys out your way, and remember we are still watching the mail every day for further word of you and the things you are doing up there in Vancouver.

Serials and the Kids

We've been trying to urge every reader of these pages to give more thought to the matter of serials and kiddie business.

Only the other day an exhibitor from a town not far from New York was in to see us and remarked that his kiddie business for a Saturday averaged him about 45 youngsters.

After prevailing upon his superiors to book him a serial and backing it up with the proper publicity his kiddie business for this one afternoon a week has jumped to over eight hundred.

Allowing for still more improvement on this phase of his business, it is very evident that the kiddie business has become highly profitable for this one theatre.

An extra Western for Saturday or Sunday afternoons, plus a good live serial will pay you bigger dividends in increased b.o. receipts than any other single medium we can think of at the moment.

Raymond L. Moss is Sure Boosting Up Interest in Shows

We are in receipt of some interesting information concerning the activities of Richard L. Moss, manager of the Fox Raymond Theatre in Pasadena, California, setting forth some of his interesting campaign on "Big News," for which he secured some valuable publicity. Moss invited the newsboys of the Pasadena Star-News to attend as his guests for the showing of the picture. The boys all showed up in full force and the Star-Times co-operated by publishing a picture and stories of the youngsters as well as carrying a story setting forth the novel "direct second-run picture policy," perhaps the first idea of its kind which has just been inaugurated at the Raymond.

In addition to tie-up with the newspaper and its carriers, Moss distributed heralds in the form of a tabloid paper throughout the town, with the regular "newsies," giving them out with the real newspaper. A contest was run in the local paper offering a prize of theatre tickets for the best news stories submitted to Moss. A "different" kind of newspaper reader was run in the paper, which we think is good enough to reproduce in type below, and if run on the "family page" of a paper will undoubtedly bring results in addition to causing a few chuckles.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Good for Cohen!"

"We're glad to be able to announce at this time that Sam H. Cohen, former Publicity Director of the Elsinore Theatre in Salem, Ore., has hooked up with the R.K.O. publicity department under the able guidance of Jimmie Carrier and his crew of go-getters, in the Pacific Northwest. Sam has been assigned to handle publicity at the Orpheum Theatre in Portland Oregon, under the divisional supervision of Joe Cooper. And knowing Sam's record at the Elsinore we feel sure that he is going to continue the great work for the R.K.O. outfit.

Just to make sure that you will keep stepping, Sam, we want you to know that we're waiting for that stuff you promised to send us on the first two pictures you exploited and if you'll include a batch of photos with your material we'll be glad to pass the ideas onto the rest of the boys, if they merit the attention you claim they do.

Keep up the good work, Sam, and working with men like Jimmie Carrier and Joe Cooper, we know that if you deserve a boost you'll get it. Lots of luck and let's hear from you real soon.

Harry is Piling Up Wealth of Big City Experience

The gentleman whom we are introducing with his photograph with this little story is by no means a newcomer to the ROUND TABLE CLUB or its pages.

Harry Lewis, whom we first knew at the Culver Theatre in Brooklyn, is now at the Fox Mt. Eden Theatre and from all reports and indications is putting over his job with a large degree of success.

Some of you fellows may recall the "Doctor's Secret" and other plugs that he successfully put over, including the fine looking Court Summons for "On Trial" as well as many of his other activities, all of which were set forth at various times on these pages, and in introducing him via his own picture in this article, we do so with the fond hope that he will again become an active member in the ROUND TABLE CLUB and that his contributions will be featured on these pages as frequently in the future as they were in the past.

Let's hear from you again, Harry, and by all means, drop in and say "hello" the next time you are down our way.

Here's Ken Hayden Who Will Make a Peppy Club Member

Here's another new personality demanding recognition on the CLUB pages, boys. We want you to meet Ken Hayden, peppy manager of the St. Albans Theatre in St. Albans, L. I.

As Hayden has always been an interested observer of the gang's doings, we feel sure that now he is one of us we are going to be able to pass along some mighty interesting things concerning his doings at the St. Alban house.

We don't want to hand any stray compliments out before we see what Hayden can do but we've got a hunch that he'll come right up to tap and put that cozy little house of his over very successfully.

It makes us feel mighty proud, Hayden, to know that Monty MacLevy is right behind you, and when Monty gives you a sendoff we're pretty certain of knowing that the man he recommends has got something.

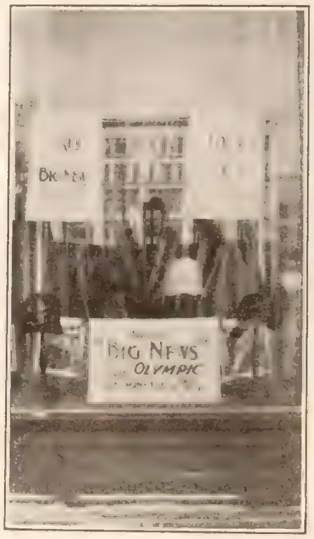
We're glad to welcome you into the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB. And we want you to know that we're waiting to hear from you. And when you send us your next letter we wish you'd enclose a photograph of yourself so that we can let the rest of the boys see what you look like.

Tierney Sells Show From Dept. Store's Window; Good Biz

We're very glad to know that F. W. Tierney, manager of the Olympic Theatre in Watertown, New York, for Fox Metropolitan, is getting along fine up there.

Tierney worked up some nice exploitation stunts on a couple of pictures which resulted in bringing box office receipts up a little higher than usual.

On the "Kibitzer" he distributed a card about the size of a playing card, which bore copy certifying that the holder was a member in good standing of the "Kibitzer's Union" and entitled the bearer to butt in on any conversation, card game, golf, billiards, etc., and permitted him to stand behind card players, advise them, help losers cry and use their handkerchiefs to wipe away his tears. On the reverse side of the card copy carried the name of the theatre and the play date of "Kibitzer" in addition to announcing a special midnight showing of the picture.



We also noted, with satisfaction, that on the bottom of the card a footnote bore the announcement that anyone attending the "Mighty," which preceded the "Kibitzer," was permitted to view the midnight show of the new picture as the guest of the management. This is the kind of thoughtfulness that eventually ends up with the securing of a whale of a lot of good will and its subsequent increase in patronage. Good work, Tierney.

The photograph we are reproducing with this story shows one of the displays which Tierney arranged in the window of the town's largest department store. The store is one of a chain, located in various upstate cities and prior to his "Big News" tie-up Tierney had been trying vainly to secure their co-operation. After much persuasion on Tierney's part they finally gave in and consented to let him have a crack at a tie-up. Tierney offered a pass to the Olmpic with every hat sold, and the thing clicked like a million. The store manager, Tierney informs us, is now very anxious to permit the use of his windows for exploitation.

That's fine, Tierney, and we know that Tom Olson is just as well pleased as we are to hear of your activities at the Olympic, and you'll sure make good up there if you continue your go-getting activities.

Garfinkle Proved That Local Tie-Ups Can Be Engineered

Whenever any one tries to tell you that newspaper co-operation and other sorts of tie-ups are an impossibility in the big city neighborhoods, just turn to one of your issues of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB section of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and look up some of the past activities of Harold Garfinkle, the former live-wire resident manager of the Avalon Theatre in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn.

We have from time to time set forth some of the unusual campaigns which he so successfully engineered on various attractions in this theatre, by reason of merchant tie-ups and other forms of co-operative stunts which reacted favorably not only for the theatre and the box office, but the merchants as well. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why Harold is as capable as his experience has proven him to be.

We show here a reproduction of a page from the Flatbush Observer, a weekly tabloid which is distributed with quite a large circulation in the neighborhood of the Avalon Theatre and the head with the big "IF" calls attention to the fact that if your name is listed in one of the ads, you will receive a free pass for two to see the picture.

Incidentally, in connection with this tie-up, we would call attention to the fact that the newspaper furnished the theatre with 5,000 copies of this tabloid which they were able to use for their own mailing list as well as for distribution purposes, and when everything is taken into consideration, including the free ad in the middle of the page, it is certainly something worth complimenting Garfinkle on, and we like to be the first to do so.

Unquestionably, the Century Circuit was lucky in having a man of Garfinkle's type because of his ability to create so much good-will in any theatre where he is located, and if your memory serves you in good stead you will recall some of the fine stunts he put over by co-operating with Parents Associations in the schools while he was at the Midwood Theatre for the same Circuit.

We should certainly like to know a whole lot more about Harold's future doings, and he may be assured that these pages will always offer a hearty welcome to anything that he cares to contribute.

Hamer is Making 'Em Click Up There In Adrian, Mich.

We are in receipt of a most interesting photograph showing how Ellsworth Hamer, manager of the Crosswell & Family Theatres in Adrian, Mich., fixed up the front of the Crosswell Theatre to ballyhoo the showing of Harold Lloyd in "Welcome Danger."

We agree with Mr. Hamer that the photo really does not do justice to the display as it was taken during a raging snowstorm and it is so blurred that we find it absolutely to reproduce it with any degree of sharpness in connection with this story.

At any rate, we do want you to know that Ellsworth made quite an affair of the showing of this picture, and in addition to the front dressing of the Crosswell Theatre, he put on the top of the marquee a large cutout of Lloyd taken from the 24 sheet. Banners were strung around the marquee announcing the picture and the electric sign was also called into play to do its share in selling the stunt to the public.

Mr. Hamer has been engineering some unusually fine stuff in the past few months out there in Adrian and it is our fond hope that he will keep us posted a good deal more in the future than he has in the past, but we know he has been kind of busy and must therefore overlook his negligence to his brother members in the ROUND TABLE CLUB.

So long, Ellsworth, and let's hope that you get around to writing us every other week or so. How about it?

SERVICE

One of the main factors in bringing your patrons back, in addition to selling them on the screen is your house service. Have you made your patrons stay as pleasant as possible and imbued in them the sense of time well spent? No? Then perhaps there's something wrong with your service.

SERVICE IS A VERY DELICATE PART OF YOUR THEATRE. It is useless to enumerate its many important branches on these pages at this time. Our purpose is to discuss one of the paramount components of service, COURTESY. For in COURTESY lies one of your reasons for making your patrons come back.

The usher staff in nearly all of our theatres today is composed of boys; boys who with the thoughtlessness of youth are unwittingly DISCOURTEOUS.

THAT IS WHAT YOU MUST GUARD AGAINST!

Impress upon your ushers the value of courtesy towards selling your shows. Let them see what important factors they are in the theatre. SHOW THEM THE POTENT VALUE OF A "THANK YOU" AND A "SIR" OR "MADAM".

Their adolescent minds are not capable of grasping the responsibilities which rest upon their shoulders, thus they must be shown,

AND SHOWN IN SUCH A MANNER THAT THE LESSONS WILL STICK.

Thoughtlessness on the part of a youngster who has lost patience with a patron whom he imagines is too overbearing has often cost the theatre that patron's next visit.

We know that the youngster has many exasperating questions put to him all day long—we know that at times the patron is unjust—we know what the boy does not—that he is carrying a MAN'S JOB ON A BOY'S SHOULDERS—but if YOU have instilled in the youngster that same spirit of NEVER SAY DIE that YOU as a REAL SHOWMAN typify, it'll enable him to CARRY ON in the face of all obstacles. He'll GRIN AND BEAR IT and with a SMILE keep on GIVING HIS BEST AS YOU ARE DOING—and be ready always to admit, no matter how hard it may seem to be at times, that: THE PATRON IS ALWAYS RIGHT.

OKE?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

'Plane Exploitation Built Biz. For Irving Cohen

Irving Cohen derived a wealth of publicity for "They Had to See Paris" playing at the State Theatre, Omaha, Neb., when he arranged to have the film shipped by aeroplane.

First, Cohen tied up with the Aviation Co. who operate and maintain a flying field in Omaha. Then he made arrangements with the local exchange for two dupe cans of films which were lettered, "Will Rogers in THEY HAD TO SEE PARIS." Cohen's next step was selling the newspaper the idea that the Will Rogers' picture would be sent to the State Theatre by aeroplane—arriving at the field about noon the opening day of the picture.

The newspaper came through with a nice story on the stunt on the day of opening of picture.

The above photo shows Ethel B. Good of the Publix Omaha Office and Manager Irving Cohen of the State Theatre in Omaha, Neb., unloading the "films" from the airplane that brought the film cans to town. Read the rest of the story for complete details on this fine, inexpensive stunt.

The film cans were put in the plane and the plane circled over the city for about ten minutes dropping circulars having reference to the picture. The name of Will Rogers was painted on the bottom of the wings of the plane which could be easily seen as the plane flew at a low altitude.

On landing at the flying field, the film cans were put in waiting Pontiac cars which were bannered appropriately. Led by a police car the cars (four of them) were rushed to the theatre—arriving there just in time to put the show on.

During the morning, the phone was ringing almost constantly—people inquiring if the film had gotten in.

All the stunt cost was the painting of the banners, printing of heralds and the passing out of a few heralds.

William Evans Says:

"I am in receipt of my Certificate of Membership in the CLUB, and wish to think you for same. I have hung it in my office alongside of other notable certificates, thereby proving that I am indeed proud to be a member of such a worthy organization."

Watch Out for A. R. Nininger's Activities in Future

We are glad to list as one of our new members, Mr. A. R. Nininger, who at the present time rules over the destinies of the E. J. Sparks Theatres in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. We are certain that Mr. Nininger is a mighty fine showman and has many good suggestions to offer to the boys if we can only stimulate him to the point where he will want to send them in to us.
